Toronto University Library

Presented by

Messrs. Macmillan & Co.

through the Committee formed in

The Old Country

to aid in replacing the loss caused by

The late war in the various libraries in the United States.
LIVY

BOOKS XXI. AND XXII.

HANNIBAL'S FIRST CAMPAIGN IN ITALY.

EDITED

WITH INTRODUCTIONS, NOTES, APPENDICES, AND MAPS,

BY THE

REV. W. W. CAPES,
FELLOW OF HERTFORD COLLEGE, AND READER IN ANCIENT HISTORY, OXFORD.

London:
MACMILLAN AND CO.
AND NEW YORK.
1889

[The Right of Translation is reserved.]
Printed by C. J. CLAY, at the University Press, Cambridge, August 1878.
Reprinted 1879, 1880, 1881, 1883, 1884, 1887, 1889.
PREFACE.

The text of Livy which is here adopted is a reprint of Madvig's, whose Emendationes Livianae discuss most of the important variations from the common text. To that work therefore reference is made when Madvig's authority or arguments are mentioned in the notes.

In matters of Latinity the commentary of Fabri, as enlarged by Heerwagen, has been found most useful, especially the illustrations drawn from Latin authors. Weissenborn's notes for German schools are quoted only (as W) when they contain information which is not to be found in earlier commentators.

In questions of etymology most stress is laid upon the views of Corssen in his Aussprache, Vocalismus, u. Betonung der Lateinischen Sprache.
For the subjects treated specially in the Introductions and Appendices the chief authorities are in each case mentioned; others have often been referred to, but it has not been thought desirable to crowd the notes with names.

Bramshott,
August, 1878.
CONTENTS.

| Introduction I. The Early History of Carthage and the Antecedents of the Second Punic War | ix |
| Introduction II. The Authorities for the History of the Second Punic War | xxxii |
| Introduction III. On the Language and Style of Livy | xlv |
| Introduction IV. The Text and Orthography of Livy | lvi |
| Chronological Summary | 1 |
| Livii Liber XXI. | 72 |
| Livii Liber XXII. | 149 |
| Notes | 307 |
| Appendix I. On the Route of Hannibal | 316 |
| Appendix II. Excursus on the Roman Religion in Relation to the Prodigies in Livy XXI. 62 and XXII. 10 | 320 |
| Appendix III. On the Character of C. Flaminius | 323 |
| Index Nominum et Locorum |
ADDENDA.

Page 154, line 4 from the end, after 'comitia' add Cic. Mur. 18. 38, tanta illis comitiis religio est ut adhuc semper omen valuerit praerogativum.

, 156, line 34, after 'good will' add or, 'his likeness to his father was but the least influence', &c., i.e. was only the least among many influences.

, 176, line 27, after 'Greek' add (opt. with &r), and after 'Latin' add cf. use of crediderim, ausim.

, 186, line 4 from the end, add a note ad Mutinam, ad= to the neighbourhood of, cf. above § 3 Mutinam confugerint, i.e. inside of.

, 191, line 24, for 'Nor could S.' read 'S. could not' and after &c. add 'and H. was' &c.

, 211, line 7 from the end, add note § 4 indignitas, perhaps 'a sense of the heinousness'.

, 226, line 14, after 'endurance' add cf. Tac. Hist. II. 4. 6, quantum illis roboris discrimina et labor, tantum his vigoris addiderat integra quies.

, 243, line 31, add note cohibentem=cohibendi causa, an imitation of a Greek idiom, cf. use of circumspectans 23. 10.

, 246, line 8 from end, add after acceptæ and the more probable receptæ (=withdrawn).

, 251, line 5 from end, add Verg. Æn. 1. 33, tantæ molis erat, &c.

, 259, line 22, add after videam cf. use of περιοπώ.

, 270, line 12, for 'was not' read 'would probably not have been'.

, 285, line 11 from end, add note demum='only when' or 'not till'.

The thanks of the editor are due to S. Bloxsidge, Esq., for suggestions on these and other points.
INTRODUCTION. 1.

In the earliest times of which history can take account we find the traces of an active trade in the Mediterranean waters which was mainly in the hands of the Phœnician merchants. The enterprising race which peopled the narrow strip of Canaan hemmed in between the mountains and the sea, soon found out its vocation in the carrying trade of the prehistoric world. Its colonists pushed their way along the coast of Asia Minor, and through the isles of the Ægean, planting their factories on every favoured spot, and opening up the mineral wealth or purple fisheries of the countries on their way; their interchange of national products gave the first stimulus to the energy of many a backward race, while their merchant navy probably supplied the wants of the great land.

* Compare especially Polybius, Book i.; Heeren, Carthaginians; Movers, Phœnizier; Lenormant, Manuel d'Histoire Ancienne.

C. L.
power of Egypt, bringing together the scattered elements of tin and copper to be combined by the industrial arts of the early age of bronze. The course of these Phoenician adventurers was directed almost wholly by the interests of trade, but on the Northern coast of Africa their colonies assumed another character. There were indeed some early settlements from Sidon on the shore, as at Hippo and at Cambe, but these were probably of little note, till larger streams of immigrants appeared, who, unlike the rest, betook themselves to the interior, and lived an agricultural life. There is reason to believe that they were Canaanites from the inland, dispossessed perhaps by Israel under Joshua from the country on the North of Palestine, and guided from the ports of Sidon to their new homes by pilots already familiar with the country. Here they may have found some kindred races, peoples of the Hittite stock, who had spread from Egypt in the period known as that of the invasion of the Shepherd dynasties. The new comers mingled with the native Libyans, and from their union in the course of ages grew the numerous populations found in later times in Zeugitana and Byzacene, and known as a mixed race by the name of Liby-phœnicians.

When Sidon fell before a sudden onset of the Philistines in B.C. 1209, Tyre stepped into her place, as the chief power of the Phoenician league, which took up henceforth a more decided policy in the far West.
INTRODUCTION. I.

In the neighbourhood of the Ægean the Carian pirates and the Ionian traders were as enterprising as themselves, and one after another their factories had to be deserted, or fell into their rivals' hands, but in the West they came only into contact with less civilized races, who had no navy on their seas, and felt little jealousy of the modest settlements upon their coasts. First they planted the important town of Utica, and coasting thence they pushed across to Gades, where, attracted by the mines and other wealth of Southern Spain—the Tarsis of traditional fancy—they made a chain of factories and forts along the shores up to and even beyond the Pyrenees, not forgetting to gain a foothold upon the neighbouring islands, and Sardinia above all. But rapid as was the progress of these colonies, they were all of them eclipsed by the brilliant fortunes of a younger sister. Some noble refugees from Tyre, flying under the guidance of Elissar, Vergil's Dido, settled on the almost deserted site of the old Sidonian Cambe, near the centre of the great basin formed by the gulf of Tunis. There they resolved to make a home, and built themselves a stronghold which they called 'a new city,' Kirjath-Hadéschath, known to the Latins as Carthago (b.c. 872). The energy, and wealth, and powerful connections of the emigrants secured for the new settlement a rapid start in social progress; its happy site between the rich corn lands of the Bagradas, and the splendid anchorage of its natural harbours, seemed to mark out for it a career of supremacy in trade; while there were many possible allies and friends in the kindred communities upon the neighbouring coasts, or in the Liby-phœnicians of the main land. With such consciousness of growing strength they could not long maintain the humble attitude towards the native races, which is typified in the tradition of the tribute paid for the ground on which the city had been built. Forced therefore before long into collision with the Libyan peoples, they forsook the old Phœnician policy which shrank from territorial conquests, save on islands or projecting headlands; step by step they pushed their way into the interior, annexing wide tracts of cultivated soil, and driving back the Nomad tribes into their deserts.

Other causes also tended to force them into a career of imperial ambition. When Tyre was ruined by Nabuchodorosser, her colonies in the far West, in Sicily, Sardinia, Africa, and Spain, were thrown unprepared upon their own resources. The native races rose against them, the jealous Greeks seized the moment of their rivals’ weakness, and there was nothing for it but to look round for timely aid or perish. They turned in their despair to Carthage, their vigorous and wealthy sister: she in her turn took up the legacy bequeathed by Tyre, and found a colonial empire ready made. But she had to fight hard to maintain it. War-navies were needed to keep her hold upon the distant islands: Liby-phœnicians were drilled and armed and sent as colonists to secure the mines of Southern Spain, endangered by the native tribes. Their old enemies, the Greeks, meanwhile were making steady progress. Much of the coast line of Sicily was in their hands, Phœcean colonies were planted on the shores of Gaul, as at Massilia, and on the North-East of Spain, and nearer home in Africa, the prosperous Cyrene was soon to trouble them with rivalry and war; Carthage accepted the defiance, and engaged as in a duel that must be fought out to the bitter end. After a hard-fought struggle she checked the advance of the Phœcean colonists, destroyed one after another of their towns, and swept their navies from the sea, even forcing humbled Massilia to submit to see a Punic factory rise within sight of its port, some trace of which was found a few years since in a tariff of the sacrifices to be used in Baal's temple, as sanctioned by the magistrates of Carthage. With Cyrene she disputed merely the paramount lordship over the Libyan races, but after long hostilities they found that in that wide continent there was room enough for a separate career for each, and agreed upon a frontier line, to which tradition gave the name of the altars of the Philæni, from a romantic legend of the self-devotion of the arbitrators sent from Carthage.

But on the other hand the Greeks of Sicily stood resolutely at bay; time after time great armaments from Carthage landed in the island, enough as it might seem to sweep away all before them, and many of the old cities were ruined in the course of the long struggle, but Syracuse, weakened as she was, was able to the last to make head against her ancient enemy, driving her back sometimes to a little corner of the North-West, once even carrying the war to the very doors of Carthage, and at last only dropping it when Rome was there to take it up with greater might.

Meanwhile the power of Carthage was growing to the fulness of its stature. Though unable to conquer Sicily entirely, she had tightened her grasp upon the islands near it. Sardinia was wholly hers, and she ruled it with such skill and wise economy that after three centuries of tenure she left large parts of it a fair and fruitful garden, to become afterwards, in the hands of other masters, waste and wild.

The Balearic isles formed convenient stepping stones across the sea to Spain, whose coasting trade she now possessed without a rival. Along the continent of Africa she stretched her arms, making or strengthening on the fringe of Mauretania a long line of forts, known as the Metagonitae; her surplus population was drafted off in numerous colonies, which spread the civilized arts of peace in the interior, and drove further back the clouds of Nomad savagery. At home she opened up the resources of her fertile country, making husbandry and irrigation matters of scientific study, so that even the Roman senate in a later age thought her books on agriculture worthy of translation. Abroad, she guided the streams of trade to every quarter, now opening up relations with the heart of Africa by means of caravans, now turning to account in Spain the old Phœnician skill in mining, now with daring enterprise exploring regions hitherto unknown.

Of two such attempts especially we have some detailed accounts. One called the Periplus of Hanno was a long coasting voyage along the South-West of Africa to about the 8th degree of latitude, conducted by the order of the State with a fleet of 60 vessels. On his return the admiral drew up a report officially, which was consigned to the archives in the temple of Baal, and part of it is still extant in a Greek translation. We may still perhaps distinguish in his narrative the crocodiles of Senegal, the sweet-scented forests of Cape Verde, the lofty mountains of Sierra Leone, and the fantastic forms of the Gorillas, so called from a faulty reading of a passage in the Periplus. The second enterprise under Himilco was directed along the coast of Portugal and Gaul, and thence across to the Cassiterides or Scilly Isles, at which Phœnician adventure in olden times had stopped in its quest for tin, but from which the Carthaginians pushed on to the neighbouring shores of Cornwall and of Ireland.
It is time perhaps to turn from such romantic tales of early navigation to inquire what was the nature of the first relations between this Queen of Western Trade and Rome. The earliest historic datum is furnished by the treaty in Polybius (iii. 22), which was concluded in the year after the expulsion of the Tarquins (b.c. 509), and the archaic terms of which in the original Latin were scarcely intelligible in the days of the historian. The Carthaginians on their side pledged themselves not to disturb any of the subjects or allies of Rome, not to hold any fortress or attack a town in Latium, while Rome covenanted for herself and her allies not to sail or trade in Africa beyond the headland to the West of Carthage. Sicily was to be a neutral ground for commerce, in which both were to enjoy like rights.

The treaty points to the increasing enterprise of the Italian traders which stirred so soon the jealousy of Carthage, and to the corsairs of the latter power whose visits were dreaded even then in the Tyrren- nian waters, as when they combined with the Etrus- cans to crush the Phocæans of Alalia.

A century afterwards a second treaty (b.c. 347) opened the markets of Rome and Carthage to each other, but the former was not to trade in Libya or Sardinia, the latter was to spare the subject-soil of Rome from piracy and damage. Carthage spoke in this case in the name of Utica and of the free Tyrian peoples. This treaty closed to Roman traders many of the ports which the former had left open, and therefore marked the jealous policy of Carthage, which hoped to monopolize the sources of her wealth.

A third treaty in the time of Pyrrhus (B.C. 279) provided for an alliance of an offensive and defensive nature in which Carthage was to lend its fleet, but maintained the restrictions on free trade. So far it has been seen that Sicily was regarded as commercially a neutral ground between the powers, but it was soon to be their battle field. The long struggle for the possession of the island had greatly weakened Syracuse and ruined most of the Greek cities. One of the few that were still left standing, Messana, was seized by a lawless band of Campanian soldiers turned freebooters, who followed a course that had been popular of late at Rhegium and elsewhere. There they were soon attacked by Hiero, who, first as general, then as king, had lately trained to order the turbulent populace of Syracuse, and revived the dignity of the Sicilian Greeks. Hard pressed by the besiegers the Mamertini, 'men of Mars,' as the free lances called themselves, could only baffle Hiero by turning to Carthage or to Rome, and rival parties in the city made overtures to each. The former was first upon the scene, and her soldiers in the citadel. But Rome who had sternly punished a like act of Campanian treachery at Rhegium, and was besides in league with Hiero the avenger, could not turn her back on the temptation of gaining a footing on the soil of Sicily, with a safe passage in the straits. She enrolled the Mamertines as her allies, and sent a general to the rescue, who by dexterous use of wiles and force ousted the Carthaginians from Messana. So began the first Punic war (B.C. 264), the first act in a long tragedy of bloodshed.

The steady infantry of the Romans swept before it the motley gatherings of mercenaries brought against them in the field, and Hiero, who had little to hope except a choice of masters, changed sides after a campaign or two, and joined the stronger, whose success he dreaded least. But the war in Sicily could not be decided by hard fighting on the open field. A period of slow sieges followed, and Rome's success was more than balanced by the fleets of privateers which ravaged the coasts of Italy and ruined all its trade, while Carthage was mistress of the seas. Then Rome decided to create a navy. She could not raise at once skilled sailors to manœuvre with precision, and more than one great fleet was lost by the rashness or inexperience of her captains: but she could so build as to enable them to grapple and board each ship that came alongside, and to decide the battle by sheer weight of discipline and numbers. Her navy so constructed swept the seas, and landed her legions under Regulus almost within sight of Carthage, but the rash confidence of general and senate while dictating haughty terms of peace kept the weakened army long inactive, to be crushed at length by overpowering numbers. The well-aimed blow failed utterly, and fresh disasters followed, as fleet after fleet was wrecked by storms, or sunk, or taken by the enemy, till Rome sullenly withdrew from her adventurous policy upon the sea, and confined herself to drawing closer the besieging lines round Drepane and Lilybæum, and the little corner of the North-West of Sicily in which the Carthaginians lay entrenched. But now her fortune seemed to fail her even there, for a commander of genius confronted her. Hamilcar Barca (Barak, lightning) drilled his crowd of fighting-men into an army worthy of its leader; trained them in a war of outposts to withstand the onset of the legions; found natural strongholds first at Ercte then at Eryx, where safe within his lines he could defy attack, so long as the approach by sea was in his grasp.

So years passed away and victory seemed no nearer, while the trade of Italy was ruined and the treasury was exhausted.

But the spirit of the citizens rose higher as the star of Rome's fortunes seemed to sink. Wealthy volunteers came forward with the offer of a fleet, built and equipped at their expense, to make one more bold stroke for possession of the seas. Rome was once more a naval power. The Carthaginians, unprepared for energy so great, had neglected to keep up their navy; the convoys and the transports hastily despatched with the supplies for the Sicilian forts, scantily equipped and badly handled, made a poor show of resistance to the admiral Lutatius, whose victory off Ægusa crushed for the present all the naval power of Carthage (b.c. 241). The blow was quite decisive. Hamilcar with all his brilliant genius could not hold his highland fortress without access to the sea, and the door had been abruptly closed. At home there were no ships in the arsenals to send him, there was no army except his, there were no levies to meet the legions who might land within sight of Carthage.

They had suffered probably far less than their enemy, to whom the war had caused a fearful loss of men and money: but they were in no heroic mood, and Hamilcar was forced to offer submission in their name. The terms of peace were moderate enough. Sicily had to be surrendered, and a war-contribution to be paid, which was raised from 2000 to 3200 talents, when commissioners were sent from Rome to supersede Lutatius and to conclude a definitive treaty. Carthage was left a sovereign power, though bound as was Rome itself by the condition, that neither should deal separately with the dependent allies of the other.

It may be well to gather up some of the lessons of the war. It had been proved first that Carthage was no match for Rome in calm and pertinacious vigour. Her resolution was thrown into the shade by the energy with which Rome first created a war navy, and struggled on while fleet after fleet perished by untoward fate, and hostile privateers swept her coasts of merchant shipping. Phœnician enterprise was overmatched on its own element; first it failed in power of speedy adaptation to the new conditions of the times; next it neglected to put forth all its strength to keep the advantage it had gained.

For Carthage was essentially a trading power, as such it hankered after a policy of peace, and only fitfully encouraged its dreams of imperial ambition.

Secondly, there was a difference in the position of the general in chief of the two states. The commander of the legions was a statesman or a party leader transferred suddenly into the camp; like every Roman, he had had a soldier's training, but when his wealth, or birth, or civil services, or powerful connections had raised him to the highest rank of consul, he had yet to prove his fitness for supreme command. He might leave his mark on history in one short campaign, but the brave rank and file had often cause to rue his inexperience or rash ambition. The single year of office was far too short for a good general, and too long for a bad one. At Carthage the profession of a soldier was often special and life-long. The able man, once found, continued long in office, and could carry out a policy of patient genius like that of Hamilcar, though unlucky blunderers provoked sometimes a burst of fury, and were crucified as a warning to the rest.

But this was balanced by a difference still more marked. The armies of Rome were at once citizens and soldiers, were drilled and trained from early years, called out on active service to fight for their homes and fatherland. Carthage relied upon her wealth to buy the raw material of her armies. Her people were too busy at their work of agriculture, industry, or commerce, to be spared for the soldier's unproductive trade; but there was no lack of markets in ruder and less civilized countries where men might be had for money's worth. Their recruiting officers went far afield, and the motley host thus gathered to their banners must have presented a strange spectacle indeed, as Heeren pictures to our fancy. "Hordes of half-naked Gauls were ranged next to companies of white-clothed Iberians, and savage Ligurians next to the far-travelled Nasamones and Lotophagi; Carthaginians and Liby-phœnicians formed the centre, the former of whom were a sort of separate corps, dignified by the title of the sacred legion; while innumerable troops of Numidian horsemen, taken from all the tribes of the desert, swarmed around upon unsaddled horses, and formed the wings; the van was composed of Balearic slingers, and a line of colossal elephants, with their Ethiopian guides, formed as it were a chain of moving fortresses before the whole army."

Multitudinous gatherings like these took time to raise, still more to hold well in hand and turn to good account; pestilence often hovered in their train, and they were commonly soon shattered by the onset of steady infantry like that of Rome. There was yet another danger in their use, which was now to be brought home to them in an appalling shape.
INTRODUCTION. I.

The war once over, it remained to pay the arrears and to disband the army. But the funds were long in coming, and the men shipped cautiously in small detachments were allowed to meet once more in Africa, to fan each other's discontent, invent wild stories of the plans hatched for their destruction, and break out at last in open mutiny. So began the disastrous Mercenary war.

The hardy veterans found daring leaders who swept the open country with their arms and carried all before them for a time. Nor was that the only danger to the state. The subject populations all around had little love for the proud city who had been so imperious a mistress. Except a favoured few who had preserved their independence as Phœnician colonies upon the coast, the rest had been governed with a rod of iron, and taxed oppressively in men and money to support the imperial policy of Carthage. In the background rolled the threatening clouds of Nomads, who had never ceased to hate her for her stern repression of their licence. Among all these a smouldering fire of disaffection burnt, which was now to burst into a flame. On every side they made common cause with the insurgent army, and raised the banner of revolt. So Carthage stood upon the very brink of ruin. Besides the enemies thus leagued against her, she suffered from the spirit of faction which crippled her policy and checked her arms. Her foremost leaders, Hamilcar and Hanno, wasted in their mutual jealousy the strength which should have been turned against the common enemy: each was singly tried a while, and each failed in turn to close the war, till no course was left but to plead with them in their country's name, to drop their rivalries in the sense of overwhelming danger. That done the prospect brightened, and the terrible insurrection was trampled out at last.

But friends and enemies alike had learnt two lessons from the war.

1. It had revealed the chronic danger of all mercenary troops, who might at any moment turn against their own paymasters, and ruin the State while off its guard.

2. It had laid bare the weakest point in the home-rule of Carthage. Her failure to win the loyalty of her allies near home was very fatal. She would not let their towns be walled in her jealous fears of disaffection. An invader might therefore march at his will through open country, and look to find thousands rally to his standard. The Syracusan Agathocles, the Roman Regulus, had each tried in this way to close the war by a decisive blow: a surer hand would one day succeed where they had failed.

What was the attitude of Rome meanwhile, when her late enemy was fighting thus for very life? At first she was entirely neutral; there was indeed some diplomatic talk of the complaints of the Italian traders whose interests were wounded by the blockade of the insurgent towns, but for a time she was ashamed to take advantage of a rival's weakness. As the war went on however, and the mutinous garrison of Sardinia offered the island and themselves to Rome, the temptation was too strong, and the offer was accepted. The protests of Carthage were cynically met with threats of war, and the complainant sullenly retired to brood over her wrongs and hopes of vengeance. It was this wrong that rankled in her memory, and made the peace only a short breathing space in a duel of life and death.

Hamilcar above all felt the ignominy keenly, dogged as he was by factious spirits which taunted him with all the losses of the war, or even formally impeached him. To hold his own he had to find or organize a party, and possibly to tamper with the spirit of the constitution. Our authorities, familiar chiefly with the civil strife of Greece and Rome, speak as if he became the head of the democratic party, of which Hasdrubal, his future son-in-law, was a marked leader. This may lead us to inquire what were the distinctive forms of the government of Carthage.

The noble emigrants who fled from Tyre seem to have given a bias to the infant State which lasted on in the stable aristocracy of later ages. A few ruling families held the chief power in their hands, not by established right of an hereditary peerage, but by the wealth and merit and the proud traditions which won them the affections of the people. For some sort of popular assembly, though how arranged we are not told, held the elections of the magistrates, and debated state affairs of high importance, but it was not above suspicion in its choice, for Aristotle says expressly, that the highest offices were bought and sold. Above it stood the senate, which is constantly referred to in our authors as the working machinery of government, through which all questions of foreign policy must pass, as well as all the business of legislation. It was a numerous body, with settled aims and definite traditions, with probably a lengthy, if not a lifelong tenure of their office. Within the circle of this senate or synkletos we hear of a more select and smaller body (concilium, γεροσοια) which was held, as Livy says, in highest reverence, and had a paramount control over the senate (id sanctius apud illos concilium, maximaque ad ipsum senatum regendum vis, Livy xxx. 16. 3). Its origin is thus explained by Justin (xix. 2 ap. Heeren p. 122) as due to the jealousy with which an aristocracy regards the paramount power of any of its body: "As the house of Mago became dangerous to a free state, an hundred judges were chosen from among the senators, who upon the return of generals from the war, should demand an account of the things transacted by them, that they being thereby kept in awe, should so bear themselves in their command, as to have regard to the laws and judicature at home." As the highest state tribunal and guardian of the constitution, doing its duty without reward or fee, it gained a moral influence and power which it may have sometimes harshly used in the interest of the established order, or even tended to become a sort of social inquisition.

The choice of this inner council rested with the pentarchies, or boards of five, who seem to have discharged many of the executive functions of the state. It is probable that they corresponded to the chief departments of the Civil Service, and their long tenure of their office commonly secured a stable and coherent system of administration.

At the head of the whole Republic stood suffetes (schophetim in Hebrew) who were called by the Greek writers kings. These were appointed by election from the chief families of state, and were probably two in number, as Polybius compares them with the Roman consuls, though Cicero (de Republica ii. 23) specially contrasts them with the magistrates who were annually changed, and implies therefore a longer term of power. The Roman consuls, up to the Punic wars at least, were commanders of the legions, but Carthage kept distinct the civil and the military power. The general came next in order to the suffetes, and in his election regard was also had to rank and wealth. The nomination rested with the council (γερουσία), but the sanction of the senate and the people was required.

On the whole it was an aristocracy of wealth and talent. The governing families were careful to observe the constitutional forms. They asked, or bought, the votes of the electors; they referred grave questions to the popular assembly; by colonial grants they consulted the material interests of the poorer classes, at the same time respecting their pride of self-respect even while ruling in their name.

Of the people itself we know not much, but we may do their memory a wrong if we repeat without misgiving the comments of the Greeks or Romans. It is idle to say they were effeminate because they mostly did not care to fight themselves in foreign wars. The Phœnicians, of whose race they came, were no soldiers, but they were no cowards. It needed courage and the spirit of adventure to make their way among wild races, to brave the dangers of the unknown waters, and be the pioneers of civilized progress. It is true that they had not, like the Romans, the barbaric pride which thought that war was noble, but industry was mean: they had little mind to fight for imperial interests which did not move them greatly, and were well content to see their rulers buy soldiers in a cheaper market. It is rash to say they had no sense of honour, because Aristotle tells us that offices of state were bought and sold. It may be true to own that in their race the political instincts were less strong than other motives, but we shall do well to remember that the French monarchy with all its talk of honour sold public offices by thousands, and if it be a question simply of bribery at elections, Englishmen had, till lately, little right to condemn others.

Dynastic feuds, or quarrels among leading houses, have often proved a fatal weakness to ruling aristocracies. Carthage had suffered from it keenly in the Mercenary war, and she felt it even when the war was over. Of the two great party leaders Hamilcar and Hanno, the former was the most popular among the people, by virtue of his signal merits as a soldier, if not by the factious help of Hasdrubal. He was made general by their votes, to secure their hold on Southern Spain, and he was glad to go, for he breathed more freely in the camp than in the city, and had far-reaching projects to secure. No better scene of action could easily be found than Spain. The mines which had tempted Phœnician enterprise in early days were unexhausted still, and might give him the command of untold wealth. The native tribes might be won by fair words or show of force, and their homes would then be recruiting grounds for hardy soldiers. The scene was far enough away to be out of sight of jealous rivals, and conquests made upon it were no immediate defiance of Rome's power. If such were his aims, they were successful. He pushed on with slow and patient steps till the South of Spain was in his hands; he organized a powerful army which was disciplined by constant warfare and maintained with little help from home, while he kept up almost royal state, not forgetting to find funds for his partisans at Carthage, the so-called Barcine faction.

When death abruptly closed the career of his ambition, Hasdrubal, his son-in-law, was ready to step into his place and carry on his work with equal skill, and when he too was hurried off by an assassin's knife, the army felt such sense of strength and personal will as to choose a general for itself, asking the state only to approve its choice. Hannibal, with all his father's bitterness of hate, and more than his father's genius, was ready to carry on the struggle against Rome. His army, composite as was its structure, was welded into a mighty thunderbolt of war; secure of its loyalty, and relying on his party organized at home, he might hope to overrule the scruples of warier statesmen or opponents.

Rome meanwhile looked on quietly at first at the progress of the Punic arms in Spain, but with growing uneasiness as time went on. At last she forced on Hasdrubal a treaty to respect the line of the Hiberus as the boundary of the influence of the two great empires, but showed scant respect for it herself when she accepted an ally in Saguntum, which lay across the river. She would perhaps have pushed matters to extremes at once, had not her attention been distracted by the war with the Cisalpine Gauls. That enemy was conquered, but not crushed; the colonies of Placentia and Cremona, whose walls were being built to overawe them, were soon to provoke another outburst, and they were ready to welcome any antagonist of Rome. Now that she was mistress of the seas, there could be no better base of operations for a war against her than the country of these Gauls, who were of race akin to the Spanish Celts who fought for Hannibal. The way indeed by land was long and rough, and Punic armies had seldom faced the legions except to be defeated, but Hannibal relied on his own genius, and was impatient to begin the struggle anew. He flung defiance in the teeth of Rome by striking down Saguntum her ally, and then in early spring pushed rapidly along the road which was at last to lead him through the Alps to Italy, where for fifteen years he was to spend all the unparalleled resources of his military skill in the vain effort to destroy the power of Rome.
INTRODUCTION. II.

THE AUTHORITIES FOR THE HISTORY OF THE SECOND PUNIC WAR

The authorities for the history of the Second Punic war consist not only of the third decade of Livy (book xxi—xxx), but of the third book of Polybius, together with fragments of some later books, of the war of Hannibal by Appian, of some passages of Dion Cassius, preserved or summarized by Zonaras, and also of a long and tedious poem by Silius Italicus.

Of these the history of Polybius is much the earliest in date. Its author, though a Greek, lived long at Rome in intimate relations with the circle of the Scipios, and other ruling families, whose memories of the great struggle were likely to be fresh and vivid; he travelled, as he tells us, to gain a special knowledge of the scenes of the campaigns, and he possessed, in a high degree, many of the qualifications for the work of an historian. It is important therefore to compare his narrative with that of Livy.

Upon careful scrutiny it may be seen that in many passages of the two writers there is very close resemblance in the language used, more especially in dealing with the first part of the war. The agreement is too minute and circumstantial to be ascribed to chance, or to faithful rendering only of the facts.

At first therefore it was thought, as by Lachmann and by others, that the later author Livy must have copied freely from Polybius, though without acknowledging his debts, or even mentioning him by name until the end (xxx. 45. 4). We can lay little stress indeed upon this silence, for ancient writers had no scruples in using the materials which they found ready to their hands; they borrowed often largely from each other, and had no delicacy of feeling about such debts of honour. But there is good reason for believing that the view just stated is not an adequate explanation of the facts.

1. Even in the passages where Livy seems at first sight to copy Polybius most closely, we may find commonly some incidents, some names of persons or of things, some notices of causes or effects, which form distinct additions to the story of the earlier writer, and which point to some other literary source, as they would not come within the range of Livy's own thought or observation.

2. It is still more noteworthy that in one place (xxii. 24. 4) we find surprise expressed at a course of action on the part of Hannibal which is sufficiently explained in the corresponding passage of Polybius.

3. At other times we find that Livy gives details without apparent misgivings or defence, although Polybius had already protested or complained of them as silly absurdities and exaggerated tales. Examples of this kind may be found in xxi. 22 and 36.

4. It would seem natural to urge that Livy might have had several authorities before him, and have seen reasons for preferring first one and then another, as he worked up their materials into the course of his own narrative. But before accepting this conclusion, it may be well to turn to the fourth and fifth decades of his work, where by general consent it is admitted that he followed Polybius most closely in all matters which related to Greece or to the East. We may study with advantage his method of procedure in such cases. Careful observation seems to show that in all these he uses Polybius without acknowledgment, translating and abridging lengthy passages, without collating other sources at the time, or changing to any great extent the order and method of the narrative, though he often makes mistakes and alterations from ignorance, or haste, or patriotic pride. The classical historians of later date, we know, followed the same course, and still more certainly, the chroniclers of the middle ages. For the most part it would seem that they were quite content in each part of their work with following one authority alone, and that they transcribed freely from it for a time, with little effort to balance or correct from other sources, till at length another was taken in its place, to be used for a while with equal freedom. But in the third decade of Livy the elements of the mosaic are much smaller than in the fourth or fifth; the passages are shorter where the agreement with Polybius is most marked, and yet in them the variations are often too minute and numerous to be consistent with such a method of procedure as that which has been stated. If Livy had had the pages of Polybius before him, he would probably have followed him more closely, as the differences are often not improvements.

5. The reasons given, as well as others which arise from a detailed comparison between the two, point to a common use of the same sources, rather than to a direct borrowing of the one historian from the other. But they must have dealt with these in different fashion, Livy keeping close to the early narrative in its fuller form, while the edition which Polybius gives is a summary and corrected one. It remains then to ascertain, if possible, the nature of these common sources.
6. The passages of the two writers in which the features of resemblance are most marked, are those in which Hannibal is throughout the moving spirit of the scenes, and the fortunes of his soldiers are described in most detail.

They deal with the march of the invading army, with the fields of battle, and the vicissitudes of the campaigns. The touches here are often very delicate and minute, and the narrative is that of an eye-witness, or of one whose information could be drawn from Carthaginian sources.

One such especially is known to us by name, the Greek Silenus, who is said to have served from first to last in Hannibal's campaigns (Corn. Nepos, Hann. 13) and to have written with great care the history of his wars (Cic. de Divin. i. 24), and as such is quoted as an authority by Livy (xxvi. 49. 3). Contemporary evidence of so high an order, which is referred to by writers of two centuries later, could hardly fail to be consulted by a painstaking author like Polybius, and his silence on the subject goes for little, as it was not the practice of those times to mention earlier authorities except when the data were specially conflicting. Silenus was certainly consulted by the Roman writers on the Punic wars, and there is good reason for believing that part of Livy's narrative takes from this source much of its colour and contents. But it does not therefore follow that Silenus was directly used by Livy, as the materials collected by him may have been worked up by other hands into something like the form in which we have them in their Latin dress. In dealing with this question we may do best to consider first the other parts of Livy's story, where Rome itself is the centre of the scene, and the information must have come from Roman sources. What were the authorities which could be consulted here, and in what way do they seem to have been used? It is needful perhaps here to enter into more details.
INTRODUCTION. II.

7. In early ages it had been the practice to put out an official register of the names of the magistrates elected, with some sort of scanty calendar of general news. The priests were in Rome, as often elsewhere, the earliest chroniclers, and the meagre notices which the chief Pontiff (Pontifex summus) posted on a whitened board, grew lengthier as time went on, and the practice of registration became more complete. The materials thus collected year by year were the groundwork of a national chronicle, which was kept in the Archives of the Pontiffs, and formed at the period of the last revision a series of some eighty books. In form it was a sort of diary on which were noted the results of the elections, and the chief events of national importance. In the interests of the priesthood it was natural to find room for all the matters which especially concerned them; the august ceremonials of the state religion: the eclipses of the sun and moon: the fasts and feasts and days of evil omen to be noted on the calendar: the prodigies and freaks of nature which in stirring times excited the fancy of a superstitious people—these were set down with an exceeding fulness of detail—as facts which deserved careful study in the present, and were likely to be of interest to after generations.

8. The early writers in their history of the past freely used the outlines which were thus ready to their hand, and adopted a like order in the narrative of their own times. Here and there indeed complaints were made of such meagre chronicles of petty and disjointed facts, and it was urged that there could be no national order or historical perspective in a continuous diary where no attempt was made to trace the connection between causes and effects, but the memory was overloaded with ill-digested food. A narrative so written, said Sempronius Asellio, can hardly rise above the dignity of nursery tales (Aul. Gell. v. 18). But still from first to last the prevailing practice with the historians of Rome was to set down year by year the order of events, mentioning first the results of the elections, the division of the Provinces and Legions, the prodigies which stirred the public mind, the starting of the Generals for the scenes of war, and the doings of the armies on the field of battle. In these respects the difference between the earlier and later writers consisted chiefly in the qualities of style and literary treatment, for which the first chroniclers cared little, but which seemed of paramount importance as the taste for rhetoric increased. Thus Cicero speaks contemptuously of the meagre and graceless annals, rough hewn, as he implies, by prentice hands which had as yet no experience or skill of literary craft (De Orat. ii. 12).

The earlier chroniclers, he adds, seem to have chiefly aimed at brevity, and to have told their story simply, without a thought of grace or diction (non exornatores sed narratores). Of those included in this sweeping criticism the first recorded were contemporaries of the First Punic war. Fabius Pictor and Cincius Alimentus both bore a part in the great struggle, and are referred to as authorities by Livy, as men who helped to make history as well as write it. Of those who followed some like M. Porcius Cato and L. Calpurnius Piso took a high rank in the world of politics, but are included in Cicero's sweeping censure as historians without a style. The first who aimed at dignity of language was Cælius Antipater, who lived in the period of the Gracchi, a century later than the first chroniclers just mentioned. There was little elegance indeed, adds Cicero (de leg. i. 2), in the rough vigour of his style, but at least we may see in him the first beginning of something like literary care (pauly inflavit vehementius habuitque vires agrestes ille quidem atque horridas, sine nitore ac palaestra: sed tamen admonere reliquis potuit, ut accuratius scri-berent). In later times indeed the caprice of fashion fondly recurred to the old models of archaic diction, and the accomplished Emperor Hadrian, who set up for a literary critic, avowed his preference of Cælius Antipater to Sallust (Spartian. _Haadr._ 16). His writings were evidently in good repute at the end of the Republic, for Brutus took the trouble to compress them into shorter form, and Cicero asks Atticus to send him the Epitome of which he had just heard (_Epitomen Bruti Cælianorum_, Cic. _ad Att._ xiii. 8). His history of the Punic war was singled out for special mention ( _in proemio belli Punici_, Cic. _Or._ 69), and in this we are told that he followed Silenus very closely (Cic. _de divin._ i. 24). In the third decade Livy mentions him more often than any other writer, and in terms which show that his evidence ranked very high, and should be weighed in any conflict of authorities. There is reason to believe that he was often used when not explicitly referred to. The dream of Hannibal at Onusa, as found in Livy _xxi._ 22. 5, agrees with the description, somewhat more fully given, in a fragment of Cælius which Cicero has preserved for us ( _de divin._ i. 24), and which as we are told was first drawn from Silenus. So too of the omens before the disaster at Lake Trasimene (Livy _xxii._ 3), which Cicero ( _de div._ i. 35) quotes to like effect from Cælius, as also in the account of the earthquake which passed unnoticed by the combatants in the same battle. There are a few words quoted from him by Priscian (xiii. 96), antequam Barca perierat, alii rei causa in Africam missus est, which seem to point to the recall of Hannibal to Africa after some years of stay in Carthage, to which he had returned in early life,—a residence required to reconcile the expressions used by Livy, though he has neglected explicitly to state it. There are also verbal similarities which point in the same direction, as in the passage of Cælius preserved by A. Gellius (x. 24. 6), si vis mihi equitatum dare, et ipse cum cetero exercitu me sequi, die quinti Romæ in Capitolium curabo tibi cena sit cocta, compared with that of Livy xxii. 51. 2: as also another which we find in Priscian iii. 607, dextimos in dextris, scuta jubet habere, to which we may trace a likeness in Livy xxii. 50. 11. It is not unlikely therefore that a writer in good repute like Cælius, whose style had more force and colour in it than the bare and rugged annalists' of earlier days, should have been freely used by Livy with little effort to hunt up his authorities, or to compare the various sources fused into the current narrative. Occasional discrepancies noted by the former were probably reported also by the latter, who sometimes exercised his judgment on them, but did not always, as we may suppose, carry the criticism further, or look for fresh evidence to decide the question. The manual effort of collating many authors, of unfolding the long rolls in which their histories were written, and poring over their archaic style, was sure to be distasteful to a man of Livy's tastes; the critical standard of the age did not require such labour at his hands; the reading public had not such severe historic canons, and much preferred a piece of fine writing to proof of antiquarian research, and Livy naturally enough catered for the literary appetites which he found around him. The work which he had set himself to do seemed great enough, and left him little leisure to sift and to compare; the history of seven centuries stretched out before him, and he hurried on to rear his noble monument to the memory of the Great Republic.

In this way may be probably explained both the features of agreement and of difference between Polybius and Livy, by supposing that some of the same sources may be traced in both, from which the former drew directly, while the latter used them as he found them worked up already in the narrative of one who was almost a contemporary of the Greek writer. The theory itself is worthy of acceptance, even if we do not lay much stress upon the evidence which seems to point to Silenus as the common authority of both alike, and to Cælius as the compiler of the Roman version of the story. It is chiefly in the earlier books that the probability of this is strongest; later in the decade other influences seem to have come prominently forward, among which may be mentioned memoirs current in the Scipionic circle, native traditions or chronicles of Africa, such as those consulted by King Juba, and works of a later and diffuser style like those of Valerius Antias.
From what has been already said it will be seen that some at least of the qualifications of an historian will not be found in any high degree in Livy. He draws his narrative too readily at second hand from earlier writers, and fills in the meagre outlines with rhetorical details, which are often the common-places of the schools, more than the results of independent study. He is too little on his guard against the patriotic bias of the Roman chroniclers, and the party spirit of patrician informants, and so treats unfairly both the statesmanship of Flaminius and the policy of Carthage. There was monumental evidence ready to his hand on every side in the inscriptions to be found in every place of national resort, but there are scanty signs to show that he recognized their value. A few weeks of travel would have given him a personal knowledge of the scenes of the campaigns, which combined with his undoubted powers of description, would have left few questions still unsettled in connection with the battlefields and movements of the armies. The archives of the Priestly Colleges, whose formularies he sometimes copied, would have told him much about the characteristic features of the old religion, which he leaves almost unexplained, as if it were still unaltered in his own days. His language tends often to confuse the customs of Italy with those of other races. Thus he ascribes to Carthage the distinctive name of the Jupiter of Rome, as well as those of the political and military systems of her rival. The lengthy speeches inserted by him in the narrative are convenient vehicles for his theories of political causation, but have often little semblance of reality; while the annalistic form, suggested as it was by the yearly change of consuls, fatigues the memory and disturbs the judgment in tracing the natural connection of events. But these defects belong in a great measure to the literary standards of his age and country, and we should not fail to recognize the merits which are peculiarly his own, his high moral tone and honesty of purpose, the eloquence and pathos of his speeches, the vivid powers of portraiture, and the varied beauties of his style, which have given his history so high a place among the works of classical antiquity.
INTRODUCTION. III.

ON THE LANGUAGE AND STYLE OF LIVY.

In order to illustrate the peculiarities of Livy's style, a list is now given of those forms of expression which, though for the most part found elsewhere, recur more often in his pages than in those of earlier writers such as Cicero and Cæsar.

Substantive. Concrete for collective, e.g. eques, pedes, Pænus; abstract for concr.: in sing. levis armatura, remigium; plur. servitia, dignitates, robora legionum. Large number of verbals in us: trajectus, saltatus, effectus; and in tor: concitor, ostentator; the same used adjectively, domitor ille exercitus.

Adjectives used substantively: in sing. acc. or abl. neut.: in medium, in publico, in immensum altitudinis, in majus vero, in multum diei, per Europæ plerumque, hoc tantum licentiae; plur. neut.: per aversa urbis, per patentia ruinis, per cetera pacata, tædio præsentium; plur. masc. less frequent: potiores, docti, mortales, cum expeditis militum; forms in osus frequent: procellosus, facinorosus; and in bundus: contionabundus, tentabundus; predicative adj. used adverbially: repens nuntiatur clades, conferti pugnant.

INTRODUCTION. III.

PRONOUN. Alius = ὁ ἄλλος: alia acies, alius exercitus; alter for alteruter xxii. 8. 7; nullus for nemo; quicunque, qualiscunque, quantuscunque, &c., without a verb.

ADVERB instead of attributive adj.: omnibus circa solo æquatis, postero ac deinæcert aliquid diebus; use of ceterum for sed, ferme for fere, juxta for pariter, adhuc for past time; unde, ibi, inde for persons; admodum with numerals; large number of forms in im, e.g. cæsim, generatim.

VERB. Affection for frequentatives, often in sense of simple verb: frequent recurrence of vadere, currere, trahere; form of perf. pass. with fui and pluperf. with fueram; forem in place of essém; use of pres. and perf. subj. in Or. obliqua, to give vivid colour to description.

PREPOSITION. Common use of circa, not only for space, but for time and mode.

IN CONSTRUCTION Frequent forms of σχῆμα κατὰ σύνεσιν: pars magna...nantes, millia...eosdem, R. legiones...ulti, civitas...oriundi, Senatus populusque voluit, Gallia...iis xxii. 20. 1, equestre prælium...qua parte copiarum 41. 4, scriba pontificis...quos vocant 57. 3; in pregnant sense: blandientem ut ducere-tur, in orbem pugnantes, in praelium redivit; irregularities in the use of pronouns: remisso id quod erepturi erant, id de quo ambigebatur...eventus belli...victoriam dedit, quod quidam auctores sunt, quibus si videretur denuntiarent; quicquid used adverbially = quo longius;
interrog. within a final sentence: quid ut a vobis sperent; or participial: quid credentes; suus referring to an oblique case of a subordinate-sentence.

Genitive. Of possession extensively used: plebs Hannibalis erat, alterius totus exercitus erat, dicionis facere, H. annorum novem erat. Of object with relative adj. like improvidus, nimius, æger; or without, ancipitis certaminis victoria, moris sui carmine.

Ablative. Large use of instrumental, modal and local abl. without prepos., but Livy constantly has prepos. with abl. for motion from a town; frequency of comparatio compendiaria, as spe celerius, solito magis.

Dative. In predicative sense: caput Italie, auctor rebellionis Sardis, quibusdam volentibus erat bellum.

Accusative. With adj. or partic. pass.: cetera tereti, sollicitus omnia, paratus omnia, ictus femur, longam indutae vestem, assueti devia; omission of object with verbs used absolutely: transmittere, movere, superare, jungere, incolere, fullere, &c.

Adjective. Expressing the object of subst. with which it agrees: dictatoria invidia, consularia impedi-menta; with infin.: dignus, obstinatus, dubins.

Indicative. In hypothetical construction, fames quam pestilentia gravior erat mi.
INTRODUCTION. III.

Subjunctive. With ut after causa, cum eo, pro eo, ab eo.

Gerundive. Frequently used in abl. abs. or instrumental abl. : quærendis pedentium vadis evasere; insertion of ipse, quisque in abl. gerund. phrases. Cf. note on xxi. 45. 9.

Participle. Substantival use of past part. pass. : for an abstract subst., as Sicilia amissa, ex dictatorio imperio concusso; for a concrete subst., as ridentis speciem, strepientium pavores; as object to the verb, id male comissum ignavia in bonum vertit; as subject to the verb, diu non perlitatum dictatorem tenuit; absolute use in nom. : habitantes Lilybœi; absolute use in abl. : inexplorato, edicto, auspicato; hypothetically : invicta si aequo dimicaretur campo; future part. to express intention, or assumption : ita transmissurus si; omission of participle, cursus per urbem, pugna ad Trebiam, rudis ad artes; asyndeton in use of part. : pulsa plebs armata profecta; in comparative and superl. forms : conjunctius, conspectior; Greek idiom with fallo : sefellere instructi; large number of deponent part. in passive sense : pactus, emensus; neuter verbs impersonally in part. pass. : concursum est, tumultuatum.

Pleonasm. Of frequent occurrence : legati retro domum unde venerant redierunt, novus rursus de integro labor, ante praecoccupare.

Brachylogy. Quo ad conveniendum diem edixerat, ad fidem promissorum obsides accipere, neutros pugnam incipientes timor tenuit; carried to an awkward extreme in in eos versa peditum acies...haud dubium fecit quin... xxI. 34. 37, cf. 52. 1, 55. 8, and xxII. 18. 7.

Ellipse. T'antum ne, modo ne, at enim, retinere conati sunt ni summovissent.

Chiasmus is a marked feature of his style: animus ad pugnam ad fugam spes, in urbem Romani Pæni in castra.

Anaphora. Hic vobis terminum...fortuna dedit: hic dignam mercedem e. s. dabit; often combined with iteratio, as totiens petita fædera totiens rupta.

Paronomasia. Hospitem non hostem, hostis pro hospite.

Inversion in order of familiar expressions: pro parte virili, belli domique, nocte dieque, inferos superosque.

Anastrophe of Preposition. Capuam propius, Fœsulas inter Arretiumque.

In general we may notice the growing tendency to copy Greek forms of expression, which the want of the article as also of the participle of the substantive verb often render less natural in Latin.
THE TEXT AND ORTHOGRAPHY OF LIVY.

The oldest MS. of the third decade of Livy is that which is preserved in the National Library at Paris, under the name of the Codex Puteanum (P), dating probably from the beginning of the eighth century. In the earlier edition (1860) of the Emendationes Livianæ, Madvig came to the conclusion that this was the source of all the extant MSS., which he believed to differ from it only in the various errors due to the carelessness of later copyists. But the researches of Mommsen and Studemund have thrown light on the influence of another Codex called Spirensis (S), from which a number of readings were noted down long ago by Beatus Rhenanus, but which has since disappeared with the exception of a single leaf discovered a few years back (C. Halm in Act.

1 Compare Madvig, Emendationes Livianæ; Mommsen and Studemund, Analecta Liviana; Brambach, Neugestaltung d. Lat. Orthographie; Corssen, Aussprache d. Lat. Sprache.
Monac. 1869). This, or its unknown original, is not entirely represented by any extant MS.; it seems to have come to light at a later time than P, and all of the copies made from it, or derived indirectly from it, show distinct traces of the influence of P, which was referred to probably in obscure or doubtful passages, so that readings from P are found in the margin, or the text even, of the MSS. that can best be traced to S.

Further enquiry may possibly succeed in distinguishing still further the two families of MSS. That of P is admitted to be the earliest and best; it abounds however in obvious errors and omissions, which various editors have gradually corrected. It would be quite hopeless to adhere even to the best MS. authority, and bold as some of the suggestions of Madvig may appear, we must remember that the text has been thrown into its present shape by many critics who have been forced to go to work with equal freedom. We may take one specimen as given by him to prove in his own words 'quantum ubique sordium et robiginis detergendum sit.' It is the beginning of B. xxii, as it appears in P. Jam vero adpetebatque Hannibal ex hibernis metuit et neque eo qui iam ante conatus transcendere Appenninum intolerandis frigoribus et cum ingenti periculo moratus ac metu. Gallis, quos praedae populationumque consciverat spes, postquam pro eo, ut ipsi ex alieno agro raperent acyerentque, suas terras sedem belli esse pra-miique utriusque partis exercituum hibernis viderent, verterunt retro Hannibalem odia. So faulty a MS. can be little trusted in nice questions of orthography, and Madvig accordingly has not attempted to reproduce the forms of Livy's age, or to give us the spelling of the historian himself, but has fallen back upon the orthography of Quintilian's age, which was fixed by the authority of critics and grammarians, and which is known to have differed in material points from that of Livy's time, when it was still shifting and unsettled. It may be convenient however to formulate some of the chief points of difference between the spelling most in vogue at the end of the Republic, and that of a century later, though with the caution that we cannot tell exactly when the change in each case took place, or how far personal taste may have modified the general fashion.

O. V. vo was at first usual, as in servos, volnus. The change to vu took a century to effect, from Augustus to Vespasian, cf. Quintilian i. 7. § 26.

O. E. The change from vortex to vertex began with Scipio Africanus, but some forms adversus, controversia, voster lasted till the Empire, when there was doubt between fœorris, fœneris, &c.

V. E. We have the later form of the gerundive of the third and fourth conj. as early as B.C. 185, but the older form, as faciundus, appears much later, especially in archaic formularies.

V. I. Maxumus, optumus were common before
J. Caesar, who set the fashion of writing maximus, &c. Quintil. i. 7. § 21.

E. I. Livy wrote sibi, quase, and many in the first century did likewise, Quint. i. 7. § 24. So the abl. of words like agilis, Viminalis was written at the end of the Republic with a final e. The elder Pliny proposed to write agile of persons, agili of things. J. Caesar decided for the i, to distinguish abl. from neut. nom., but it did not definitely prevail till the end of the century.

The form of the acc. plur. gave critics much trouble in the varieties of eis, is, es. It seems to have been settled that is was the commoner ending in words whose sing. nom. and gen. ended in -is, like omnis, navis, or of nominatives in -er with abl. in i, as acer, in words in ns, rs, like fons, pars; while words in as, x more frequently assumed a plur. in es. The account of the grammarians that the gen. plurals in ium were followed by acc. plur. in is requires correction in this respect.

In the acc. sing. there was also a wavering between im and em, and the i prevailed only in Greek words, and a very few feminines.

I (pingue). The broad i sound was under the Republic commonly written ei, which ceased in the Augustan age, though grammarians recognized it much later.

I I. The doubling of i between two vowels was preferred by Cicero, as in aiiio, Maiia, and inscriptions of the early Empire show this spelling; but nouns of the second decl. in iūs, iūm were written in the Republic with one i only in the gen. as imperi; adjectives assumed the double i earlier, and gradually a like rule spread to the nouns.

K. C. Originally the letter C corresponded to our G sound, as in the C which stands for Gaius, till Spurius Carvilius introduced the letter G, and C then took the place of the tenuis K.

*C*I, TI, were often confused in common speech, inscriptions, and MSS., but in the following words the right reading seems quite established: condicio, contio, convitium, dicio, indutice, nuntius, otium, setius, solacium, suspitio (Fleckeisen, Fünfzig Art.).

QVO. CV. QVV. The old form quam became cum in the time of J. Cæsar, there being little evidence for quum in the first century. So quoi passed into cui and quare into cur. Secundus is early found for sequondus. Æquom became œcum, then later on œquum.

N in old Latin was often omitted before i and s, as in cojunx, cosol, cesor, Megalesia; but in the final ens of the numerals it was retained till the end of the Augustan era, though afterwards confined to totiens, quotiens, and the like.

SS, frequent at the end of the Republic, was changed to s; thus Cicero used caussa, divissiones, but later inscriptions after the Monumentum Ancyranum have a single s.
XS was common, not only in compounds like exspecto, but in others like saxsum, proxsumus, and inscriptions prove this in spite of the protests of the old grammarians, who regarded the s as needless.

Assimilation of the last letter of the preposition to the first of the verb with which it is compounded began early, but the inscriptions of the end of the Republic have forms like adclamaro, adlectus, adrideo, conlega, inlustris, varied by more modern forms. The grammarians favoured the general assimilation, and the process went forward steadily, though modified by personal caprice.
CHRONOLOGICAL SUMMARY.

B.C.
229. Death of Hamilcar, the Carthaginian general in Spain; Hasdrubal succeeds to his place.
228. Roman treaty with Hasdrubal.
221. Death of Hasdrubal. Hannibal takes the command in Spain.
219. Saguntum taken by Hannibal.
216. Battle of Cannæ. Revolt of Italian allies.
LIBER XXI.

In parte operis mei licet milii præfari, quod in principio summae totius professi plerique sunt rerum scriptores, bellum maxime omnium memorabile, quæ unquam gesta sint, me scripturum, quod Hannibale duce Carthaginienses cum populo Romano gessere. Nam neque validiores opibus ulla inter se civitates gentesque contulerunt arma, neque his ipsis tantum unquam virium aut roboris fuit, et haud ignotas belli artes inter sese, sed expertas primo Punico conserebant bello, et adeo varia fortuna belli ancesque Mars fuit, ut proprius periculum fuerint, qui vicerunt. Odiiis etiam prope maioriibus certarunt quam viribus, Romanis indignantibus, quod victoribus victi uto inferrent arma, Pœnis, quod superbe avareque crederent imperitatum victis esse. Fama est etiam, Hannibalem annorum ferme novem, pueriliter blandientem patri Hamilcari, ut duceretur in Hispaniam, quam, perfecto Africo bello, exercitum eo traiecturus sacrificaret, altaribus admodum, tactus sacris, iure iurando adactum, se, quam primum posset, hostem fore populo Romano.
bant ingentis spiritus virum Sicilia Sardiniaque amissæ: nam et Siciliam nimis celeri desperatione rerum concessam et Sardiniam inter motum Africæ fraude Romanorum, stipendio etiam insuper imposito, interceptam. His anxius curis ita se Africo bello, quod fuit sub recentem Romanam pacem, per quinque annos, ita deinde novem annis in Hispania augendo Punico imperio gessit, ut appareret, maius eum, quam quod gereret, agitare in animo bellum, et, si diutius vixisset, Hamilcare duce Pœnos arma Italæ illaturos fuisse, quæ Hannibalis ductu intulerunt.

Mors Hamilcaris peropportuna et pueritia Hannibalis distulerunt bellum. Medius Hasdrubal inter patrem ac filium octo ferme annos imperium obtinuit, flore sætatis, uti ferunt, primo Hamilcari conciliatus, generinde ob aliam indolem profecto animi adscitus et, quia gener erat, factionis Barcinæ opibus, quæ apud milites plebemque plus quam modice erant, haud sane voluntate principum, in imperio positus. Is plura consilio quam vi gerens, hospitiis magis regulorum conciliandisque per amicitiam principum novis gentibus quam bello aut armis rem

Carthagine sem auxit. Ceterum nihilo ei pax tutior fuit; barbarus eum quidam palam ob iram interfecti ab eo domini obtruncat; comprehensusque ab circumstantibus haud alio, quam si evasisset, vultu, tormentis quoque quum laceraretur, eo fuit habitu oris, ut superante lætitia dolores ridentis etiam speciem præbuerit. Cum hoc Hasdrubale, quia miræ artis in sollicitandis gentibus imperioque suo iungendis fuerat, fœdus renovaverat populus Romanus, ut finis utriusque imperii esset amnis Hiberus, Saguntinisque mediis inter imperia duorum populorum libertas servaretur.

In Hasdrubalis locum haud dubia res fuit, quin prærogativa militaris, qua extemplo iuvenis Hannibal in prætorium delatus imperatorque ingenti omnium clamore atque assensu appellatus erat, * * favor plebis sequebatur. Hunc vixdum puberem Hasdrubal litteris ad se accersierat, actaque res etiam in senatu fuerat. Barcinis nientesibus, ut assuesceret militiae Hannibal atque in patronas succederet opes, Hanno, alterius factionis princeps, "Et æquum postulare videtur" inquit "Hasdrubal, et ego tamen non censo, quod petit, tribuendum." Quum admiratione tam ancipitis sententiae in se omnes convertisset, "Florem ætatis" inquit "Hasdrubal, quem ipse patri Hannibalis fruendum præbuit, iusto iure eum a filio repeti censet; nos tamen minime decet iuventutem nostram pro militari rudimento assuefacere libidini prætorum. An hoc timemus, ne Hamilcaris filius nimis sero imperia immodica et regni paterni speciem videat, et, cuius regis genero hereditarii sint relictii exercitus nostri, eius filio parum nature serviamus? Ego istum iuvenem domi tenendum sub legibus, sub magistratibus, docendum vivere æquo iure cum ceteris censeo, ne quandoque parvus hic ignis incendium ingens exsuscitet." Pauci, ac ferme optimus quisque, Hannoni assentiebantur; sed, ut plerunque fit, maior pars meliorem vicit.

Missus Hannibal in Hispaniam primo statim adventu omnem exercitum in se convertit; Hannibal's popularity and character. 2 Hamilcarem iuvenem redditum sibi veteres milites credere; eundem vigorem in vultu vinque in oculis, habitum oris lineamentaque intueri. Dein brevi effecit, ut pater in se minimum momentum ad favorem conciliandum esset. Nunquam ingenium idem ad res diversissimas, parensum atque imperandum, habilius fuit. Itaque haud facile discerneres, utrum imperatori an exercitui carior esset; neque Hasdrubal alium quemquam præficere malle, ubi quid fortiter ac strenue agendum esset, neque milites alio duce plus confidere aut audere. Plurimum audaciam ad periculum capessenda, plurimum consilii inter ipsa pericula erat. Nullo labore aut corpus fatigari aut animus vincire poterat. Caloris ac frigoris patientia par; cibi potionisque desiderio naturali, non voluptate modus finitus; vigiliarum somnique nec die nec nocte discriminata tempora; id, quod gerendis rebus superesset, quieti datum; ea neque molli strato neque silentio accersita; multi sœpe militari sagulo opertum humi iacentem inter custodias stationesque militum conspexerunt. Vestitus nihil inter aequalis excellens; arma atque equi conspiciebantur. Equitum peditumque idem longe primus erat; princeps in proelium ibat, ultimus conserto proelio excedebat. Has tantas viri virtutes gentia vitia æquabant, inhumana crudelitas, perfidia plus quam Punica, nihil veri, nihil sancti, nullus deum metus, nullum ius iurandum, nulla religio. Cum hac indole virtutum atque vitiorum triennio sub Hasdrubale imperatore meruit, nulla re, quæ agenda viden- daque magno futuro duci esset, pretermissa.

1—2

Ceterum, ex quo die dux est declaratus, vclut Italia ei provincia decreta bellumque Romanum mandatum esset, nihil prolatandum ratus, ne se quoque, ut patrem Hamilcarem, deinde Hasdrubalem, cunctantem casus aliquis opprimeret, Saguntinis inferre bellum statuit. Quibus op. pugnandis quia haud dubie Romana arma movebantur, in Olcadum prius fines (ultra Hiberum ea gens in parte magis quam in dicione Carthaginiensium erat) induxit exercitum, ut non petisse Saguntinos, sed rerum serie, finitimis domitis gentibus, iungendoque tractus ad id bellum videri posset. Cartalam, urbem opulentam, caput gentis eius, expugnat diripitque; quo metu perculsae minores civitates stipendio imposito imperium accepere. Victor exercitus opulentusque praedae Carthaginem Novam in hiberna est deductus. Ibi large partiendo praedam stipendioque praeterito cum fide exsolvendo cunctis civium sociorumque animis in se firmatis, vere primo in Vacceos promotum bellum. Hermandica et Arbocala, eorum urbes, vis captæ; Arbocala et virtute et multitudine oppidorum diei defensa. Ab Hermandica profugi ex sulibus Olcadum, priore æstate domitæ gentis, quem se iunxissent, concitavit Carpetanos, adortique Hannibalem regressum ex Vacceos haud procul Tago flumine, agmen grave praeda turbavere. Hannibal prælio abstinuit, castrisque super ripam positis, quum prima quies silentiumque ab hostibus fuit, amnem vado trajectit, valloque ita producto, ut locum ad transgredien-dum hostes haberent, invadere eos transseuntes statuit. Equitibus præcepit, ut, quum ingressos aquam videant, adorirent impeditum agmen; in ripa elephantos (quadraginta autem erant) disponit. Carpetanorum cum appendicibus Olcadum Vacceorum-que centum millia fuere, invicta acies, si æquo dimicaretur campo. Itaque et ingenio feroces et multitudine freti et, quod metu cessisse credebant hostem, id morari victoriam rati, quod interesset amnis, clamore sublato passim sine ullius imperio, qua cuique proximum est, in amnem ruunt. Et ex parte altera ripae vis ingens equitum in flumen immissa, medioque alveo hauquaquam pari certamine concursum, quippe ubi pedes instabilis ac vix vado fidens vel ab inermi equite, equo temere acto, perverti posset, eques corpore armisque liber, equo vel per medios gurgites stabili, cominus eminusque rem gereret. Pars magna flumine absumptra; quidam verticoso amni delati in hostes ab elephantis obtiti sunt. Postremi, quibus regressus in suam ripam tutior fuit, ex varia trepidatione quuni in unum colligerentur, priusquam a tanto pavore recipient animos, Hannibal agmine quadrato amnem ingressus fugam ex ripa fecit, vastatisque agris, intra panceos dies Carpetanos quoque in deditionem accepit; et iam omnia trans Hiberum præter Saguntinos Carthaginiensium erant.

6 Cum Saguntinis bellum nondum erat, ceterum iam belli causa. Certamina cum finitimis sere-bantur, maxime Turdetanis. Quibus quum adesset idem, qui litis erat sator; nec certamen iuris, sed vim quæri appareret, legati a Saguntinis Romam missi auxilium ad bellum iam haud dubie imminens orantes. Consules tunc Romæ erant P. Cornelius Scipio et Ti. Sempronius Longus. Qui quum, legatis in senatum introductis, de re publica rettulissent, plaucissetque mitti legatos in Hispaniam ad res sociorum inspiciendas, quibus si videretur digna causa, et Hannibali denuntiarent, ut ab Saguntinis, sociis populi Romani, abstineret, et Carthaginem in Africam traicierent ac sociorum populi Romani querimonia deferrent, hac legatione decreta necedum missa, omnium spe celerius Saguntum oppugnari allatum est. Tune relatæ de integro res ad senatum; et alií provincias consulibus Hispaniam atque Africam decernentes terramique rem gerendam censebant, alií totum in Hispaniam Hannibalemque intendeabant bellum; erant, qui non temere movendam rem tantam exspectandosque ex Hispania legatos censerent. Hæc sententia, quæ tutissima videbatur, vicit, legatique eo maturius missi, P. Valerius Flaccus et Q. Bæbius Tamphilus, Saguntum ad Hannibalem atque inde Carthaginem, si non absisteretur bello, ad ducem ipsum in poenam fæderis rupti deposeendum.

Dum ea Romani parant consultantque, iam Saguntum summa vi oppugnabatur. Civitas ea longe opulentissima ultra Hiberum fuit, sita passus mille ferme a mari. Oriundi a Zacyntho insula dicuntur, mixtique etiam ab Ardea Rutulorum quidam generis; ceterum in tantas brevi creverant opes seu maritimis seu terrestribus fructibus seu multitudinis incremento seu disciplinæ sanctitate, qua fidem socialem usque ad perniciem suam coluerunt. Hannibal infesto exercitu ingressus fines, pervastatis passim agris, urbem tripertito aggreditur. Angulus muri erat in planiorem patentioremque, quam cetera circa, vallem vergens; adversus eum vineas agere instituit, per quas aries mœnibus ad moveri posset. Sed ut locus procul muro satis æquus agendis vinces fuit, ita hauquaquam prospere, postquam ad effectum operis ventum est, cœptis succedebat. Et turris in-gens imminebat, et murus, ut in suspecto loco, supra ceteræ modum altitudinis eminitus erat, et iuventus delecta, ubi plurimum periculi ac timoris ostendebatur, ibi vi maiore obsistebant. Ac primo missilibus summovere hostem nec quicquam satis tum munientibus pati; deinde iam non pro mœnibus modo atque turri tela micare, sed ad erumpendum etiam in stationes operaque hostium animus erat; quibus tumultuariis certaminibus haud ferme plures Saguntini cadebant quam Pæni. Ut vero Hannibal ipse, dum murum incautius subit, adversum femur tragula graviter ictus cecidit, tanta circa fuga ac trepidatio fuit, ut non multum abesset, quin opera ac vineæ deserentur.

Obsidio deinde per paucos dies magis quam oppugnatio fuit, dum vulnus ducis curaretur; per quod tempus ut quies certaminum erat, ita ab apparatu operum ac munitionem nihil cessatum. Itaque acrius de integro and pushed forward vigorously. coortum est bellum, pluribusque partibus, vix accipientibus quibusdam opera locis, vineæ cepteri agi ad moveriquire aries. Abundabat multitudine hominum Pœnus; (ad centum quinquaginta millia habuisse in armis satis creditur;) oppidani ad omnia tuaenda atque obeunda multifariam distineri copti sunt; non sufficiebant itaque. Iam feriebantur arietibus muri quassataeque multæ partes erant; una continentibus ruinis nudaverat urbem; tres deinceps turres, quantumque inter eas muri erat, cum fragore ingenti prociderunt. Captum oppidum ea ruina crediderant Pœni, qua, velut si pariter utrosque murus texisset, ita utrinque in pugnam procursum est. Nihil tumultuaræ pugnæ simile erat, quales in oppugnationibus urbium per occasionem partis alterius conseri solent, sed iustæ acies, velut patenti campo, inter ruinsas muri tectaque urbis modico distantia intervallo constiterant. Hinc spes, hinc desperatio animos irritat, Pœno cepisse iam se urbem, si paulum annitatur, credente, Saguntinis pro nudata mœnibus patria corpora opponentibus nec ullo pedem referente, ne in relictum a se locum hostem immitteret. Itaque quo acris et 9 conferti magis utrinque pugnabant, eo plurum vulnerabantur, nullo inter arma corporaque vano interdente telo. Phalarica erat Saguntinis missile telum hastili abiegno et cetera tereti præterquam ad extremum, unde ferrum exstatbat; id, sicut in pilo, quadratum stuppa circumligabant linebantque pice; ferrum autem tres longum habebat pedes, ut cum armis transfigere corpus posset. Sed id maxime, etiamsi hæsisset in scuto nec penetrasset in corpus, pavorem faciebat, quod, quum medium accensum mitteretur conceptumque ipso motu multo maiorem ignem ferret, armam omitti cogebat nudumque militem ad insequentes ictus praebebat. Quum diu anceps fuisset certamen, et Saguntinis, quia præter spem resisterent, crevissent animi, Pœnus, quia non vicisset, pro victo esset, clamorem repente oppidani tollunt hostemque in ruinas muri expellunt, inde impeditum trepidantemque exturbant, postremo fusum fugatumque in castra redigunt.

Interim ab Roma legatos venisse nuntiatum est; quibus obviam ad mare missi ab Hannibale, qui dicerent, nec tuto eos adituros inter tot tam effrenatarum gentium arma, nec Hannibali in tanto discrimine rerum opera esse legationes audire. Apparebat, non admissos protinus Carthaginem ituros. Litteras igitur nuntiosque ad principes factionis Barcinæ præmittiit, ut præpararent suorum animos, ne quid pars altera gratificari populo Romano posset. Itaque, præterquam quod admissi auditique sunt, ea quoque vana atque ir- rita legatio fuit. Hanno unus adversus senatum causam fœderis magno silentio propter auctoritatem suam, non cum assensu audien- tium egit, per deos fœderum arbitros ac testes sena- tum obtestans, ne Romanum cum Saguntino susci- tarent bellum; monuisse, prædixisse se, ne Hamilcaris progeniem ad exercitummitterent; non manes, non stirpem eius conquiescere viri, nec unquam, donec sanguinis nominisque Barcini quisquam supersit, quie- tura Romana fœdera. "Iuvenem flagrantem cupidine regni vianque unam ad id cernentem, si ex bellis bella serendo succinctus armis legionibusque vivat, velut materiam igni præbentes, ad exercitus misistis. Alu- istis ergo hoc incendium, quo nunc ardetis. Saguntum vestri circumsedent exercitus, unde acentur fœdere; mox Carthaginem circumsedebunt Romanæ legiones, ducibus iisdem diis, per quos priore bello rupta fœdera sunt ulti. Utrum hostem an vos an fortunam utrius- que populi ignorantis? Legatos ab sociis et pro sociis venientes bonus imperator vester in castra non ad- misit; ius gentium sustulit; hi tamen, unde ne hos- tium quidem legati acentur, pulsi, ad nos venerunt; res ex fœdere repetunt; ut publica fraud absit, auc- torem culpæ et reum criminis deaposcunt. Quo lenius agunt, segnus incipiunt, eo, quam cœperint, vereor, ne perseverantius sæviant. Ægates insulas Erycem- que ante oculos proponite, quæ terra marique per quattuor et viginti annos passi sitis. Nec puer hic dux erat, sed pater ipse Hamilcar, Mars alter, ut isti volunt. Sed Taranto, id est Italia, non abstinueramus ex foedere, sicut nunc Sagunto non abstinemus; vicerunt ergo dii homines et, id de quo verbis ambi-gebatur, uter populus foedus rupisset, eventus belli velut æquus iudex, unde ius stabat, ei victoriam dedit, Carthagini nunc Hannibal vineas turresque admovet; Carthaginis mœnia quotit ariete. Sagunti ruinæ (fall-sus utinam vates sim) nostris capitis incident, sus-ceptumque cum Saguntinis bellum habendum cum Romanis est. Dedemus ergo Hannibalem? diceat ali-quis. Scio nam levem esse in eo auctoritatem propter paternas inimicitias; sed et Hamilcarem eo perisse lactatus sum, quod, si ille viveret, bellum iam habe-remus cum Romanis, et hunc iuvenem tanquam furiam facemque huius belli odi ac detestor; nec dedendum solum ad piaeculum rupti foederis, sed, si nemo deposcat, devendum in ultimas maris terrarumque oras, able-gandum eo, unde nec ad nos nomen famaque eius accidere neque ille sollicitare quietæ civitatis statum possit. Ego ita censeo, legatos extemplo Romam mittendos, qui senatu satisfaciunt; alios, qui Hannibali nuntient, ut exercitum ab Sagunto abducat, ipsumque Hannibalem ex foedere Romanis dedant; tertiam legationem ad res Saguntinis reddendas derno." Quum Hanno perorasset, nemini omnium certare oratione cum eo necesse fuit; adeo prope om-nis senatus Hannibalis erat, infestiusque locutum argœbant Hannonem quam Flac-cum Valerium, legatum Romanum. Re-sponsum inde legatis Romanis est, bellum ortum ab Saguntinis, non ab Hannibale esse; populum Romanum iniuste facere, si Saguntinos vetustissimae Carthaginiensium societati præponat.

3 Dum Romani tempus terunt legationibus mitten-dis, Hannibal, quia fessum militem præliis operibusque habebat, paucorum iis die-rum quietem dedit, stationibus ad eustodiam vinæarum aliorumque operum dispositis. Interim animos eor-um nunc ira in hostes stimulando, nunc spe præmiorum accendit; ut vero pro contione prædam capta urbis edixit militum fore, adeo accensi omnes sunt, ut, si extemplo signum datum esset, nulla vi resisti videretur posse. Saguntini ut a præliis quietem habuerant nec lacessentes nec laessiti per aliquot dies, ita non nocte, non die unquam cessaverant ab opere, ut novum murum ab ea parte, qua patefactum oppidum ruinis erat, reflexerent. Inde oppugnatio eos aliquanto atrocior quam ante adorta est, nec, qua primum aut potissimum parte ferrent opem, quam omnia variis clamoribus streperent, satis seire pote-rant. Ipse Hannibal, qua turris mobilis, omnia mu-nimenta urbis superans altitudine, agebatur, hortator aderat. Quæ quum admota, catapultis ballistisque per omnia tabulata dispositis, muros defensoribus nudasset, tum Hannibal occasionem ratus, quingentos ferme Afros cum dolabris ad subruendum ab imo murum mittit; nec erat difficile opus, quod cæmenta non calce durata erant, sed interlita luto, structuræ antiquæ genere. Itaque latius, quam qua caederetur, ruebat, perque patentia ruinis agmina armatorum in urbem vadebant. Locum quoque editum capiunt, collatisque eo catapultis ballistisque, ut castellum in ipsa urbe velut arcem imminentem haberent, muro circumdant; et Saguntini murum interiorem ab non-dum capta parte urbis ducunt. Utrinque summa vi 11 et muniunt et pugnant; sed interiora tuendo mino-rem in dies urbem Saguntini faciunt. Simul crescit 12 inopia omnium longa obsidione et minuitur exspectatio externae opis, quam tam procul Romani, unica spes, circa omnia hostium essent. Paulisper tamen 13 affectos animos recreavit repentina profection Hannibalis in Oretanos Carpetanosque, qui duo 12
populi, dilectus acerbitate consternati, retentis conquisitoribus, metum defectionis quum praebruissent, oppressi celeritate Hannibalis omi-serunt mota arma. Nec Sagunti oppugnatio segnior erat, Maharbale Himilconis filio (eum praecerat Hannibal) ita impigre rem agente, ut ducem abesse nec cives nec hostes sentirent. Is et praelia aliquot secunda fecit et tribus arietibus aliquantum muri dis-cussit, strataque omnia recentibus ruinis advenienti Hannibali ostendit. Itaque ad ipsam arcem extemplo ductus exercitus, atroxque praelium cum multorum utrinque caede initum et pars arcis capta est.

Tentata deinde per duos est exigua pacis spes, 4 Alconem Saguntinum et Alorum Hispanicum. Alco insciis Saguntinis, precibus, aliquid moturum ratus, quem ad Hannibalem noctu transisset, postquam nihil lacrime moveri bant condicionesque tristes ut ab irato victore ferebantur, transfuga ex oratore factus apud hostem mansit, moriturum affirmans, qui sub condicionibus iis de pace ageret. Postulabatur autem, 5 redderent res Turdetanis, traditoque omnii auro atque argent o egressi urbe cum singulis vestimentis ibi habitarent, ubi Pœnus iussisset. Has pacis leges abnuente Alcone accepturos Saguntinos, AlorCUS, vinci animos, ubi alia vincantur, affirmans, se pacis eius interpretum fore pollicetur; erat autem tum miles Hannibalis, ceterum publice Saguntinis amicus atque hospes. Tradito palam telo custodibus hostium, transgressus munimenta ad prætorem Saguntinum (et ipse ita iubebat) est deductus. Quo quum extemplo concursus omnis generis hominum esset factus, summota cetera multitudine, senatus Alorco datus est, cuius talis oratio fuit. "Si civis vester Alco, sicut ad pacem petendam ad Hannibalem venit, ita pacis condiciones ab Hannibale ad vos rettulisset, supervacaneum hoc mihi fuisset iter, quo nec orator Hannibalis nec transfuga ad vos veni; sed quum ille aut vestra aut sua culpa manserit apud hostem (sua, si metum simulavit, vestra, si periculum est apud vos vera referentibus), ego, ne ignoraretis, esse aliquas et salutis et pacis vobis condiciones, pro vetusto hospicio, quod mihi vobiscum est, ad vos veni. Vestra autem causa me nec ullius alterius loqui, quæ loquor apud vos, vel ea fides sit, quod neque, dum vestris viribus restitistis, neque, dum auxilia ab Romanis sperastis, pacis unquam apud vos mentionem feci. Postquam nec ab Romanis vobis nulla est spes nec vestra vos iam aut arma aut mœnia satis defendunt, pacem affero ad vos magis necessariam quam æquam. Cuius ita aliqua spes est, si eam, quemadmodum ut victor fert Hannibal, sic vos ut victi audietis, et non id, quod amittitur, in damno, quum omnia victoris sint, sed, quicquid relinquitur, pro munere habituri estis. Urbem vobis, quam ex magna parto dirutam, captam fere totam habet, adimit, agros relinquit, locum assignaturus, in quo novum oppidum ædificetis. Aurum et argentum omne, publicum privatumque, ad se iubet deferri; corpora vestra, coniugum ac liberorum vestrorum servat inviolata, si inermes cum binis vestimentis velitis ab Sagunto eire. Hæc victor hostis iuperat; hæc, quanquam sunt gravia atque acerba, fortuna vestræe, vobis suadet. Equidem haud despereo, quum omnium potestas ei facta sit, aliquid ex his rebus remissurum; sed vel hæc patienda censeo potius, quam trucidari corpora vestræ, rapitrahique ante ora vestræe coniuges ac liberos belli iure sinatis."

Ad hæc audienda quum circumfusa paulatim multitudine permixtum senatui esset populi concilium, repente primores, secessione facta, priusquam respondum daretur, argentum aurumque omne ex publico privatoque in forum collatum in ignem ad id raptim factum coniicientes, codem plerique semet ipsi præcipitaverunt. Quum ex eo pavor ac trepidatio totam urbem pervassisset, alius insuper tumultus ex arce auditur. Turris diu quassata prociderat, perque ruinam eius cohors Pæorum impetu facto quum signum imperatori dedisset, nudatam stationibus custodiisque solitis hostium esse urbem, non cunctandum in tali occasione ratus Hannibal, totis viribus aggressus urbem momento cepit, signo dato, ut omnes puberes interficerentur. Quod imperium crudelcetere, ceterum prope necessarium cognitum ipso eventu est; cui enim parci potuit ex iis, qui aut inclusi cum coniugibus ac libris domos super se ipsos concremaverunt aut armati nullum ante finem pugnae quam mori-
5 entes fecerunt? Captum oppidum est cum ingenti praeda. Quanquam pleraque ab dominis de industria corrupta erant, et in caedibus vix ullum discriminæ ætatis ira fecerat, et captivi militum praeda fuerant, tamen et ex pretio rerum venditarum aliquantum pecuniae redactum esse constat et multam pretiosam supellectilem vestemque missam Carthaginem.

3 Octavo mense, quam cæptum oppugnari, captum Saguntum quidam scripsere; inde Carthaginem Novam in hiberna Hannibalem concessisse; quinto deinde mense, quam ab Carthagine profectus sit, in Italianam pervenisse.

4 Quæ si ita sunt, fieri non potuit, ut P. Cornelius, Ti. Sempronius consules fuerint, ad quos et principio oppugnationis legati Saguntini missi sint et qui in suo magistratu cum Hannibale, alter ad Ticinum amnem, ambo aliquanto post ad Trebiam, pugnaverint. Aut omnia breviora aliquanto fuere, aut Saguntum principio anni, quo P. Cornelius, Ti. Sempronius consules fuerunt, non cæptum oppugnari est, sed captum. Nam excessisse pugna ad Trebiam in annum Cn. Servilii et C. Flaminii non potest, quia C. Flaminius Ariminì consulatum iniit, creatus a Ti. Sempronio consule, qui post pugnam ad Trebiam ad creandos consules Romam quam venisset, comitiis perfectis ad exercitum in hiberna rediit.

16 Sub idem fere tempus et legati, qui redierant ab Carthagine, Romam rettulerunt, omnia hostilia esse, et Sagunti excidium nuntiatum est; tantusque simul mæror patres misericordiaque sociorum peremptorum indignæ et pudor non lati auxilii et ira in Carthaginenses metusque de summa rerum cepit, velut si iam ad portas hostis esset, ut tot uno tempore motibus animi turbati trepidarent magis quam consulerent: nam neque hostem acriorem bellicosioremque secum congressum, nec rem Romanam tam desidem unquam fuisse atque imbellem. Sardos Corsosque et Histros atque Illyrios lacesisset magis quam exercuisse Romana arma, et cum Gallis tumultuatum verius quam belligeratum; Pœnum hostem veteranum, trium et viginti annorum militia durissima inter Hispanas gentes semper victorem, duci acerrimo assuetum, recentem ab excidio opulentissimae urbis, Hiberum transire; trahere secum tot excitos Hispanorum populos; concitatum avidas semper armorum Gallicas gentes; cum orbe terrarum bellum gerendum in Italia ac pro mœnibus Romanis esse.

Nominatae iam antea consulibus provinciæ erant; tum sortiri iussī. Cornelio Hispānia, Sempronio Africa cum Sicilia evenit. Sex in eum annum decreta legiones et socium, quantum ipsis videretur, et classis, quanta parari posset. Quattuor et viginti peditum Romanorum millia scripta et mille ocingenti equites, sociorum quadraginta millia pedītum, quattuor millia et quadringenti equites; naves ducentae viginti quinqueremes, celoces viginti deducti. Latum inde ad populum, vellent inerent populo Carthaginiensi bellum indici; eisque belli causa supplicatio per urbem habita atque adorati dii, ut bene ac feliciter eveniret, quod bellum populus Romanus iussisset. Inter consules ita copiae divide: Sempronio datae legiones duæ (ca quaterna millia erant peditum et trecenti equites) et sociorum sedecim millia peditum, equites mille ocingenti; naves longae centum

C. L.
sexaginta, celoces duodecim. Cum his terrestribus maritimisque copiis Ti. Sempronius missus in Sicilianum, ita in Africam transmissurus, si ad arcendum Italia Pœnum consul alter satis esset. Cornelio minus copiarum datum, quia L. Manlius prætor et ipse cum haud invalido præsidio in Galliam mittebatur; navium maxime Cornelio numerus deminutus; sexaginta quin- queremes date (neque enim mari venturum aut ea parte belli dimicaturum hostem credebant) et duæ Romanæ legiones cum suo iusto equitatu et quattuor-decim millibus sociorum peditum, equitibus mille sex-centis. Duas legiones Romanas et decem millia sociorum peditum, mille equites socios, sexcentos Romanos Gallia provincia eodem versa in Punicum bellum habuit. His ita comparatis, ut omnia iusta ante bellum fient, legatos maiores natu, Q. Fabium, Q. Bæbium, in Africam mittunt ad percontandos Carthaginienses, publicone consilio Hannibal Saguntum oppugnasset, et, si, id quod facturi videbantur, faterentur ac defenderent publico consilio factum, ut indice-rent populo Carthaginiensi bellum. Romani postquam Carthaginem venerunt, quum senatus datus esset et Q. Fabius nihil ultra quam unum, quod mandatum erat, percontatus esset, tum ex Carthaginiensibus unus: "Praecepta vestra, Romani, et prior legatio fuit, quam Hannibalem tanquam suo consilio Saguntum oppugnamentem deoscopebatis; ceterum hæ legatio verbis adhuc lenior est, re asperior. Tunc enim Hannibal et insimulabatur et deoscopebatis; nunc ab nobis et confessio culpæ exprimitur et ut a confessis res extemplo repe-tuntur. Ego autem non, privato publicone consilio Saguntum oppugnatum sit, quærendum censeam, sed utrum iure an iniuria; nostra enim hæc quæstio atque animadversio in civem nostrum est, quid nostro aut suo fecerit arbitrio; vobiscum una disceptatio est, licueritne per fœdus fieri. Itaque quoniam discerni placet, quid publico consilio, quid sua sponte imperatores faciant, nobis vobiscum fœdus est a C. Lutatius consule dictum, in quo quam caveretur utrorumque sociis, nihil de Saguntinis (necdum enim erant socii vestri) cautum est. At enim eo fœdere, quod cum Hasdrubale dictum est, Saguntini excipiuntur. Adversus quod ego nihil dicturus sum, nisi quod a vobis didici. Vos enim, quod C. Lutatius consul primo nobiscum fœdusicit, quia neque auctoritate patrum nec populi iussu dictum erat, negastis vos eo teneri; itaque aliud de integro fœdus publico consilio dictum est. Si vos non tenent fœdera vestra nisi ex auctoritate aut iussu vestro dicta, ne nos quidem Hasdrubalis fœdus, quod nobis insciis dicta, obligare potuit. Proinde omittere Sagunti atque Hiberi mentionem facere, et quod diu parturit animus vester, aliquando pariat." Tum Romanus, sinu ex toga facto, "Hic" inquit "vobis bellum et pacem portamus; utrum placent, sumite." Sub hanc vocem haud minus feroctiter, daret, utrum vellet, suclamatum est; et quum is iterum, sinu effuso, bellum dare dixisset, accipere se omnes responderunt et, quibus acciperent animis, iisdem se gesturos.

Hæc directa percontatio ac denuntiatio belli magis ex dignitate populi Romani visa est quam de fœderum iure verbis disceptare, quum ante, tum maxime Sagunto excisa. Nam si verborum 2 disceptationis res esset, quid foedus Hasdrubalis cum Lutatii priore foedere, quod mutatum est, comparandum erat, quam in Lutatii foedere diserte addidum esset, ita id ratum fore, si populus censuisset, in Hasdrubalis foedere nec exceptum tale quicquam fuerit, et tot annorum silentio ita vivo eo comprobatum sit foedus, ut ne mortuo quidem auctore quicquam mutaretur? Quanquam, etsi priore foedere staretur, satis cautum erat Saguntinis, sociis utrorumque exceptis; nam neque additum erat "iis, qui tunc essent," nec, "ne qui postea assumerentur." Et quum assumere novos liceret socios, quis sequum censeret, aut ob nulla quemquam merita in amicitiam recipi aut receptos in fidem non defendi, tantum ne Carthaginiensium socii aut sollicitarentur ad defectionem aut sua sponto desciscentes recipierentur?

Legati Romani ab Carthagine, sicut iis Romæ imperatum erat, in Hispaniam, ut adirent civitates et in societatem pellicerent aut averterent a Pœnis, traiererunt. Ad Bargusios primum venerunt, a quibus benignè excepti, quia tædebat imperii Punici, multos trans Hiberum populos ad cupidinem novæ fortunæ erexerunt. Ad Volcianos inde est ventum, quorum celebre per Hispanicam responsum ceteros populos ab societate Romana avertit. Ita enim maximus natu ex iis in concilio respondit: "Quæ verecundia est, Romani, postulare vos, uti vestram Carthaginiensium amicitiae praeponamus, quum, qui id fecerunt, crudelius, quam Pœnus hostis perdidit, vos socii prodideritis? Ibi quæratis socios censeo, ubi Saguntina clades ignota est; Hispanicis populis sicut lugubre, ita insigne documentum Sagunti ruinæ erunt, ne quis fidei Romanae aut societatii confidat." Inde extemplo abire finibus Volciano-rum iussi, ab nullo deinde concilio Hispaniæ benigniora verba tulere. Ita nequicquam peragrata Hispania, in Galliam transeunt. In his nova terribilisque species visa est, quod armati (ita mos gentis erat) in concilium vencrunt. Quum verbis extollentes gloriam virtutemque populi Romani ac magnitudinem imperii petissent, ne Pœno bellum Italiam inferenti per agros urbesque suas transitum darent, tantus cum fremitu risus dicitur ortus, ut vix a magistratibus maioribusque natu iuventus sedaretur; adeo stolida impudensque postulatio visa est censere, ne in Italiam transmittant Galli bellum, ipsos id avertere in se agrosque suos pro alienis populandos obiicere. Sedato tandem fremitu, responsum legatis est, neque Romanorum in se meritum esse neque Carthaginiensium iniuriam, ob quæ aut pro Romanis aut adversus Pœnos sumant arma; contra ea audire sese, gentis suæ homines agro finibusque Italiam pelli a populo Romano stipendiumque pendere et cetera indigna pati. Eadem ferme in ceteris Galliæ conciliiis dicta auditaque, nec hospitale quicquam pacatumve satis prius auditum, quam Massiliam venere. Ibi omnia ab sociis inquisita cum cura ac fide cognita: præoccupatos iam ante ab Hannibale Gallorum animos esse; sed ne illi quidem ipsi satis mitem gentem fore. (adeo ferocia atque indomita ingenia esse), ni subinde auro, cuius avidissima gens est, principum animi concilientur. Ita peragratis Hispaniæ et Galliæ populis, legati Romam redeunt haud ita multo post, quam consules in provincias profecti erant. Civitatem omnem exspectatione belli erectam iuvenerunt, satis constante fama, iam Hiberum Pœnos transmisisse.

21 Hannibal Sagunto capto Carthaginem Novam in hiberna concesserat, ibique auditis, quæ Romæ quæque Hannibal winters at Carthago Nova, and sends his Spanish troops
belli, partitis divenditisque reliquis præ-dae nihil ultra differendum ratus, Hispani generis milites convocat. "Credo ego vos" inquit, "socii, et ipsos cernere, pacatis omnibus Hispaniae populis, aut finiendum nobis militiam exercitusque dimit tendos esse aut in alias terras transferendum bellum: ita enim hæ gentes non pacis solum, sed etiam victorïæ bonis florebunt, si ex aliis gentibus prædam et gloriam quæremus. Itaque quum longinquæ a domo instet militia incertumque sit, quando domos vestras et quæ cuique ibi cara sunt, visuri sitis, si quis vestrum suos invisere vult, commentum do. Primo vere edico adsitis, ut diis bene iuuantibus bellum ingentiæ gloriae prædæque futurum incipiamus." Omnibus fere visendi domos oblata ultræ potestas grata erat, et iam desiderantibus suos et longius in futurum providentibus desiderium.

3 Per totum tempus hiemis quies inter labores aut iam exhaustos aut mox exhauriendos renovavit corpora animosque ad omnia de integro patienda; vere primo ad edictum convenere.

9 Hannibal quum recensuisset omnium gentium auxilia, Gades profectus Herculi vota ex-solvit, novisque se obligat votis, si cetera prospera evenissent. Indepartiens curas simul in inferendum atque arcendum bellum, ne, dum ipse terrestri per Hispaniam Galliasque itinero Italianam peteret, nuda apertaque Romanis Africa ab Sicilia esset, valido praesidio firmare eam statuit; pro eo supplementum ipse ex Africa maxime iaculatorum, levium armis, petiiit, ut Afrī in Hispanicĭs, Hispanicĭs in Africa, melior procul ab domo futurus uterque miles, velut mutuis pigneribus obligati, stipendia facerent. Tredecim millia octingentos quinquaginta pedites ex tratos misit in Africam et funditores Bāliarēs octingentos septuaginta, equites mixtos ex multis gentibus mille ducentos. Has copias partim Carthagini præsidio esse, partim distribui per Africam iubet. Simul conquistoribus in civitates missis, quattuor millia conscripta delectae iuventutis, praesidium eosdem et obsides, duci Carthaginēm iubet. Neque Hispanicīs negligendam 22 ratus, atque id eo minus, quod haud ignarius erat, circumitam ab Romanis eam legatis ad sollicitandos principum animos, Ħasdrubali fratri, vīro impigro, eam provinciam destinat, firmatque eam Africīs maxime praesidiis, peditum Afrorum undecim millibus octingentis quinquaginta, Liguribus trecentis, Bāliaribus quingentīs. Ad haec peditum auxilia additi equites Libyphænicēs, mixtum Punicum Afrīs genus, quadrīngenti quinquaginta et Numidēs Maurique accolēs Oceāni ad mille octingenti et parva Ilergetum manus ex Hispanicĭs, ducentī equites, et, ne quod terrestres deesset auxilii genus, elephanti viginti unus. Classīs præterea data ad tuendam maritimam oram, quia, qua parte belli vicerant, ea tum quoque rem gesturos Romanos credi poterat, quinquaginta quinqueremes, quadrīremes duae, triremes quinque; sed aptae instructaeque remigio triginta et duae quinqueremes erant et triremes quinque.
Ab Cadibus Carthaginem ad hiberna exercitus redivit; atque inde profectus præter Onusam urbem ad Hiberum maritima ora ducit. Ibi fama est in quiete visum ab eo iuvenem divina specie, qui se ab Iove diceret ducem in Italiam Hannibali missum; proinde sequeretur neque usquam a se deflecteret oculos. Pavidum primo, nusquam circumspicientem aut respicientem, secutum; deinde cura ingenii humani quum, quidnam id esset, quod responsa vetitus esset, agitaret animo, temperare oculis ne-quivisse; tum vidisse post sese serpentem mira magnitude cum ingenti arborum ac virgulorum strage ferri, ac post insequi cum fragore caeli nimbum. Tum, quae moles ea quidve prodigii esset, quærantem audisse, vastitatem Italiam esse; pergeret porro ire nec ultra inquireret sineretque fata in occulto esse.

Hoc visu laetus tripertito Hiberum copias traiecit, præmissis, qui Gallorum animos, qua traducendus exercitus erat, donis conciliarent Alpiumque transitus specularentur. Nonaginta millia peditum, duodecim millia equitum Hiberum traduxit. Ilergetes inde Bargusiosque et Ausetanos et Lacetaniam, quæ subiecta Pyrenæis montibus est, subegit, oræque huic omni præfexit Hannonem, ut fauces, quæ Hispanias Gallis iungunt, in potestate essent. Decem millia peditum Hannoni ad præsidium obtinendæ regionis data et mille equites. Postquam per Pyrenæum saltum traduci exercitus est ceptus, rumorque per barbaros manavit certior de bello Romano, tria millia inde Carpetanorum peditum iter averterunt. Constabat, non tam bello motos quam longinquitate viae inexsuperabiliique Alpium transitu.
Hannibal, quia revocare aut vi retinere cos ances 5 erat, ne ceterorum etiam feroces animi irritarentur, supra septem millia hominum domos remisit, quos et ipsos gravari militia sense rat, Carpetanos quoque ab se dimissos simulans. Inde, ne mora atque otium animos sollicitaret, cum reliquis copiis Pyreneum transgreditur et ad oppidum Iliberri castra locat. Galli quanquam Italie bellum inferri audiebant, tamen, quia vi subactos trans Pyreneum Hispanos fama erat praesidiaque valida imposita, metu servitutis ad arma consternati Rusci-onem aliquot populi conveniunt. Quod ubi Hanni bali nuntiatum est, moram magis quam bellum metuens, oratores ad regulos eorum misit, colloqui semet ipsum cum iis velle; [et] vel illi propius Iliberrim accederent, vel se Ruscinonem processurum, ut ex propinquo congressus facilior esset; nam et accepturum eos in castra sua se lactum nec cunctanter se ipsum ad cos venturum; hospitem enim se Galliae, non hostem advenisse, nec stricturum ante gladium, si per Gallos liceat, quam in Italianam venisset.
Et per nuntios quidem hae; ut vero reguli Gallorum 5
castris ad Iliberrim extemplo motis haud gravanter ad Pœnum venerunt, capti donis cum bona pace exerci tum per fines suos prater Ruscinonem oppidum trans-miscrunt.

In Italianam interim nihil ultra, quam Hiberum 25 crosses the Pyrenees, and explains away the fears of Gallie transisse Hannibalem, a Massiliensium scripts Gaul legatis Romam perlatum erat, quam, per-provoked by the inde ac si Alpes iam transisset, Boii solli-Roman colonies of citatis Insubribus defecerunt, nec tam ob Placentia and Cre-veterec in populum Romanum iras, quam quod nuper circum Padum Placentiam Cremonamque colonias in agrum Gallicum deductas aegre patiebantur. Itaque armis repente arreptis, in eum ipsum agrum impetu facto, tantum terroris ac tumultus fecerunt, ut non agrestis modo multitudo, sed ipsi triumviri Romani, qui ad agrum venerant assignandum, diffusi Placentiae monocibus Mutinam confugerint, C. Lutatius; C. Servilius, M. Annius. Lutatii nomen haud dubium est; pro Annio Servilioque M'. Acilium et C. Herennium habent quidam annales, alii P. Cornelium Asinum et C. Papirium Masonem. Id quoque dubium est, legati ad expostulandum missi ad Boios violati sint, an in triumviros agrum metantes impetus sit factus. Mutinæ quum obsiderentur et gens ad oppugnandarum urbs arctes rudis, pigerrima eadem ad militaria opera, sequis intactis assideret muris, simulari cœptum de pace agi; avocatique ab Gallorum principibus legati ad colloquium non contra ins modo gentium, sed violata etiam, quæ data in id tempus erat, fide comprehenduntur, negantibus Gallis, nisi obsides sibi redderentur, eos dimissuros. Quum hæc de legatis nuntiata essent et Mutina praesidiumque in periculo esset, L. Manlius prætor ira accensus effusum agmen ad Mutinam ducit. Silvae tunc circa viam erant, plerisque incultis. Ibi inexplorato profectus in insidias præcipitat, multaque cum caede suorum aegre in apertos campos emersit. Ibi castra communita et, quia Gallis ad tentanda ea defuit spes, reflecti sunt militum animi, quamquam ad quingentos cecidisse satis constabat. Iter deinde de integro cœptum, nec, dum per patentia loca ducebatur agmen, apparuit hostis; ubi rursus silvae intratae, tum postremos adorti cum magna trepidatione ac pavore omnium septingentos milites occiderunt, sex signa ademere. Finis et Gallis territandi et pavendi fuit Romanis, ut e saltu invi atque impieto evasere. Inde apertis locis facile tu- tantes agmen Romani Tannetum, vicum propinquum Pado, contendere. Ibi se munimento ad tempus com- meatibusque fluminis et Brixianorum etiam Gallorum auxilio adversus crescentem in dies multitudinem hostium tutabautur. Qui tumultus repens postquam est Romam perlatus, et Punicum insuper Gallico bel- lum auctum patres acceperunt, C. Atilium praetorem cum una legione Romana et quinque milibus sociorum, dilectu novo a consule conscriptis, auxilium ferre Man- lio iubent; qui sineullo certamine (abscesserant enim metu hostes) Tannetum pervenit.

Et P. Cornelius, in locum eius, quae missa cum prætore erat, scripta legione nova, profectus ab urbe sexaginta longis navibus praeter oram Etruriae Ligurumque et inde Salyum montes pervenit Massiliam, et ad proximum ostium Rhodani (pluribus enim divisus amnis in mare decurrunt) castra locat, vixdum satis credens Hannibal, superasse Pyrenæos montes. Quem ut de Rho- dani quoque transitu agitare animadvertit, incertus, quonam ei loco occurreret, necdum satis refectis ab iactatione maritima militibus, trecentos interim delec- tos equites ducibus Massiliensibus et auxiliaribus Gallis ad exploranda omnia visendosque ex tuto hostes pra- mittit. Hannibal, ceteris metu aut pretio pacatis, iam in Volcarum pervenerat agrum, gentis validae. Colunt autem circa utramque ripam Rhodani; sed diffisi, citeriore agro arceri Poenum posse, ut flumen pro munimento haberent, omnibus ferme suis trans Rhodanum traiectis ulteriorem ripam amnis armis obtinebant. 7 Ceteros accolas fluminis Hannibal et eorum ipsorum, quos sedes suæ tenuerant, simul pellicit donis ad naves undique contrahendas fabricandasque, simul et ipsi traiici exercitum levarique quam primum regionem suam tanta hominum urgeunte turba cupiebant. Itaque ingens coacta vis navium est lintriumque temere ad vicinalem usum paratarum; novasque alias primum Galli inchoantes cavabant ex singulis arboribus, deinde ct ipsi milites, simul copia materiæ, simul facilitate operis inducti, alveos informes, nihil, dummodo innare aquæ et capere onera possent, curantes, raptim, quibus who forces the Rhone in spite of the opposition of the natives, se suaque transveherent, faciebant. Iam-que omnibus satis comparatis ad traii-ciendum, terrebant ex adverso hostes, omnem ripam equites virique obtinentes. Quos ut averteret, Hannonem Bomilcaris filium vigilia prima noctis cum parte copiarum, maxime Hispanis, adverso

flumine ire iter unius diei iubet et, ubi primum pos-sit, quam occultissime traiecto amni, circumducere

agmen, ut, quum opus facto sit, adoriatur ab tergo hostem. Ad id dati duces Galli edocent, inde millia quinque et viginti ferme supra parvæ insulae circum-fusum annem latiore, ubi dividebatur, eoque minus alto alveo transitum ostendere. Ibi raptim cæsa materia ratesque fabricatae, in quibus equi virique et alia onera traiicerentur. Hispani sine ualla mole, in utres vestimentis coniectis, ipsi caetris superpositis incuban-tes flumen tranavere. Et alius exercitus ratibus inunctis traiectus, castris prope flumen positis, nocturno

itinere atque operis labore fessus quiete unius diei
reficitur, intento duce ad consilium opportune exsequendum. Postero die profecti ex loco edito fumo significant, transisse, et haud procul abesse; quod ubi accept Hannibal, ne tempori decesset, dat signum ad traiciendum. Iam paratas aptatasque habebat pedes lintres, eques fero propter equos naves. Navium agmen ad excipiendum adversi impetum fluminis parte superiore transmittens tranquillitatem infra traiciientibus lintribus praebebat; equorum pars magna nantes loris a puppibus trahebantur, praeter eos, quos instratos frenatosque, ut extemplo egresso in ripam equiti usui essent, imposuerant in naves. Galli occursant in ripa cum variis ululatibus cantuque moris sui, quatientes seuta super capita vibrantesque dextris tela, quanquam et ex adverso terrebat tanta vis navium cum ingenti sono fluminis et clamore vario nautarum militumque, et qui nitebantur perrumpere impetum fluminis et qui ex altera ripa traiciientes suos hortabantur. Iam satis pavoribus adverso tumultu terribilior ab tergo adortus clamor, castris ab Hannone captis. Mox et ipse aderat, ancesque terror circumstabat, et e navibus tanta vi armatorum in terram evadente et ab tergo improvisa premente acie. Galli postquam utroque vim facere conati pellebantur, qua patere visum maxime iter, perrumpunt, trepidique in vicos passim suos diffugiunt. Hannibal, ceteris copiis per otium trajectis, spernens iam Gallicos tumultus castra locat.

Elephantorum traiciendorum varia consilia fuisse credo; certe variat memoria actae rei. Quidam congregatis ad ripam elephantis tradunt ferocissimum ex iis irritatum ab rectore suo, quum refugientem in aquam and of the difficulty of getting the elephants across, which is variously described in our authorities.
[quantem] sequeretur, traxisse gregem, ut quemque timentem altitudinem destuerit vadum, impetu ipso fluminis in alteram ripam rapiente. Ceterum magis constat, ratibus traiectos; id ut tutius consilium ante tem foret, ita acta re ad fidem pronius est. Ratem unam ducentos longam pedes, quinquaginta latam a terra in amnem porrexerunt, quam, ne secunda aqua deferretur, pluribus validis retinaculis parte superiore ripæ reliquitam pontis in modum humo iniecta constraverunt, ut belvae audacter velut per solum ingrederen-
tur. Altera ratis æque lata, longa pedes centum, ad traiciendum flumen apta, huic copulata est; tum elephanti per stabilem ratem tanquam viam, prægredientibus feminis, acti ubi in minorem applicatam trans-gressi sunt, extemplo resolutis, quibus leviter annexa erat, vinculis, ab actuariis aliquot navibus ad alteram ripam pertrahit; ita primis expositis, alii deinde repetiti ac traiecti sunt. Nihil sane trepidabant, donec continenti velut ponte agerentur; primus erat pavor, quum, soluta ab ceteris rate, in altum raperentur. Ibi urgentes inter se, cedentibus extremis ab aqua, trepidationis aliquantum edebant, donec quietem ipse timor circumpectantibus aquam fecisset. Excidere etiam sævientes quidam in flumen; sed pondere ipso.stabiles, deiectis rectoribus, quærendis pedetentim vadis in terram evasere.

29  Dum elephanti traiiciuntur, interim Hannibal Nu-midas equites quingentos ad castra Romana miserat speculatum, ubi et quantæ copie essent et quid pararent. Huic alæ equitum missi, ut ante dictum est, ab ostio Rhodani trecenti Romanorum equites occurrunt.

 Meanwhiile there is a sharp encounter between some cavalry sent out to reconnoitre on either side.
Praetum atrocius quam pro numero pugnantium editur; nam praeter multa vulnera caedes etiam prope par utrinque fuit, fugaque et pavor Numidarum Romanis iam admodum fessis victoriam dedit. Victores ad centum sexaginta, nec omnes Romani, sed pars Gallorum, victi amplius ducenti ceciderunt. Hoc principium simul omenque bellorum summæ rerum prospectum eventum, ita laud sanie incurruntam aicipitisque certaminis victoriam Romanis portendit.

Ut re ita gesta ad utrumque ducem sui redierunt, nec Scipioni stare sententia poterat, nisi ut ex consiliiis coeptisque hostis et ipse conatus caperet, et Hannibal balem incertum, utrum captum in Italiam intenderet iter an cum eo, qui primus se obtulisset Romanus exercitus, manus consereret, avertit a praesenti certamine Boiorum legatorum regulique Magali adventus, qui se duces itinerum, socios periculi fore affirmantes, integro bello, nusquam ante libatis viribus Italian aggrediendam censent. Multitudo timebat quidem hostem, nondum oblitterata memoria superioris bellii, sed magis iter immensum Alpesque, rem fama utique inexpertis horrendam, metuebat. Itaque Hannibal, postquam ipsi sententia stetit pergere ire atque Italiam petere, advocata contione, varie militum versat animos castigando adhortandoque: Mirari se, quinam pectora semper impavida repens terror invaserit. Per tot annos vincendtes eos stipendia facere neque ante Hispania excessisse, quam omnes gentesque et terræ, quas duo diversa maria amplectantur, Carthaginiensium essent. Indignatos deinde, quod, quicumque Saguntum obsedissent, velut ob noxam sibi dedi postularet populus Romanus, Hiberum traicisse ad delendum nomen Romanorum liberandumque orbem terrarum. Tuni nemini visum id longum, quam ab occasu solis ad exortus intende-rent iter; nunc, postquam multi maiores partem iti-eris emensam cernant, Pyrenœum saltum inter fer-cissimas gentes superatum, Rhodanum, tantum amnem, tot millibus Gallorum prohibentibus, domita etiam ipsius fluminis vi, traiectum, in conspectu Alpes ha-beant, quarum alterum latus Italiae sit, in ipsis portis hostium fatigatos subsistere, quid Alpes aliud esse credentes quam montium altitudines? Fingere altiores Pyrenœi iugis; nullas profecto terras cælum contingere nec inesuperabiles humano generi esse. Alpes quidem habitari, coli, gignere atque alere animantes; pervias fauces esse exercitibus. Eos ipsos, quos cernant, legatos non pinnis sublime elatos Alpes transgressos. Ne maiores quidem eorum indigenas, sed advenas Italiam cultores hastas Alpes ingentibus sœpe agminibus cum liberis ac coniugibus, migrantum modo, tuto transmisisse. Militi quidem armato, nihil secum præter instrumenta belli portanti, quid invium aut inesuperabile esse? Saguntum ut caperetur, quid per octo menses periculi, quid laboris exhaustum esse?
Romam, caput orbis terrarum, petentibus quicquam adeo asperum atque arduum videri, quod inceptum moretur? Cepisse quondam Gallos ea, quæ adiri posse Poenus desperet; proinde aut cederent animo atque virtute genti per eos dies toties ab se victæ, aut itineris finem sperent campum interiacentem Tiberi ac mœni-bus Romanis.

His adhortationibus incitatos corpora curare atque ad iter se parare iubet. Postero die profectus adversa ripa Rhodani mediterranea Galliae petit, non quia rector ad Alpes via esset, sed, quantum a mari recessisset, minus obvium fore Romanum credens, cum quo, priusquam in Italiam ventum foret, non erat in animo manus consereere. Quartis castris ad Insulam pervenit. Ibi Isara Rhodanuque annes diversis ex Alpibus dcurrentes, agri aliquantum amplexi confluent in unum; mediiis campis Insulae nomen inditum. Incolunt prope Allobroges, gens iam inde nulla Gallica gente opibus aut fama inferior. Tum discors erat. Regni certamine ambigebant fratres; maior et qui prius imperitarat, Braneus nomine, minore ab fratre et coetu iuniorum, qui iure minus vi plus poterat, pellebatur. Huius seditionis peropportuna disceptatio quum ad Hannibal reiecta esset, arbiter regni factus, quod ea senatorum principumque sententia fuerat, imperium maiori restituit. Ob id meritum commenata copiaque rerum omnium, maxime vestis, est adiutus, quam infames frigorisibis Alpes praeparari cogeabant. Sedatis Hannibal certaminibus Allobrogum quem iam Alpes peteret, non recta regione iter instituit, sed ad laevam in Tricastinos flexit; inde per extremam oram Vocontiorum agri tendit in Tricorios, haud usquam impedita via, priusquam ad Druentiam flumen pervenit. Is et ipse Alpinus annis longe omnium Galliae fluminum difficillimus transiuit; nam, quum aquae vim vehat ingentem, non tamen navium patiens est, quia nullis coercitus ripis, pluribus simul neque iisdem alveis fluens, nova semper vada novosque gurgites (et ob eadem pediti quoque incerta via est), ad hoc saxa glareosa volvens, nihil stabile nee C. L.
12 tutum ingredienti præbet; et tum forte imbribus auctus ingentem transgressabantibus tumultum fecit, quum super cetera trepidatione ipsi sua atque incertis clamoribus turbantur.

32 P. Cornelius consul triduo fere post, quam Hannibal a ripa Rhodani movit, quadrato agmine ad castra hostium venerat, nullam dimicandi moram facturus; ceterum ubi deserta munimenta nec facile se tantum prægressos assecuturum videt, ad mare ac naves rediit, tutius faciliusque ita descendenti ab Alpibus Hannibali occursurus. Ne tamen nuda auxiliis Romanis Hispania esset, quam provinciam sortitus erat, Cn. Scipionem fratrem cum maxima parte copiarum adversus Hasdrubalem misit, non ad tuendos tantummodo veteres socios conciliandosque novos, sed etiam ad pellendum Hispania Hasdrubalem. Ipse cum admodum exiguis copiis Genuam repetit eo, qui circa Padum erat exercitus, Italiam defensurus.

6 Hannibal ab Druentia campestris maxime itinere ad Alpes cum bona pace incolentium ea loca Gallorum pervenit. Tum, quamquam fama prius, qua incerta in maius vero ferri solent, præcepta res erat, tamen ex propinquo visa montium altitudo nivesque caelo prope immixtæ, tecta informia imposita rupibus, pecora iumentaque torrida frigore, homines intinsi et inculti, animalia inanimaque omnia rigentia gelu, cetera visu quam dictu fœdiora, terrorem renovarunt. Erigentibus in primos agmen clivos apparuerunt imminentes tumulos insidientes montani, qui, si valles occultiores insedissent, coorti ad pugnam repente ingentem fugam stragemque dedissent. Hannibal consistere signa ius-9 sit; Gallisque ad visenda loca præmissis, postquam comperit, transitum ea non esse, castra inter confragosa omnia præruptaque, quem extentissima potest valle, locat. Tum per cosdem Gallos, 10 haudsane multum lingua moribusque abhorrentes, quem se immiscuissent colloquiis montanorum, edoctus, interdiu tantum obsideri saltum, nocte in sua quemque dilabi tecta, luce prima subiit tumulos, ut ex aperto atque interdiu vim per angustias facturus. Die deinde 11 simulando aliud, quam quod parabatur, consumpto, quum eodem, quo constiterant, loco castra communis-rent, ubi primum degressos tumulis montanos laxatasque sensit custodias, pluribus ignibus quam pro numero manentium in speciem factis impedimentisque cum equite relictis et maxima parte peditum, ipse cum 13
expeditis, acerrimo quoque viro, raptim angustias evadit iisque ipsis tumulis, quos hostes tenuerant, con-sedit. Prima deinde luce castra mota et agmen reli-quum incedere cœpit. Iam montani signo dato ex 2 castellis ad stationem solitam conveniebant, quem re-pente conspiciunt alios, arce occupata sua, super caput imminentes, alios via transire hostes. Utraque simul 3 obiecta res oculis animisque immobiles parumper eos defixit; deinde, ut trepidationem in augustiis suoque ipsum tumultu miseri agmen videre, equis maxime consternatis, quicquid adiecissent ipsi terroris, satis ad. 4 perniciem fore rati, transversis rupibus per iuxta invia ac devia assueti decurrunt. Tum vero simul ab hosti-bus, simul ab iniquitate locorum Pœni oppugnabantur, pluseque inter ipsos, sibi quoque tendente, ut periculo
prius evaderet, quam cum hostibus certaminis erat.
Equi maxime infestum agmen faciebant, qui et clamoribus dissonis, quos nemora etiam repercussæque valles angebant, territi trepidabant, et icti forte aut vulnerati adeo consternabantur, ut stragem ingentem simul hominum ac sarcinarum omnis generis facerent; multosque turba, quum precipites deruptæque utrinque angustiæ essent, in immensum altitudinis deiecit, quosdam et armatos; sed ruinæ maxime modo iumenta cum oneribus devolvebantur. Quæ quanquam fœda visu erant, stetit parumper tamen Hannibal ac suos continuit, ne tumultum ac trepidationem augeret; deinde, postquam interrumpi agmen vidit periculumque esse, ne exutum impedimentis exercitum nequicquam incolorem traduxisset, decurrit ex superiore loco et, quum impetu ipso fudisset hostem, suis quoque tumultum auxit. Sed is tumultus momento temporis, postquam liberata itinera fuga montanorum erant, sedatur, nec per otium modo, sed prope silentio mox omnes traducti. Castellum inde, quod caput eius regionis erat, viculosque circumiectos capit, et captivo cibo ac pecoribus per triduum exercitum aluit; et, quia nec montanis primo percuslisi nec loco magno opere impediabantur, aliquantum eo triduo viæ confecit.

Perventum inde ad frequentem cultoribus alium, ut inter montanos, populum. Ibi non bello aperto, sed suis artibus, fraude et insidiis, est prope circumventus. Magno natu principes castellorum oratores ad Pœnum veniunt, alienis malis, utili exemplo, doctos memorantes amicitiam malle quam vim experiri Pœnorum: itaque obediente imperata facturos: commeatum itinerisque duces et ad fidem promissorum obsides acciperet. Hannibal nee temere credendum nee aspernandum ratus, ne repudiati aperte hostes fierent, benigne quam respondisset, obsidibus, quos dabant, acceptis et commecatu, quem in viam ipsi detulcrant, usus, nequaquam ut inter pacatos composito agmine duces eorum sequitur. Primum agmen elephanti et equites erant; ipse post cum robore peditum circumspectans sollicitus omnia incedebat. Ubi in angustiorem viam et parte altera subiectam iugo insuper imminenti ventum est, undique ex insidiis barbari, a fronte, ab tergo coerti, cominus, eminus petunt, saxa ingentia in agmen devolvunt. Maxima ab tergo vis hominum urgebat. In cos versa peditum acies haud dubium fecit, quin, nisi firmata extrema agminis fuissent, ingens in eo saltu accipienda clades fuerit. Tune quoque ad extremum periculi ac prope perniciem ventum est; nam, dum cunctatur Hannibal demittere agmen in angustias, quia non, ut ipse equitibus præsidio erat, ita peditibus quicquam ab tergo auxilii reliquerat, occursantes per obliqua montani, interrupto medio agmine, viam insedere, noxque una Hannibali sine equitibus atque impedimentis acta est. Postero die, iam segnius intercursantibus barbaris, iunctæ copiae, saltusque haud sine clade, maiore tamen iumentorum quam hominum pernicie, supersatrus. Inde montani pauciores iam et latrocinii magis quam belli more concursabant, modo in primum, modo in novissimum agmen, utcunque aut locus opportunitatem daret aut progressi morative aliquam occasionem fecissent. Elephanti sicut per artas præcipitesque vias magna mora agebantur, ita tutum ab hostibus, quacunque incederent, quia insuetis adeundi propius metus erat, agmen præbebat.
Liber XXI.

LIVII

4 Nono die in iugum Alpium perventum est per in-via pleraque et errores, quos aut ducent-tium fraus aut, ubi fides iis non esset, temere initæ valles a coniectantibus iter faciebant. Biduum in iugo stativa habita, fessisque labore ac pugnando quies data militibus; inmentaque aliquot, quæ prolapsa in rupibus erant, se-quendo vestigia agminis in castra pervenere. Fessis ædio tot malorum nivis etiam casus, occidente iam sidere Vergiliarum, ingentem terrem adiecit. Per omnia nive oppleta quum, signis prima luce motis, segniter agmen incederet, pigritiaque et desperatio in omnium vultu emineret, prægressus signa Hannibal in promuntorio quodam, unde longe ac late prospectus erat, consistere iussis militibus Italian ostentat subjectosque Alpinis montibus Circumpadanos campos, mæniaque eos tum transcendere non Italiae modo, sed etiam urbis Romanæ; cetera plana, proclivia fore; uno aut summum altero prælio arcem et caput Italiae in manu ac potestate habituros. Procedere inde agmen cœpit, iam nihil ne hostibus quidem præter parva furta per occasionem tentantibus. Ceterum iter multo, quam in ascensu fuerat (ut pleraque Alpium ab Italia sicut breviora, ita arrectiora sunt), difficilius fuit; omnis enim ferme via præceps, angusta, lubrica erat, ut neque sustinere se a lapsu possent nec, qui paulum titubassent, hærere affixi vestigio suo, aliique super alios et iumenta et homines succiderent.

5 But at length they reach the top of the pass and are encouraged by the thought that Italy
is in view.

6 Ventum deinde ad multo angustiorem rupem atque ita rectis saxis, ut ægre expeditus miles tentabundus manibusque retinens virgulta ac stirpes circa eminentes demittere sese posset. Natura locus iam ante præceps recenti lapsu 2 terræ in pedum mille admodum altitudinem abruptus erat. Ibi quem velut ad finem vicæ equites constitissent, miranti Hannibali, quæ res moraretur agmen, nuntiatur, rupem in-viam esse. Digressus deinde ipsæ ad locum visendum. Hand dubia res visa, quin per invia 4 circa nec trita antea, quamvis longo ambitu, circum-duearet agmen. Ea vero via insuperabilis fuit; nam quum super veterem nivem intactam nova modica alti-tudinis esset, molli nec præaltæ facile pedes ingredien-tium insistebant; ut vero tot hominum iumentorumque 6 incessu dilapsa est, per nudam infra glaciem fluentem-que tabem liquescentis nivis ingrediebantur. Taetra 7 ibi luctatio erat, [ut a] lubrica glacie non recipiente vestigium et in prono citius pedes fallente, ut, seu manibus in assurgendo seu genu se adiuvisset, ipsis adminiculis prolapsis iterum corruerent; nec stirpes circa radicesve, ad quas pede aut manu quisquam eniti posset, erant; ita in levi tantum glacie tabidaque nive volutabantur. Iumenta secabant interdum etiam in- 8 finam ingredientia nivem, et prolapsa iactandis gravius in connitendo ungulis penitus perfringebant, ut ple-raque velut pedica capta hærent in dura et alte con-creta glacie. | Tandem, nequicquam iumentis atque 37 hominibus fatigatis, castra in iugo posita, ægerrime ad id ipsum loco purgato; tan-tum nivis fodiendum atque egerendum fuit. Inde ad rupem muniendam, per quam unam via 2 esse poterat, milites ducti, quum cadendum esset sax-um, arboribus circa immanibus deiectis detruncatisque struem ingentem lignorum faciunt, eamque, quum et vis venti apta faciendo igni coorta esset, succendunt, ardentiaque saxa infuso aceto putrefaciunt. Ita torridam incendio rupe ferro pandunt molluantque anfractibus modicis clivos, ut non iumenta solum, sed elephanti etiam deduci possent. Quatriduum circa rupe consumptum, iumentis prope fame absumptis; nuda enim fere cacumina sunt et, si quid est pabuli, obruunt nives. Inferiora valles apricosque etiam colles habent rivosque et prope silvas et iam humano cultu digniora loca. Ibi iumenta in pabulum missa et quies muniendo fessis hominibus data. Triduo inde ad planum descensum, iam et locis mollioribus et accolarum ingeniis.

38 Hoc maxime modo in Italian perventum est, quinto mense a Carthagine Nova, ut quidam auctores sunt, quinto decimo die Alpibus superatis. Quantae copiae transgresso in Italian Hannibali fuerint, nequaquam inter auctores constat. Qui plurimum, centum millia peditum, viginti equitum fuisse scribunt; qui minimum, viginti millia peditum, sex equitum. L. Cincius Alimentus, qui captum se ab Hannibale scribit, maxime me auctor moveret, nisi confunderet numerum Gallis Liguribusque additis; cum his octoginta millia peditum, decem equitum ad ducta; (in Italia magis affluxisse veri simile est, et ita quidam auctores sunt;) ex ipso autem audisse Hannibale, postquam Rhodanum transierit, triginta sex millia hominum ingentemque numerum equorum et aliorum iumentorum amisisse. Taurini Semigalli proxima gens erat in Italian degresso. Id quum inter omnes constet, eo magis miror ambigu, quanam Alpes transierit, et vulgo credere, Pœnino (atque inde nomen ei ingo Alpium inditum) transgressum, Cælium per Cremonis ignum dicere transisse; qui ambo saltus cum non in Taurinos, sed per alios montanos ad Libuos Gallos deduxissent. Nec veri simile est, ea tum ad Galliam patuisse itinera; utique, quæ ad Pœninum ferunt, obsepta gentibus Semigermanis fuissent. Neque hæcule montibus his, si quem forte id movet, ab transitu Pœnorum ullo Seduni Veragri, incolæ iugi eius, nomen ferunt inditum, sed ab eo, quem in summo sacratum vertice Pœnimum montani appellant.

Peropportune ad principia rerum Taurinis, proxime genti, adversus Insubres motum bellum erat. Sed armare exercitum Hannibal, ut parti alteri auxilio esset, in reficiendo maxime sentientem contracta ante mala, non poterat; otium enim ex labore, copia ex inopia, cultus ex illuvie tabeque squalida et prope efferata corpora varie movebat. Ea P. Cornelio consuli causa fuit, quam Pisas navibus venisset, exercitu a Manlio Atilioque accepto tirone et in novis ignominiiis trepido, ad Padum festinandi, ut cum hoste nondum refecto manus consereret. Sed quam Placentiam consul venit, iam ex stativis moverat Hannibal Taurinorumque unam urbem, caput gentis eius, quia volentes in amicitiam non veniebant, vi expugnarat: et iuxisset sibi non metu solum, sed etiam voluntate Gallos accolas Padi, ni eos circumspectantes defectionis tempus subito adventu consul oppressisset. Et Hannibal movit ex Taurinis, incertos, quæ pars sequenda esset, Gallos presentem secuturos esse ratus. Iam prope in conspectu erant exercitus convenerantque duces sici inter se.
nondum satis noti, ita iam imbutus uterque quadam admiratione alterius. Nam Hannibalis et apud Romanos iam ante Sagunti excidium celeberrimum nomen erat, et Scipionem Hannibal eo ipso, quod adversus se dux potissimum lectus esset, praestantem virum credebat; et auxerant inter se opinionem, Scipio, quod, relictus in Gallia, obvius fuerat in Italiam transgresso Hannibali, Hannibal et conatu tam audaci traiciendarum Alpium et effectu. Occupavit tamen Scipio Padum traiicere, et ad Ticinum amnem motis castris, priusquam educeret in aciem, adhortandorum militum causa talem orationem est exorsus.

"Si cum exercitum, milites, educerem in aciem, quem in Gallia mecum habui, supersedissem loqui apud vos; quid enim adhortari referret aut eos equites, qui equitatum hostium ad Rhodanum flumen egregie viciissent, aut eas legiones, cum quibus fugiensem hunc ipsum hostem secutus confessionem cedentis ac detrectantis certamen pro victoria habui?"

Nunc quia ille exercitus, Hispaniae provinciae scriptus, ibi cum fratre Cn. Scipione meis auspiciis rem gerit, ubi cum gerere senatus populusque Romanus voluit, ego, ut consulem ducem adversus Hannibalem ac Pennos haberetis, ipse me huic voluntario certaminis obtuli, novo imperatori apud novos milites paucam verba facienda sunt. Ne genus belli neve hostem ignoretis, cum iis est vobis, milites, pugnandum, quos terra marique priore bello vicistis, a quibus stipendium per viginti annos exegistis, a quibus capta belli præmia Siciliam ac Sardiniam habetis. Erit igitur in hoc certamine is vobis illisque animus, qui victoribus et victis esse solet. Nee nunc illi, quia audent, sed quia necesse est, 7 pugnaturi sunt; nisi creditis, qui exercitu incolumi pugnam detrectavere, eos, duabus partibus peditum equitumque in transitu Alpium amissis, [quum plures pene perierint quam supersint,] plus spei nactos esse.
At enim pauci quidem sunt, sed vigentes 8
animis corporibusque, quorum robora ac vires vix sustinere vis ulla possit. Ef-figies immo, umbrae hominum, fame, frigore, illuvie, squalore enecti, contusi ac debilitati inter saxa ru-pesque; ad hoc præusti artus, nivé rigentes nervi, membra torrida gelu, quassata fractaque arma, claudi ac debiles equi. Cum hoc equite, cum hoc pedite pugnaturi estis; reliquias extreman hostium, non hostem habebitis; ac nihil magis vereor quam ne, quum vos pugnaveritis, Alpes vicisse Hannibalem videantur. Sed ita forsitan decuit, cum fœderum ruptore duce ac populo deos ipsos sine ulla humana ope committere ac profligare bellum, nos, qui secundum deos violati sumus, commissum ac profugatum conficere. Non vereor, ne 41
quis me hæc vestri adhortandi causa magnifice loqui existimet, ipsum aliter animo affectum esse. Licuit 2 in Hispaniam, provinciam meam, quo iam profectus eram, cum exercitu ire meo, ubi et fratrem consilii participem ac periculi socium haberem et Hasdrubalem potius quam Hannibalem hostem et minorem haud dubie molem belli; tamen, quum præterveherer navi-bus Galliæ oram, ad famam huius hostis in terram egressum, præmisso equitatu, ad Rhodanum movi castra.
Equestri prælio, qua parte copiarum conserendi ma-num fortuna data est, hostem fudi; peditum agmen, quod in modum fugientium raptim agebatur, quia assequi terra non poteram, regressus ad naves, quanta maxima potui celeritate, tanto maris terrarumque circuitu, in radieibus prope Alpium huic timendo hosti obvius fui. Utrum, quem declinarem certamen, improvisus incidisse videor an occurrere in vestigiis eius, laecessere ac trahere ad decernendum? Experiri iuvat, utrum alios repente Carthaginienenses per viginti annos terra ediderit, an iidem sint, qui ad Ægates pugnaverunt insulas et quos ab Eryce duodevicensis denariis æstimatos estimisit, et utrum Hannibal hic sit æmulus itinerum Herculis, ut ipse fert, an vectigalis stipendiariusque et servus populi Romani a patre relictus. Quem nisi Saguntinum seclus agitaret, respiceret profecto, si non patriam victam, domum certe patremque et fædera Hamilearis scripta manu, qui iussus ab consulate nostro præsidium deduxit ab Eryce, qui graves impositas victis Carthaginiensibus leges fremens mærensque acceptit, qui decedere Sicilia, qui stipendium populo Romano dare pactus est. Itaque vos ego, milites, non eo solum animo, quo adversus alios hostes soletis, pugnare velim, sed cum indignatione quadam atque ira, velut si servos videatis vestros arma repente contra vos ferentes. Licuit ad Erycem clausos ultimo supplicio humanorum, fame interficere; licuit victricem classem in Africam traiciere atque intra paucos dies sineullo certamine Carthaginem delere; veniam dedimus precanibus, emisimus ex obsidione, pacem cum victis fecimus, tutelæ deinde nostræ duximus, quum Africo bello urgerentur. Pro his impertitis furiosum iuvenem sequentes oppugnatum patriam nostram veniunt. Atque utinam pro decore tantum hoc vobis et non pro salute esset certamen! Non de possessione Sicilīae ac Sar- diniae, de quibus quondam agebatur, sed pro Italia vobis est pugnandum. Nec est alius ab tergo exercitus, qui, nisi nos vincimus, hosti obsistat, nec Alpes aliae sunt, quas dum superant, comparari nova pos- sint præsidia; hic est obstandum, milites, velut si ante Romana mænia pugnemus. Unusquisque se non corpus suum, sed coniugem ac liberos parvos armis protegere putet; nec domesticas solum agitet curas, sed identidem hoc animo reparet, nostras nunc intueri manus senatum populumque Romanum: qualis nostra vis virtusque fuerit, talem deinde fortunam illius urbis ac Romani imperii fore.”

Hæc apud Romanos consul. Hannibal rebus prius quam verbis adhortandos milites ratus, circumdato ad spectaculum exercitu, captivos montanos vinctos in medio statuit, armisque Gal- licis ante pedes eorum proiectis, interro- gare interpretem iussit, ecquis, si vinculis levaretur armaque et equum victor acciperet, decertare ferro vellet. Quum ad unum omnes ferrum pugnam- que poscerent et deicta in id sors esset, se quisque cum optabat, quem fortuna in id certamen legeret, et, ut euisque sors exciderat, alacer, inter gratulantes gaudio exsultans, cum sui moris tripudiis arma raptim capiebat. Ubi vero dimicarent, is habitus animorum non inter eiusdem modo condicionis homines erat, sed etiam inter spectantes vulgo, ut non vincentium magis quam bene morientium fortuna laudaretur. Quum sic aliquot spectatis paribus affectos dimi-sisset, contione inde advocata ita apud eos locutus fertur.

2 "Si, quem animum in alienæ sortis exemplo paulo ante habuistis, eundem mox in æstimanda fortuna vestra habueritis, vicimus, milites; neque enim spectaculum modo illud, sed quædam veluti imago vestræ condicionis erat. Ac nescio, an maiora vincula maioresque necessitates vobis quam captivis vestris fortuna circumdederit. Dextra lævaque duo maria claudunt, nullam ne ad effugium quidem navem habentes; circa Padus amnis, maior [Padus] ac violentior Rhodano, ab tergo Alpes urgent, vix integris vobis ac vigentibus transitæ. Hic vincendum aut moriendum, milites, est ubi primum hosti occurrístis. Et cadem fortuna, que necessitatem pugnandi imposuit, premia vobis ea victoribus proponit, quibus ampliora homines ne ab diis quidem immortalibus optare solent. Si Siciliam tantum ac Sardiniam parentibus nostris ereptas nostra virtute recuperaturi essemus, satis tamen ampla pretia essent; quiequid Romani tot triumphis partum congestumque possident, id omne vestrum cum ipsis dominis futurum est; in hanc tam opimam mercedem, agite dum, diis bene iuventibus arma capite. Satis aehuc in vastis Lusitaniae Celtiberiæque montibus pecora consectando nullum emolumentum tot laborum periculorumque vestrorum vidistis; tempus est iam opulenta vos ac ditia stipendia facere et magna opere pretia mereri, tantum itineris per tot montes fluminaque et tot armatas gentes emensos. Hic vobis terminum laborum fortuna dedit; hic dignam mercedem emeritis stipendiis dabit. Nec, quam magni nominis bellum est, tam difficilem existimaris victoriam fore; sive et contemptus hostis cruentum certamen edidit et incliti populi regesque perlevi momento victis sunt. Nam dempto hoc uno fulgore nominis Romani, quid est, cur illi vobis comparandii sint? Ut viginti annorum militiam vestram cum illa virtute, cum illa fortuna taceam, ab Herculis columnis, ab Oceano terminisque ultimis terrarum per tot fero-cissimos Hispaniae et Galliae populos vincentes huc pervenistis; pugnatitis cum exercitu tirone, hac ipsa æstate caeso, victo, circumseesso a Gallis, ignoto adhuc duci suo ignorantique ducem. An me in prætorio patris, clarissimi imperatoris, prope natum, certe educ-tum, domitorem Hispaniae Galliaeque, victorem eundem non Alpinarum modo gentium, sed ipsarum, quod multo maius est, Alpium, cum semestri hoc conferam duce, desertore exercitus sui? cui si quis demptis signis Pænos Romanosque hodie ostendat, ignoratu-rum certum habeo, utrius exercitus sit consul. Non ego illud parvi aestimo, milites, quod nemo est vestrum, cuius non ante oculos ipse sæpe militare aliquod ediderim facinus, cui non idem ego virtutis spectator ac testis notata temporibus locisque referre sua possim decora. Cum laudatis a me millices donatisque, alumnus prius omnium vestrum quam imperator, procedam in aciem adversus ignotos inter se ignorantonesque. Quocunque circumtuli oculos, plena omnia video animorum ac roboris, veteranum pedite, generosissim-marum gentium equites frenatos infrenatosque, vos socios fidelissimos fortissimosque, vos, Carthaginienses, quem pro patria, tum ob iram iustissimam pugnaturas.
Inferimus bellum infestisque signis descendimus in Italiam, tanto audacius fortiusque pugnaturi quam hostis, quanto maior spes, maior est animus inferentis vim quam arcentis. Accendit præterea et stimulat animos dolor, iniuria, indignitas. Ad supplicium depoposcerunt me duce primum, deinde vos omnes, qui Saguntum oppugnassetis; deditos ultimis cruciatibus affecturi fuerunt. Crudelissima ac superbissima gens sua omnia suique arbitrii facit; cum quibus bellum, cum quibus pacem habeamus, se modum imponere æquum censet. Circumscribit includitque nos terminis montium fluminumque, quos non excedamus, neque eos, quos statuit, terminos observat. Ne transieris Hiberum; ne quid rei tibi sit cum Saguntinis. At non ad Hiberum est Saguntum. Nusquam te vestigio moveris. Parum est, quod veterrimas provincias meas, Siciliam ac Sardiniam, adimis? Etiam in Hispanias et, si indecessero, in Africam transcendes? Transcendes autem? Transcendisse dico. Duos consules huius anni, unum in Africam, alterum in Hispaniam miserunt. Nihil usquam nobis relictum est, nisi quod armis vindicatus. Illis timidis et ignavis esse licet, qui respectum habent, quos sua terra, suus ager per tuta ac pacata itinera fugientes accipient: vobis necesse est fortibus viris esse et, omnibus inter victoriam mortemve certa desperatione abruptis, aut vincere aut, si fortuna dubitabit, in prælio potius quam in fuga mortem oppetere. Si hoc bene fixum omnibus [destinatum] in animo est, iterum dicam, vicistis; nullum contemptu mortis telum ad vincendum homini ab dis immortalibus acerius datum est."
His adhortationibus quum utrinque ad certamen accensi militum animi essent, Romani ponte Ticinum iungunt, tutandique pot-tis causa castellum insuper imponunt; Pænus, hostibus opere occupatis, Maharbalcm cum ala Numidarum, equitibus quingentis, ad depopu-landos sociorum populi Romani agros mittit; Gallis parci quam maxime iubet, principumque animos ad defectionem sollicitari. Ponte perfecto traductus Romanus exercitus in agrum Insbrrium quinque millia passuum ab Ictumulis consedit. Ibi Hannibal castra habebat; revocatoque propere Maharbale atque equi-tibus, quam instare certamen cerneret, nihil un-quam satis dictum præmonitumque ad cohortandos milites ratus, vocatis ad con-tionem certa præmia pronuntiat, in quo- rum spem pugnarent: agrum sese daturum esse in Italia, Africa, Hispania, ubi quique vellet immunem ipsi, qui accepisset, liberisque; qui pecu-niam quam agrum maluisset, ei se argento satisfacturum; qui sociorum cives Carthaginienses fieri vellent, potestatem facturum; qui domos redire mallet, daturum se operam, ne cuius suorum popularium mutatam secum fortunam esse vellent. Servis quoque dominos prosecutis libertatem proponit, binaque pro iis mancipia dominis se redditurum. Eaque ut rata scirent fore, agnum læva manu, dextera silicem reti-nens, si falleret, Iovem ceterosque precatus deos, ita se mactarent, quemadmodum ipse agnum mactasset, secundum precationem caput pecudis saxo elisit. Tum vero omnes, velut diis auctoribus in spem suam quis-que acceptis, id moræ, quod nondum pugnarent, ad potienda sperata rati, prōlium uno animo et voce una poscunt.

7 Is pavor perculit Romanos, auxitque pavorem consulis vulneris periculumque, intercusru tum primum pubescentis filii propulsatum. Hic erat iuvenis, penes quem perfecti huiusce belli laus est, Africanus ob egregiam victoriam de Hannibale Pænisque appellatus. Fuga tamen...
effusa iaculatorum maxime fuit, quos primos Numidae invaserunt; alius confertus equitatus consulem in medium acceptum, non armis modo, sed etiam corporibus suis protegens, in castra nusquam trepide neque effuse cedendo reduxit. Servati consulis decus: Cælius ad servum natione Ligurem delegat; malim equidem de filio verum esse, quod et plures tradidere auctores et fama obtinuit.

Hoc primum cum Hannibale prœlium fuit; quo facile apparuit, [et] equitatu meliorem Pænum esse, et ob id campos patentes, quales sunt inter Padum Alpesque, bello gerendo Romanis aptos non esse. Itaque proxima nocte, iussis militibus vasa silentio colligere, castra ab Ticino mota festinatumque ad Padum est, ut ratibus, quibus iuxerat flumen, nondum resolutis sine tumultu atque insectatione hostis copias traïceret. Prius Placentiam pervenere, quam satis seiret Hannibal ab Ticino profectos; tamen ad sexcentos moratorum in citeriore ripa Padi, segniter ratem solventes, cepit. Transire pontem non potuit, ut extrema resoluta erant, tota rate in secundam aquam labente. Cælius auctor est, Magonem cum equitatu et Hispanis peditibus flumen extemplo tranasse, ipsum Hannibalem per superiöra Padi vada exercitum traduxisse, elephantis in ordinem ad sustinendum impetum fluminis oppositis. Ea peritis amnis eius vix fidem fecerint; nam neque equites armis equisque salvis tantam vim fluminis superasse veri simile est, ut iam Hispanicos omnes inflati vexerint utres, et multorum dierum circuitu Padi vada petenda fuerunt, qua exercitus gravis impedi- mentis traduci posset. Potiores apud me auctores 4—2 sunt, qui biduo vix locum rate iungendo flumini inventum tradunt; ea cum Magone equites Hispanorum expeditos præmissos. Dum Hannibal, circa flumen legationibus Gallorum audiendis moratus, traiectit gra-vius peditum agmen, interim Mago equitesque ab transitu fluminis diei unius itinere Placentiam ad hostes contendunt. Hannibal paucis post diebus sex millia a Placentia castra communivit, et postero die in conspectu hostium acie directa potestatem pugnæ fecit.

Insequenti nocte cædes in castris Romanis, tumultu tamen quam re maior, ab auxiliaribus Gallis facta est. Ad duo millia peditum et ducenti equites, vigilibus ad portas trucidatis, ad Hannibalem transfugiunt; quos Poenus benigno allocutus et spe ingentiun donorum accensos in civitates quemque suas ad sollicitandos popu-larum animos dimisit. Scipio cædem eam signum defectionis omnium Gallorum esse ratus, contactosque eo scelere velut iniecta rabie ad arma ituros, quanquam gravis adhuc vulnere erat, tamen quarta vigilia noctis inequentis tacito amine profectus, ad Trebiam fluvium iam in loca altiora collesque impedientes equiti castra movet. Minus quam ad Ticinum fefellit; mis-sisque Hannibal primum Numidis, deinde omni equi-tatu, turbasset utique novissimum agmen, ni aviditate prædæ in vacua Romana castra Numidiæ devertissent. Ibi dum perscrutantes loca omnia castrorum nullo satis digno moræ pretio tempus terunt, emissus hostis est de manibus; et quam iam transgressos Trebiam Romanos metantesque castra conspexissent, paucos moratorum occiderunt citra flumen interceptos. Scipio, nec vexationem vulneris in via iactati ultra patiens et collegam (iam enim et revocatum ex Sicilia audierat) ratus exspectandum, locum qui prope flumen tutissimus stativis est visus, delectum communiciit. Nec procul inde Hannibal quum consedisset, quantum victoria equestri elatus, tantum anxius inopia, quae per hostium agros euntem, nusquam preparatis commeatibus, maior in dies excipiebat, ad Clastidium vicum, quo magnum frumenti numerum congesserant Romani, mittit. Ibi quem vim pararent, spes facta proditionis; nec sane magno pretio, nummis aureis quadringerentis, Dasio Brundisino præfecto præsidii corrupto, traditur Hannibali Clastidium. Id horreum fuit Poenis sedentibus ad Trebiam. In captivos ex tradito præsidio, ut fama clementiæ in principio rerum colligeretur, nihil sævitud est.

Quam ad Trebiam terrestre constitisset bellum, interim circa Siciliam insulasque imminentes et a Sempronio consule et ante adventum cius terra marique res gestæ. Viginti quinqueremes cum mille armatis ad depopulandamoramItalië a Carthaginiensibus missæ; novem Liparas, octo ad insulam Vulcani tenuerunt, tres in fretum avertit aestus. Ad eas conspectas a Messana duodecim naves ab Hieroue rege Syracusanorum missæ, qui tum forte Messanae erat consulem Romanum opperiens, nullo repugnante captas naves Messanam in portum deduxerunt. Cognitum ex captivis, præter viginti naves, cuius ipsi classis essent, in Italian misssas, quinque et triginta alias quinqueremes Siciliam petere ad sollicitandos veteres socios; Lilybæi occupandi praecipuam curam esse; credere, eadem tem...
pestate, qua ipsi disiecti forent, eam quoque classem 6 ad Aegates insulas deiectam; Hae, sicut audita erant, rex M. Aemilio praetori, eius Sicilia provincia erat, perscribit, monetque, ut Lilybaeum firme teneret prasidio. Extemplo et a praetore circa civitates missi legati tribunique, qui suos ad curam custodiam intenderent, et ante omnia Lilybaeum teneri apparatu belli, edicto proposito, ut socii navales decem dierum cocta cibaria ad naves deferrent, ut, ubi signum datum esset, ne quid moram conscendendi faceret, perque omnem oram, qui ex speculis propiciarent adventantium hostium classem, missis. Itaque, quamquam de industria morati cursum navium erant Carthaginiensis, ut ante lucem accederent Lilybaeum, praesens tamen est, quia et luna pernox erat et sublatis armamentis veniebant.
Extemplo signum datum et speculis et in oppido ad
arma conclamationum est et in naves conscensum; pars militum in muris portarumque stationibus, pars in navibus erant. Et Carthaginienses, quia rem fore haud cum imparatis cernebant, usque ad lucem portu se ab-stinuerunt, demendis armamentis eo tempore aptandaque ad pugnam classe absunto. Ubi illuxit, recupere classem in altum, ut spatium pugnae esset exitumque liberum e portu naves hostium haberent.
Nec Romani detrectavere pugnam, et memoria circa ea ipsa loca gestarum rerum freti et militum multitu-dine ac virtute. Ubi in altum evacuati sunt, Romanus is routed off Lily-bæum.
conserere pugnam et ex propinquo vires conferre velle; contra eludere Pænus et arte, non vi rem gerere, naviumque quam virorum aut amorum malle certamen facere. Nam ut sociis navalibus affatim instructam classem, ita inopem milite habeant, et, sicubi conserta navis esset, haudquaquam par numerus armatorum ex ea pugnabat. Quod ubi 4 animadversum est, et Romanis multitudo sua auxit animum et paucitas illis minuit. Extemplo septem 5 naves Punicæ circumventæ; fugam ceteræ ceperunt.
Mille et septingenti fuere in navibus captis milites nautæque, in his tres nobiles Carthaginiensium. Classis 6 Romana incolumis, una tantum perforata navi, sed ca quoque ipsa reduce, in portum rediit.

Secundum hanc pugnam, nondum gnaris eius, qui 7
Messanae erant, Ti. Sempronius consul Messanam venit. Ei fretum intranti rex Hiero classem instructam ornatamque oviam duxit, transgressusque ex regia in 3 prætoriam naven, gratulatus sospitem cum exercitu et navibus advenisse, precatusque prosperum ac felicem in Siciliam transitum, statum deinde insulæ et Car-thaginiensium conata exposuit, pollicitusque est, quo animo priore bello populum Romanum iuvenis adiu-visset, eo senem adiuturum; frumentum vestimentaque 10
sese legionibus consulis sociisque navalis gratis prabiturum; grande periculum Lilybaeo maritimisque civi-tatibus esse, et quibusdam voluntibus novas res fore.
Ob hæc consuli nihil cunctandum visum, quin Lily-bæum classe peteret. Et rex regiaque classis una profecti. Navigantes inde, pugnatum ad Lilybæum fusasque et captas hostium naves, accepere. A Lilybæo 51 consul, Hierone cum classe regia dimisso relietoque prætore ad tuendam Siciliæ oram, ipse in insulam Melitam, quæ a Carthaginiensibus tenebatur, traiecit. Advenienti Hamilcar Gisgonis filius, præfectus præsidii, cum paulo minus duobus millibus militem oppidumque cum insula traditur. Inde post paucos dies reditum Lilybæum, captivique et a consule et a prætore, præter inserne nobilitate viros, sub corona venierunt. Postquam ab ea parte satis tutam Siciliam censebat consul, ad insulas Vulcani, quia fama erat stare ibi Punicam classem, traiecit; nec quisquam hostium circa eas insulas inventus; nam forte transmiserant ad vastandam Italiam oram, depopulatoque Viboniensi agro, urbem etiam terrebant. Repetenti Siciliam consuli escensiohostium in agrum Viboniensem facta nuntiatur, litteræque ab senatu de transitu in Italiam Hannibalis, et ut primo quoque tempore collegæ ferret auxilium, missæ traduntur. Multis simul anxius curis exercitum ex-templo in naves impositam Ariminum mari supero misit, Sex. Pomponio legato cum viginti quinque longis navibus Viboniensem agrum maritimamque oram Italiam tuendam attribuit. M. Æmilio prætori quinquaginta navium classem explevit. Ipse, compositis Siciliae rebus, decem navibus oram Italiam legens Ariminum pervenit. Inde cum exercitu suo profectus ad Trebiam flumen collegæ coniungitur.

52 Iam ambo consules et quicquid Romanarum virium erat, Hannibali oppositum, aut illis copiis defendi He joins Scipio on the Trebia, and is urgent to check the ravages of Hannibal.
posse Romanum imperium aut spem nullam aliam esse, satis declarabat. Tamen consul alter, equestri prælio uno et vulnere suo t'minutus, trahi rem malebat; recentis animi alter eoque ferocior nullam dilationem patiebatur.

Quod inter Trebiam Padumque agri est, Galli tum incolebant, in duorum praepotentium populorum certamine per ambiguum favorem haud dubie gratiam victoris spectantes. Id Romani, modo ne quid move-rent, æquo satis, Pænus periniquo animo ferebat, ab Gallis accitum se venisse ad liberandos eos dictitans. Ob eam iram, simul ut præda militem alcret, duo millia peditum et mille equites, Numidas plerosque, mixtos quosdam et Gallos, populari omnem deinceps agrum usque ad Padi ripas iussit. Egentes ope Galli, quum ad id dubios servassent animos, coacti ab auctoribus iniuriae ad vindices futuros declinant, legatisque ad consules missis, auxilium Romanorum terræ ob nimiam cultorum fidem in Romanos laboranti orant. Cornelio nec causa nec tempus agendæ rei placebat, suspectaque ei gens erat quum ob infida multa facinora, tum, ut alia vetustate obsolevissent, ob recentem Boiorum perfidiam; Sempronius contra continendis in fide sociis maximum vinculum esse primos, qui eguissent ope, defensos censebat. Collega cunctante, equitatum suum, mille peditum iaculatoribus ferme admixtis, ad defendendum Gallicum agrum trans Trebiam mittit. Sparsos et incompositos, ad hoc graves præda plerosque quum inopinato invasissent, ingentem terrorem caedere ac fugam usque ad castra stationesque hostium fecere; unde multitudine effusa pulsi rursus subsidio suorum prœdii transituere. Varia inde pugna sequentes ce- dentsque quum ad extremum æquassent certamen, maior tamen hostium caedes, penes Romanos fama victorîæ fuit. Ceterum nemini omnium maior iustiorque quam ipsi consuli videri; gaudio efferri, qua parte copiarum alter consul victus foret, ea se vicisse: restitutos ac refectos militibus animos, nec quemquam esse præter collegam, qui dilatam dimicationem vellet;

Hannibal quum, quid optimum foret hosti, cerneret, vix ullam spem habebat, temere atque improvide quicquam consules acturos; quum alterius ingenium, fama prius, deinde re cognitum, percitum ac ferox sciret esse, ferociousque factum prospero cum prædatoribus suis certamine crederet, adesse gerendæ rei fortunam haud diffidebat. Cuius ne quod praetemitteret tempus, sollicitus intentusque erat, dum tiro hostium miles esset, dum meliorem ex ducibus inutilem vulner faceret, dum Gallorum animi vigerent, quorum ingentem multi- dinem sciebat segnius secuturam, quanto longius ab

Sempronius ad tumultum Numidarum primum omnem equitatum, ferox ea parte virium, deinde sex millia peditum, postremo omnes copias, a destinato
LIVII

iam ante consilio avidus certaminis, eduxit. Erat forte brumae tempus et nivalis dies in locis Alpibus Appenninoque interiecit, propinquitate etiam fluminum ac paludum prægelidis.

Ad hoc raptim eductis hominibus at-que equis, non capto ante cibo, non ope ulla ad ar-cendum frigus adhibit, nihil caloris inerat, et quic-quad auræ fluminis appropinquabant, afflabat acrior frigoris vis. Ut vero refugientes Numidas inseque aquam ingressi sunt (et erat pectoribus tenus aucta nocturno imbri), tum utique egressis rigere omnibus corpora, ut vix armorum tenendorum po-tentia essent, et simul lassitudine et, procedente iam die, fame etiam deficere. Hannibalis interim miles, ignibus ante tentoria factis oleoque per manipulos, ut mollirent artus, misso et cibo per otium capto, ubi transgressos flumen hostes nuntiatum est, alacer ani-mis corporibusque arma capit atque in aciem procedit.

Baliares locat ante signa ac levem armaturam, octo ferme millia hominum, dein graviorem armis peditem, quod virium, quod roboris erat; in cornibus circum-fudit decem millia equitum, et ab cornibus in utram-que partem divisos elephasros statuit. Consul effuse sequentes equites, quum ab resistentibus subito Nu-midis incauti exciperentur, signo receptui dato revoca-tatos circumdedit peditibus. Duodeviginti millia Ro-mana erant, socium nominis Latini viginti, auxilia praeterea Cenomanorum; ea sola in fide manserat Gallica gens. Iis copiis concursum est. Prœlium a Baliaribus ortum est; quibus quum maiore robore legiones obsisterent, diducta propere in cornua levis armatura est, quæ res effecit, ut equitatus Romanus extemplo urgeretur. Nam quum vix iam per se re-sisterent decem millibus equitum quattuor millia et fessi integris plerisque, obruti sunt insuper velut nube iaculorum a Baliaribus coniecta. Ad hoc elephanti eminentes ab extremis cornibus, equis maxime non visu modo, sed odore insolito territis, fugam late facie-bant. Pedestris pugna par animis magis quam viribus erat, quas recentes Pœnus, paulo ante curatis corpo-ribus, in prælium attulerat; contra ieiuna fessaque corpora Romanis et rigentia gelu torpebant. Restitissent tamen animis, si cum pedite solum foret pugnatum; sed et Baliares, pulso equite, iaculabantur in latera, et elephanti iam in mediam peditum aciem sese tulerant, et Mago Numidæque, simul latebras eorum improvida præterlata acies est, exorti ab tergo ingentem tumul-tum ac terrorem fecere. Tamen in tot circumstanti-bus malis mansit aliquamdiu immota acies, maxime præter spem omnium adversus elephantos. Eos ve-lites ad id ipsum locati verutis coniectis et avertere et insecuti aversos sub caudis, qua maxime molli cute vulnera accipiunt, fodiebant. Trepidantesque et prope iam in suos consternatos e media acie in extremam ad sinistrum cornu adversus Gallos auxiliares agi iussit Hannibal. Ibi extemplo haud dubiam fecere fugam novusque additus terror Romanis, ut fusa auxilia sua viderunt. Itaque quum iam in orbem pugnarent decem millia ferme hominum, quum alia evadere nequissent, media Afrorum acie, qua Gallicis auxiliis firmata erat, cum ingenti cæde hostium perrupere, et, quum neque in castra reditus esset flumine interclusis neque praè imbri satis decernere possent, qua suis opem ferrent, Placentiam recto itinere perrexere. Plures deinde in omnes partes eruptiones factae; et qui flumen petiere, aut gurgitibus absumpsi sunt aut inter cunctationem ingrediendi ab hostibus oppressi; qui passim per agros fuga sparsi erant, vestigia cedentes sequentes agminis Placentiam contendere; aliis timor hostium audaciam ingrediendi flumen fecit, transgressique in castra pervenerunt. Imber nive mixtus et intoleranda vis frigoris et homines multos et iumenta et elephantes prope omnes absumpsit. Finis sequendi hostis Pœnis flumen Trebia fuit, et ita torpentes gelu in castra reiere, ut vix lætiam victoriae sentirent. Itaque nocte sequenti, quem præsidium castrorum et quod reliquam sauciorum ex magna parte militum erat, ratibus Trebiam traicerent, aut nihil sensere obstrepente pluvia aut, quia iam moveri nequibant præ lassitudine ac vulneribus, sentire sese dissimu-

The survivors larunt, quietisque Pœnis tacito agmine to Placentia, ab Scipione consule exercitus Placentiam est perductus, inde Pado traiectus Cremonam, ne duorum exercituum hibernis una colonia premeretur.

57 Romani tantus terror ex hac clade perlatus est, ut iam ad urbem Romanam crederent infestis signis hostem venturum, nec quicquam spei aut auxilii Sempronius consul advenit. Ita territis Sempronius consul advenit, ingenti periculo per ef-fusos passim ad prædandum hostium equites audacia magis quam consilio aut spe fallendi resistendivc, si non falleret, transgressus. Id quod unum maxime in praesentia desiderabatur, comitiiis consularibus habitis, in hiberna reidiit. Creati consules Cn. Servilius et C. Flaminius.

Ceterum ne hiberna quidem Romanis quieta erant, vagantibus passim Numidis equitibus et, ut quæque iiis impeditiora erant, Celtiberis Lusitanis-que. Omnes igitur undique clausi com- meatus erant, nisi quos Padonaves subveherent. Em- porium prope Placentiam fuit et opere magno munitum et valido firmatum præsidio. Eius castelli expugnandi spe cum equitibus ac levi armatura pro- fectus Hannibal, quum plurimum in celando incepto ad effectum spei habu- isset, nocte adortus non fefellit vigiles. Tantus re- pente clamor est sublatus, ut Placentiae quoque audi- retur. Itaque sub lucem cum equitatu consul aderat, iussis quadrato agmine legionibus sequi. Equestre interim prælium commissum, in quo, quia sauciuss Hannibal pugna excessit, pavore hostibus iniecto, de- fensum egregie præsidium est. Paucorum inde dierum quiete sumpta et vixdum satis percurato vulnere, ad Victumvias oppugnandas ire pergit. Id emporium Romanis Gallico bello fuerat; munitum inde locum frequentaverant accolae mixti undique ex finitimis populis, et tum ter- ror populationum eo plerosque ex agris compulerat. Huius generis multitudo, fama impigre defensi ad Placentiam præsidii accensa, armis arreptis obviam Hannibali procedit. Magis agmina quam acies in...
LIVII

via concurrerunt, et quum ex altera parte nihil præter inconditam turbam esset, in altera et dux militi et duci miles fidens, ad triginta quinque millia hominum a paucis fusae. Postero die deditione facta præsidium intra mœnia acceperet; iussique arma tradere quum dicto paruissent, signum repente victoribus datur, ut tamquam vi captam urbem diriperent, neque ulla, quæ in tali re memorabilis scribentibus videri solet, prætermissa clades est; adeo omnis libidinis crudelitatisque et inhumanæ superbiae editum in miseris exemplum est. Hæ fuere hibernæ expeditiones Hannibalis.

58 Haud longi inde temporis, dum intolerabilia frigora erant, quies militi data est, et ad prima ac dubia signa veris profectus ex hibernis in Etruriam ducit, cam quoque gentem, sicut Gallos Liguresque, aut vi aut voluntate adiuncturus. Transeuntem Appenninum adeo atrox adorta tempestas est, ut Alpium prope fœditatem superaverit. Vento mixtus imber quum fermentur in ipsa ora, primo, quia aut arma omittenda erant aut contra enitentes vertice intorti aßligebantur, constitere; dein quum iam spiritum includeret nec reciprocare animam sineret, aversi a vento parumper consedere. Tum vero ingenti sono cælum strepere et inter horrendos fragores micare ignes; capti auribus et oculis metu omnes torpere; tandem effuso imbre, quam eo magis accensa vis venti esset, ipso illo, quo deprensi erant, loco castra ponere necessarium visum est. Id vero laboris velut de integro initium fuit; nam nec explicare quicquam nec statuere poterant nec, quod statutum esset, manebat, omnia perseindente vento et rapiente. Et mox aqua levata vento quem super gelida montium inga concreta esset, tantum nivosae grandinis deicet, ut omnibus omissis procumberent homines, tegminibus suis magis obruti quam tecti; tantaque vis frigoris insecuta est, ut ex illa miscrabili hominum iumentorumque strage quam se quisque extollere ac levare vellet, diu nequiret, quia tórpentibus rigore nervis, vix flectere artus poterant. Deinde, ut tandem agitando sese movere ac recipere animos et rarís locis ignis fieri est caéptus, ad alienam opem quisque inops tendere. Biduum eo loco velut obsessi manser-e; multi homines, multá iumenta, elephanti quoque ex iis, qui prælio ad Tre- biam facto superfuerant, septem absumpti.

Degressus Appennino retro ad Placentiam castra movit, et ad decem millia progressus consedit. Postero die duodecim millia peditum, quinque equitum adversus hostem ducit; nec Sempronius consul (iam enim re-2 dierat ab Roma) detrectavit certamen. Atque eo die tria millia passuum inter bina castra fuere; pos-3 tero die ingentibus animis, vario eventu pugnatum est. Primo concursu adeo res Romana superior fuit, ut non acie vincerent solum, sed pulsos hostes in castra persequerentur, mox castra quoque oppugnarent. Hannibal, paucis propugnatoribus in vallo portisque positis, ceteros confertos in media castra receptit, intenosque signum ad erumpendum exspectare iubet. Iam 5 nona ferme diei hora erat, quam Romanus, nequiquam fatigato milite, postquam nulla spes erat potiundi castris, signum receptui dedit. Quod ubi Hannibal accepit laxatamque pugnam et recessum a castris vidit, extemplo equitibus dextra lævaque emissis in hostem, 7 ipse cum peditum robore mediis castris erupit. Pugna raro magis ulla aut utriusque partis pernicie clarior fuisset, si extendi eam dies in longum spatium sivisset; 8 nox accensum ingentibus animis prælium diremit. Itaque acrior concursus fuit quam caedes, et, sicut æquata ferme pugna erat, ita clade pari discessum est. Ab neutra parte sexcentis plus peditibus et dimidium eius 9 equitum cecidit; sed maior Romanis quam pro numero iactura fuit, quia equestris ordinis aliquot et tribuni militum quinque et praefecti sociorum tres sunt interfecti. Secundum eam pugnam Hannibal in Ligures, Sempronius LCcam concessit. Venienti in Ligures Hannibali per insidiias intercepti duo quæstores Romani, C. Fulvius et L. Lucretius, cum duobus tribunis militum et quinque equestris ordinis, senatorum ferme liberis, quo magis ratam fore cum iis pacem societatemque crederet, traduntur. 60 Dum hæc in Italia geruntur, Cn. Cornelius Scipio in Hispaniam cum classe et exercitu missus, quem ab ostio Rhodani prefectus Pyrenæosque montes circumvectus Em- 3 poriis appulisset classem, exposito ibi exercitu, orsus a Læetanis, omuem oram usque ad Hiberum flumen partim renovandis societatibus, partim novis instituendis Romanæ dicionis fecit. Inde conciliata clementiae fama non ad maritimos modo populos, sed in mediterraneis quoque ac montanis ad ferociores iam gentes valuit; nec pax modo apud eos, sed societas etiam armorum parta est, validæque aliquot auxiliorum co- 5 hortes ex iis conscriptæ sunt. Hannonis cis Hiberum

---

Cn. Scipio meant "time won over the Spanish tribes by his policy," suggesting that Scipio won over the tribes by his policy.
provincia erat; eum reliquerat Hannibal ad regionis eius præsidium. Itaque, priusquam alienarentur omnia, obviam eundum ratus, castris in conspectu hostium positis, in aciem eduxit. Nec Romano differentiam certamen visum, quippe qui sciret, cum Hannone et Hasdrubale sibi dimicandum esse, malletque adversus singulos separatim quam adversus duos simul rem gerere. Nec magni certaminis ea dimicatio fuit. Sex millia hostium caesa, duo capta cum præsidio castrorum; nam et castra ex-pugnata sunt, atque ipse dux cum aliquot principibus capiuntur, et Cissis, propinquum castris oppidum, ex-pugnatur. Ceterum præda oppidi parvi pretii rerum fuit, supellex barbarica ac vilium mancipiorum; castra militem ditavere, non eius modo exercitus, qui victus erat, sed et eius, qui cum Hannibale in Italia militabant, omnibus fere caris rebus, ne gravia impedimenta ferentibus essent, citra Pyrenæum relictis.

Priusquam certa huius cladis fama accideret, transgressus Hiberum Hasdrubal cum octo millibus peditum, mille equitum, tanquam ad primum adventum Romanorum occursurus, postquam perditas res ad Cissim amissaque castra accepit, iter ad mare convertit. Haud procul Tarracone classicos milites navalesque socios vagos palantesque per agros, quod ferme fit, ut secundae res negligentiam creent, equite passim dimisso cum magna cæde, maiore fuga ad naves compellit; nec diutius circa ea loca morari ausus, ne ab Scipione opprimetur, trans Hiberum sese receptit. Et Scipio raptim ad famam novorum hostium agmine actu, quam in paucos præfectos navium animadvertisset, præsidio 5—2 Tarracone modico relict, Emporias cum classe rediit.
Vixdum digresso eo, Hasdrubal aderat, et Ilergetum populo, qui obsides Scipioni dederat, ad defectionem impulso, cum eorum ipsorum iuventute agros fidelium Romanis sociorum vastat.

Excito deinde Scipione hibernis, toto cis Hiberum russus cedit agro. Scipio relictam ab auctore defectionis Ilergetum gentem quam infesto exercitu invasisset, compulsis omnibus Atanagrum, urbem, quae caput eius populi erat, circumsedit, intraque dies paucos, pluribus quam ante obsidibus imperatis, Ilergetes pecunia etiam multatos in ius dicionemque receptit. Inde in Auseta-nos prope Hiberum, socios et ipsos Pœno-rum procedit, atque urbe eorum ob-nessa, Læetanos auxilium finitimis ferentes nocte, haud procul iam urbe, quam intrare vellent, exceptit insidiis. Cæsa ad duodecim millia; exuti prope omnes armis domos passim palantes per agros diffugere; nec obsessos alia ulla res quam iniqua op-pugnantibus hiems tutabatur. Triginta dies obsidio fuit, per quos raro unquam nix minus quattuor pedes alta iacuit, adeoque pluteos ac vineas Romanorum operuerat, ut ea sola, ignibus aliquoties conjecctis ab hoste, etiam tutamentum fuerit. Postremo quam Amusicus princeps eorum ad Hasdrubalem profugisset, viginti argenti talentis pacti deduntur. Tarraconen in hiberna reditum est.

Romae aut circa urbem multa ea hieme prodigia facta aut, quod evenire solet motis semel in religionem animis, multa nuntiata et temere credita sunt, in quis, ingenuum infantem semestrem in foro olitorio trium-

Consulum designatorum alter Flaminius, cui æ legiones, quæ Placentiae hibernabant, sorte evenerant, edictum et litteras ad consullem misit, ut is exercitus idibus Martiiis Flaminius the consul designate who was peculiarly obnoxious to the patricians.
Arimini adesset in castris. Hic in provincia consulatum inire consilium erat memori veterum certaminum cum patribus, quæ tribunus plebis et quæ postea consul prius de consulatu, qui abrogabatur, dein de triumpho habuerat, invisus etiam patribus ob novam legem, quam Q. Claudius tribunus plebis adverso senatu atque uno patrum adiuvante C. Flaminio tulerat, ne quis senator, cuive senator pater fuisset, maritimam navem, quæ plus quam trecentarum amphorarum esset, haberet. Id satis habitum ad fructus ex agris vectandos; quæstus omnis patribus indecorus visus. Res per summam contentionem acta invidiam apud nobilitatem suasor legis Flaminio, favorem apud plebem alterumque inde consulatum peperit. Ob hæc ratus, auspiciis ementiendis Latinarumque feriarum mora et consularibus aliis impeditimentis retenturos se in urbe simulato itinere privatus clam in provinciam abiit. Ea res ubi palam facta est, novam insuper iram infestis iam ante patribus movit: non cum senatu modo, sed iam cum diis immortalibus C. Flaminium bellum gerere. Consulem ante inauspicato factum revocantibus ex ipsa acie diis atque hominibus non paruisse; nunc conscientia spretorum et Capitolium et sollemnem votorum nuncupationem fugisse, ne die initi magistratus Iovis optimi maximi templum adiret, ne senatum invisus ipse et sibi uni invisum videret consuleretque, ne Latinas indiceret Iovique Latiani sollemne sacrum in monte faceret, ne auspicato profectus in Capitolium ad vota nuncupanda, paludatus inde cum lictoribus in provinciam iret. Lixæ modo sine insignibus, sine lictoribus profectum clam, furtim, haud aliter quam si exilii causa solum vertisset. Magis pro maiestate vi-delicet imperii Arimini quam Romæ magistratum ini-turum et in deversorio hospitali quam apud penates suos prætextam sumpturum. Revocan-dum universi retrahendumque censuerunt et cogendum omnibus prius præsentem in deos hominesque fungi officiis, quam ad exercitum et in provinciam iret. In eam legationem (legatos enim mitti placuit) Q. Terentius et M. Antistius pro-fecti nihilo magis eum moverunt, quam priore consu-latulitteræmoverantab senatu missae. Paucos post dies magistratum iniit, immolantique ei vitulus iam ictus e manibus sacrificantium sese quum proripuisset, multos circumstantes cruore respersit; fuga procul etiam maior apud ignaros, quid trepidaretur, et con-cursatio fuit. Id a plerisque in omen magni terroris acceptum. Legionibus inde duabus a Sempronio prioris auni consule, duabus a C. Atilio prætore acceptis, in Etruriam per Appennini tramites exercitus duci est cœptus.
IAM ver appetebat; itaque Hannibal ex hibernis movevit, et nequicquam ante conatus transcendere Appenninum intolerandis frigoribus et cum ingenti periculo moratus ac metu. Galli, quos prædæ populationumque conciderat spes, postquam pro eo, ut ipsi ex alieno agro raperent agerentque, suas terras sedem belli esse premique utriusque partis exercituum hibernis videre, verterunt retro in Hannibalem ab Romanis odia; petitusque sæpe principum insidiis, ipsorum inter se fraude, cadem levitate, qua consenserant, consensum indicantium, servatus erat, et mutando nunc vestem, nunc tegumenta capitis, errore etiam sese ab insidiis munierat. Ceterum hic quoque ei timor causa fuit matutarius movendi ex hibernis.

Per idem tempus Cn. Servilius consul Romæ idibus Martiis magistratum iniit. Ibi quum de re publica rettulisset, redintegrata in C. Flaminium invidia est: duos se consules creasse, unum habere; quod enim illi iustum imperium, quod auspicium esse? Magistratus id a domo, publicis privatisque penatibus, Latinis feriis actis, sacrificio in monte perfecto, votis rite in Capitolio nuncupatis, secum ferre; nec privatum auspicia sequi, nec sine auspiciis profectum in externo ea solo nova atque integra concipere posse. Augebant metum 8 prodigia ex pluribus simul locis nuntiata; in Sicilia militibus aliquot spicula, in Sardinia autem in muro circumventi vigilias equi seipionem, quem manu tenuerat, arsisse, et litora crebris ignibus fulsisse, et scuta duo sanguine sudasse, et milites quosdam ietos fulminibus, et solis orbum minui visum, et Prænestes ardentes lapides cælo ceci-

Roma signum Martis Appia via ac simulacra luporum sudasse, et Cupæ speciem cæli ardentis suisse lunaque inter imbre cadentis. Inde minoribus etiam dictu prodigiiis fides habita: capras lanatas quibusdam factas, et gallinam in marem, gallum in femi-

His, sicut erant nun-

Decemvirorum monitu decretum est, Iovi primum donum ful-men aurum pondo quinquaginta fieret, et Iunoni Minervaeque ex argento dona darentur, et Iunoni reginae in Aventino Iunonique Sospitae Lanuvii maioribus hostiis sacrificaretur, matronaeque pecunia collata, quantum conferre cuique commodum esset, donum Iunoni reginae in Aventinum ferrent, lectisterniumque fieret, et ut libertinæ et ipsæ, unde Feroniae donum daretur, pecuniam pro facultatibus suis conferrent.

19 Haec ubi facta, decemviri Ardeæ in foro maioribus hostiis sacrificarunt. Postremo Decembri iam mense ad ædem Saturni Romæ immolatum est, lectisterniumque imperatum ([et] cum lectum senatores straverunt) et convivium publicum, ac per urbem Saturnalia diem ac noctem clamata, populusque eum diem festum habere ac servare in perpetuum iussus.

2 Dum consul placandis Romæ dis habendoque dilectu dat operand, Hannibal profectus ex hibernis, quia iam Flaminium con-sulem Arretium pervenisse fama erat, 2 quem aliud longius, ceterum commodius ostende-retur iter, propriorem viam per paludem petit, quo fluvius Arnus per eos dies solito magis inundaverat.

3 Hispanos et Afros (id omne veterani erat robur exer-citum) admixtis ipsorum impedimentis, necubi consistere coactis necessaria ad usus deessent, primos ire iussit; sequi Gallos, ut id agminis medium esset; novissimos ire equites; Magonem inde cum expeditis Numidis cogere agmen, maxime Gallos, si tædio laboris longœque vise, ut est mollis ad talia gens, dilaberentur 4 aut subsisterent, cohibentem. Primi, qua modo pra-irent duces, per præaltas fluvii ac profundas voragines, hausti pæne limo immergentesque se, tamen signa se-quebantur. Galli neque sustinere se prolapsi neque assurgere ex voraginisibus poterant, nec aut corpora animis aut animos spe sustinebant, alii fessa ægre trahentes membra, alii, ubi semel victis tædio animis procubuissent, inter iumenta et ipsa iacentia passim morientes; maximeque omnium vigiliae conficiabant per quattuor iam et tres noctes toleratæ. Quum, omnia obtinentibus aquis, nihil, ubi in sicco fessa sternenter corpora, inveniri posset, cumulatis in aqua sarcinis insuper incumbebant, aut iumentorum itinere toto prostratorum passim acervi tantum, quod extaret aqua, quærentibus ad quietem parvi temporis necessarium cubile dabant. Ipsæ Hannibal æger oculis ex vero primum intemperie variante calores frigoraque, elephanto, qui unus superfuerat, quo altius ab aqua extaret, vectus, vigiliiis tamen et nocturno humore palustrique æculo gravante caput, et quia medendi nec locus nec tempus erat, altero oculo capitur.

Multis hominibus iumentisque foedæ amissis quum tandem de paludibus emersisset, ubi primum in sicco potuit, castra locat, circa tumque per præmissos exploratores habuit, exerci-tum Romanum circa Arretii menia esse. Consulis deinde consilia atque animum et situm regionum itineraque et copias ad commeatus expe-diendos et cetera, quæ cognosse in rem erat, summa omnia cum cura inquiringo exsequebatur. Regio erat in primis Italæ fertilis, Etrusci campi, qui Fæsulas inter Arretiumque iacent, frumenti ac pecoris et omnium copia rerum opulentii; consul ferox ab consulatu priore et non modo legum aut patrum maiestatis, sed ne deorum quidem satis metuens; hanc insitam ingenio eius temeritatem fortunam prospero civilibus bellicosisque rebus successu alue-rat. Itaque satis apparebat, nec deos nec homines consulentem ferociter omnia ac præpropere acturum; quoque pronior esset in vitia sua, agitare eum atque irritare Pœnus parat, et læva relicto hoste Fæsulas petens, medio Etruriae agro prædatum profectus, quam-tam maximam vastitatem potest, caedibus incendiisique consuli procul ostendit. Flaminius, qui ne quieto quidem hoste ipse quieturus erat, tum vero, postquam res sociorum ante oculos prope suos ferri agique vidit, suum id dedecus ratus, per medium iam Italiam vagari Pœnum atque obsistente nullo ad ipsa Romana mœnia ire oppugnanda, ceteris omnibus in consilio salutaria magis quam speciosa suadentibus: collegam exspectandum, ut coniunctis exercitibus, communi animo consilioque rem gererent, interim equitatu auxiliisque levium armorum ab effusa prædandi licentia hostem cohibendum, iratus se ex consilio proripuit, signumque simul itineris pugnæque quum proposuisset, "Immo Arretii ante mœnia sedeamus" inquit; "hic enim patria et penates sunt. Hannibal emissus e manibus perpopuletur Italiam vastandoque et uerendo omnia ad Romana mœnia perveniat, nec ante nos hinc moverimus, quam, sicut olim Camillum ab Veis, C. Flaminium ab Arretio patres acciverint." Hæc simul increpans quum oeiis signa convelli iuberet et ipse in equum insiluisset, equus repente corruit consulemque lapsum super caput effudit. Territis omnibus, qui circa erant, velut foedorum omne incipianda rei, insuper aucti-tatur, signum omni vi moliente signiferō convelli ne-quire. Conversus ad nuntium "Num litteras quoque" inquit "ab senatu affers, quae me rem gerere vetent? Abi, nuntia, effodiunt signum, si ad convellendum manus pra metu obtorquerunt." Incedere inde agmen cópit, primoribus, superquam quod dissenserant ab consilio, territis etiam duplici prodigio, milite in vulgus laeto feroea ducis, quum spem magis ipsam quam causam spei intueretur.

Hannibal, quod agri est inter Cortonam urbem Trasumennumque lacum, omni clade belli pervastat, quo magis iram hosti ad vindicandas sociorum injurias acuat; et iam pervenerant ad loca nata insidiis, ubi maxime montes Cortonenses Trasumennus subit. Via tantum interest perangusta, velut ad id ipsum de industria relictó spatio; deinde paulo latior patescit campus; inde colles insurgunt. Ibi castra in aperto locat, ubi ipse cum Afris modo Hispanisque consideret; Baliaraes ceteramque lemem armaturam post montes circumducit; equites ad ipsas fauces saltus, tumulis apte tegentibus, locat, ut, ubi intrassent Romani, objecto equitatu clausa omnia lacu ac montibus essent.

Flaminius quum pridie solis occasu ad lacum pervenisset, inexplorato postero die vixdum satis certa luce angustiis superatis, postquam in patentiorem campum pandi agmen cópit, id tantum hostium, quod ex adverso erat, conspexit; ab tergo ac super caput decepta insidiæ. Pœnus ubi, id quod petierat, clausum lacu ac montibus et circumfusum suis copiis habuit hos tem, signum omnibus dat simul invadendi. Qui ubi, qua cuique proximum fuit, decucurrerunt, eo magis Romanis subita atque improvisa res fuit, quod orta ex lacu nebula campo quam montibus densior sederat, agminaque hostium ex pluribus collibus ipsa inter se satis conspecta eoque magis pariter decucurrerant. Romanus clamore prius undique orto, quam satis cerneret, se circumventum esse sensit, et ante in frontem lateraque pugnari cœptum est, quam satis instrueretur acies aut expediri arma stringique gladii possent. Consul, perculsis omnibus, ipse satis, ut in re trepida, impavidus turbatos ordines, vertente se quoque ad dissonos clamores, instruct, ut tempus locusque patitur, et quandunque adire audire potest, adhortatur ac stare ac pugnare iubet: nec enim inde votis aut imploratione deum, sed vi ac virtute evadendum esse; per medias acies ferro viam fieri et, quo timoris minus sit, eo minus ferme periculi esse. Ceterum præ strepitu ac tumultu nec consilium nec imperium accipi poterat, tantumque aberat, ut sua signa atque ordines et locum noscerent, ut vix ad arma capienda aptandaque pugnae competeret animus, opprimerenturque quidam onerati magis iis quam tecti. Et erat in tanta caligine maior usus aurium quam oculorum. Ad gemitus vulneratorum ictusque corporum aut armorum et mixtos strepantium paventiumque clamores circumferebant orae oculosque. Alii fugientes pugnantium globo illati hærebant; alios redeuntes in pugnam averterbat fugientium agmen. Deinde, ubi in omnes partes nequicquam impetus capti, et ab lateribus montes ac lacus, a fronte et ab tergo hostium acies claudebat, apparuitque, nullam nisi in dextera ferroque salutis spem esse, tum sibi quisque dux adhortatorque factus ad rem gerendam et nova de integro exorta pugna est, non illa ordinata per principes hastatosque ac triarios, nec ut pro signis antesignani, post signa alia pugnaret acies, nec ut in sua legione miles aut cohorte aut manipulo esset; fors conglobabat et animus suus cuique ante aut post pugnandi ordinem dabat, tantusque fuit ardor animorum, adeo intentus pugnae [animus], ut eum motum terrae, qui multarum urbium Italiæ magnas partes prostravit avertitque cursu rapidos amnes, mare fluminibus invexit, montes lapsu ingenti proruit, nemo pugnantium sensorit.

Tres ferme horas pugnatum est et ubique atrociter; circa consulem tamen acrior infestiorque pugna est. Eum et robora virorum sequabantur, et ipse, quacunque in parte premi ac laborare sensorat suos, impigire ferebat opem, insignemque armis et hostes sumvi vi petebant et tuebantur cives, donec Insuber eques (Ducario nomen erat) facie quoque noscitans consulem, "En" inquit "hic est" popularibus suis, "qui legiones nostras cecidit agrosque et urbem est depopulatus; iam ego hanc victimam manibus peremptorum fœde civium dabo." Subditisque calcaribus equo per certissimam hostium turbam impetum facit, obruncatoque prius armigero, qui se infesto venienti obviam obiecerat, consulem lancea transfixit; spoliare cupientem triarii obiectis scutis arcuere. Magnæ partis fugæ inde primum coepit; et iam nec lacus nec montes pavori obstabat; per omnia arte præruptaque velut cæci evadunt, armaque et viri super alium alii præcipitantur. Pars magna, ubi locus fugæ deest, per prima vada paludis in aquam progressi, quoad capitis humerisque extare possunt, sese immergunt; fuere, quos inconsultus pavor nando etiamself falls fighting bravely to the last, the rest are cut down dispersed.

capessere fugam impulerit; quae ubi immensa ac sine spe erat, aut deficientibus animis hauriebantur gurgitibus aut nequiquam fessi vada retro ægerrime repetebant, atque ibi ab ingressis aquam hostium equitibus passim trucidabantur. Sex millia ferme præmi agminis, per adversos hostes eruptione impigre facta, ignari ommium, quæ post se agerentur, ex saltu evasere, et quum in tumulo quodam constitissent, clamorem modo ac sonum armorum audientes, quæ fortuna pugnæ esset, neque scire nec perspicere præ caligine poterant. Inclinata denique re, quam incalescente sole dispulsa nebula aperuisset diem, tum liquida iam luce montes campique perditas res stratamque ostendere fæde Romanam aciem. Itaque ne in conspectos procul inmitteretur eques, sublatis raptim signis, quam citatissimo poterant agmine, sese abripuerunt. Postero die, quum super cetera extrema fames etiam instaret, fidem dante Maharbale, qui cum omnibus equestribus copiis nocte consecutus erat, si arma tradidissent, abire cum singulis vestimentis passurum, sese dediderunt; quæ Punica religionse servata fides ab Hannibale est, atque in vincula omnes coniecti.

Hæc est nobilis ad Trasumennum pugna atque inter paucas memorata populi Romani clades. Quindecim millia Romanorum in acie caesa; decem millia sparsa fuga per omnem Etruriam diversis itineribus urbem petiere; duo millia quingenti hostium in acie, multi postea [utrinque] ex vulneribus periere. Multiplex caedes utrinque facta traditur ab aliis; ego præterquam quod nihil auctum ex vano velim, quo nimis inclinant ferme scribentium animi, Fabium, æqualem temporis-bus huiusce belli, potissimum auctorem habui. Hannibal, captivorum qui Latini nominis essent, sine pretio dimissis, Romanis in vincula datis, segregata ex hostium cocervatorum cumulis corpora suorum quum sepeliri iussisset, Flaminii quoque corpus funeris causa magna cum cura inquisitum non invenit.

Romae ad primum nuntium cladis eius cum ingenti 6 terrore ac tumultu concursus in forum The tidings fill populi est factus. Matronae vagae per Rome with grief vias, quæ repens clades allata quæve fortuna exercitus esset, obvios percontantur; et quum frequentis contionis modo turba in comitium et curiam versa magis-tratus vocaret, tandem haud multo ante solis occasum
M. Pomponius prætor “Pugna” inquit “magna victi 8 sumus.” Et quamquam nihil certius ex eo auditum est, tamen alius ab alio impleti rumoribus domos re-ferunt, consulem cum magna parte copiarum cæsum;
superesse paucos aut fuga passim per Etruriam sparsos aut captos ab hoste. Quot casus exercitus victi fuerant, tot in curas dispertiti animi eorum erant, quorum pro-pinqui sub C. Flaminio consule meruerant, ignoran-tium, quæ cuiusque suorum fortuna esset; nec quisquam satis certum habet, quid aut speret aut timeat. Postero 11 ac deinceps aliquot diebus ad portas maior prope mulierum quam virorum multitudo stetit, aut suorum aliquem aut nuntios de iis oppressis; circumfundeb-banturque obviis sciscitantes, neque avelli, utique ab notis, priusquam ordine omnia inquisissent, poterant.
Inde varios vultus digredientium ab nuntiis cerneræs, 12
ut cuique læta aut tristia nuntiabantur, gratulantesque aut consolantes redeuntibus domos circumfusos. Fem-narum præcipue et gaudia insignia erant et luctus.
Unam in ipsa porta sospiti filio repente oblatam in 13
C. L.
complexu eius exspirasse ferunt; alteram, cui mors filii falso nuntiata erat, maestam sedentem domi, ad primum conspectum redeuntis filii gaudio nimio ex-animatam. Senatum praetores per dies aliquot ab orto usque ad occidentem solem in curia retinent, consultantes, quonam duce aut quibus copiis resisti victoribus Pœnis posset.

8 Priusquam satis certa consilia essent, repens alia nuntiatur clades, quattuor millia equitum cum C. Centenio propraetore missa ad collegam ab Servilio consule in Umbria, quo post pugnam ad Trasumenum auditam averterant iter, ab Hannibale circumventa. Eius rei fama varie homines affectit. Pars, occupatis maiore aegritudine animis, levem ex comparatione priorum ducere recentem equitum iacturam; pars non id, quod acciderat, per se aestimare, sed, ut in affecto corpore quamvis levis causa magis quam in valido gravior sentiretur, ita tum aegrae et affectae civitati quodcunque adversi incideret, non rerum magnitudine, sed viribus extenuatis, quae nihil, quod aggravaret, pati possent, aestimandum esse. Itaque ad remedium iam diu neque desideratum nec adhibitum, dictorem dicendum, civitas confugit; et quia et consul aberat, a quo uno dici posse videbatur, nec per occupatam armis Punicis Italiani facile erat aut nuntium aut litteras mitti, nec dictorem populo non consulto senatus creare poterat, quod nunquam ante eam diem factum erat, dictorem populus creavit Q. Fabium Maximum et magistrum equitum M. Minucium Rufum; hisque negotium ab senatu datum, ut muros turresque urbis firmarent et praesidia disponerent, quibus locis videretur, pontesque rescindenter fluminiunum: pro urbe ac penatibus dimicandum esse, quando Italiam tueri ne-quissent.

Hannibal recto itinere per Umbrian usque ad Spo-letiun venit. Inde, quam perpopulato agro urbem oppugnare adortus esset, cum magna caede suorum repulsus, coniectans ex unius coloniae haud maxime minime prospere tentatæ viribus, quanta moles Romanae urbis esset, in agrum Picenum avertit iter, non copia solum omnis generis frugum abundantem, sed refertum præda, quam effuse avidi atque egentes rapiebant. Ibi per dies aliquot stativa habita, refectusque miles hibernis itineribus ac palustri via proelioque magis ad eventum secundo quam levi aut facili affectus. Ubi satis quietis datum præda ac populationibus magis quam otio aut requie gaudentibus, profectus Praetutianum Hadrian-umque agrum, Marsos inde Marrucinosque et Pelignos devastat circaque Arpos et Luceriam proximam Apuliae regionem. Cn. Servilius consul, levibus proeliis cum Gallis factis et uno oppido ignobili expugnato, postquam de collegæ exercitusque caede audivit, iam mænibus patriæ metuens, ne abesset in discrimine extreo, ad urbem iter intendit.

Q. Fabius Maximus dictator iterum, quo die magistratum iniit, vocato senatu, ab diis orsus, Fabius begins with the observances of religion;
cærimoniarum auspiciorumque quam temeritate atque inscitia peccatum a C. Flaminio consule esse, quæque piacula iræ deum essent ipsos deos consulendos esse, pervicit, ut, quod non ferme decernitur, nisi quem tætra prodigia nuntiata sunt, decemviri libros Sibyl-linos adire iuberentur. Qui, inspectis fatalibus libris, rettulerunt patribus, quod eius belli causa votum Marti foret, id non rite factum de integro atque amplius faciundum esse, et Iovi ludos magnos et ædes Veneri Erycinæ ac Menti vendas esse, et supplicationem lectisterniumque habendum, et ver sacrum vovendum, si bellatum prosper esset resque publica in eodem, quo ante bellum fuisset, statu permansisset. Senatus, quoniam Fabium belli cura occupatura esset, M. Æmilium prætorem ex collegi pontificum sententia, omnia ea ut mature fiant, curare iubet. His senatus consultis perfectis, L. Cornelius Lentulus pontifex maximus, consulente collegium prætore, omnium primum populum consulendum de vere sacro censet: iniussu populi voveri non posse. Rogatus in hæc verba populus: “Velitis iubeatisne hæc sic fieri? Si res publica populi Romani Quiritium ad quinquennium proximum, sicut velim voveamque, salva servata erit hisce duellis, quod duellum populo Romano cum Carthaginiensi est, quæque duella cum Gallis sunt, qui cis Alpes sunt, tum donum duit populus Romanus Quiritium, quod ver attulerit ex suillo, ovillo, caprino, bovillo grege, quæque profana erunt, Iovi fieri, ex qua die senatus populusque iusserit. Qui faciet, quando volet quaque lege volet, facito; quo modo faxit, probe factum esto. Si id moritur, quod fieri oportebit, profanum esto, neque scelus esto. Si quis rumpet occidentve insciens, ne fraud esto. Si quis clepsit, ne populo scelus esto, neve cui cleptum erit. Si atro die faxit insciens, probe factum esto. Si nocte sive luce, si servus sive liber faxit, probe factum esto. Si antidea, ae senatus populusque iussisset fieri, faxitur, eo populus solutus liber esto." Eiusdem rei causa ludi magni 7 voti æris trecentis triginta tribus millibus trecentis triginta tribus tricente, præterea bubus Iovi trecentis, multis aliis divis bubus albis atque ceteris hostiis. Vo- tis rite nuncupatis, supplicatio edicta; supplicatumque iere cum coniungibus ac liberis non urbana multitudo tantum, sed agrestium etiam, quos in aliqua sua fortuna publica quoque contingebat cura. Tum lectisternium per triduum habitum, decemviris sacrorum curantibus. Sex pulvinaria in conspicuo fuerunt, Iovi ac Iunoni unum, alterum Neptuno ac Minervæ, tertium Marti ac Veneri, quartum Apollini ac Dianæ, quintum Vulcano ac Vestæ, sextum Mercurio et Ceres. Tum ædes vote. Veneri Erycinæ ædem Q. Fabius Maximus dictator vovit, quia ita ex fatalibus libris editum erat, ut is voveret, cuius maximum imperium in civitate esset; Menti ædem T. Otacilius prætor vovit.

Ita rebus divinis peractis, tum de bello reque publica dictator rettulit, quibus quotque legionibus victori hosti obviam eundum esse patres censerent. Decretum, ut ab Cn. Servilio consule exercitum acciperet; scriberet præterea ex civibus sociisque, quantum equitum ac peditum vide-retur; cetera omnia ageret faceretque, ut e re publica duceret. Fabius duas legiones se adiecturum ad Servilianum exercitum dixit. Iis per magistrum equitum scriptis Tibur diem ad conveniendum edixit. Edictoque proposito, ut, quibus oppida castellaque immunita essent, uti commigrarent in loca tuta, ex agris quoque demi-grarent omnes regionis eius, qua iturus Hannibal esset, tectis prius incensis ac frugibus corruptis, ne cuius rei copia esset, ipse via Flaminia profectus obviam consuli exercituque, quum ad Tiberim circa Orciculum prospexisset agmen consulemque cum equitibus ad se progredientem, viatorem misit, qui consuli nuntiaret, ut sine lictoribus ad dictatorem veniret. Qui quum dicto paruisset, congressusque eorum ingenti speciem dictaturae apud eives sociosque vetustate iam propo oblitos eius imperii fecisset, litterae ab urbe allate sunt, naves onerarias commetatum ab Ostia in Hispaniam ad exercitum portantes a classe Punica circa portum Cosanum captas esse. Itaque extemplo consul Ostiam proficisci iussus, navibusque, quae ad urbem Romanam aut Ostiae essent, completis milite ac navalis sociis, persequi hostium classem ac litora Italiae tutari. Magna vis hominum conscripta Romae erat; libertini etiam, quibus liberi essent et ætas militaris, in verba iuraverant. Ex hoc urbano exercitu, qui minores quinque et triginta annis erant, in naves impositi, alii, ut urbi præsiderent, relictì.

Dictator, exercitu consulis accepto a Fulvio Flacco legato, per agrum Sabinum Tibur, quo diem ad conveniendum edixerat novis militibus, venit. Inde Praeneste ac transversis limitibus in viam Latinam est egressus, unde, itineribus summa cum cura exploratis, ad hostem ducit, nullo loco, nisi quantum necessitas cogeret, fortuna se commissurus. Quo primum die haud procul Arpis in conspectu hostium posuit castra, nulla mora facta, quin Pœnus educeret in aciem copiamque pugnandi and to despatch the consul with a fleet to guard the coasts.

LIBER XXII.

facieret. Sed ubi quieta omnia apud hostes nec castra ullo tumultu mota videt, increpans quidem, victos tandem [quos] Martios animos Romanis, debellatumque et concessum propalam de virtute ac gloria esse, in castra rediit; ceterum tacita cura animum incessit, quod cum duce haudquaquam Flaminii Semproniiique simili futura sibi res esset ac tum demum edocti malis Romani parem Hannibali ducem quæssissent. Et prudentiam quidem novi dictatoris extemplo timuit; constantiam hauddum expertus, agitare ac tentare animum movendo crebro castra populandoque in oculis eius agros sociorum cœpit, et modo citato agmine ex conspectu abibat, modo repente in aliquo flexu viæ, si excipere degressum in æquam posset, occultus subsistebat. Fabius per loca alta agmen ducebat, modico ab hoste intervallo, ut neque omitteret eum neque congrederetur. Castris, nisi quantum usus necessarii cogerent, tenebatur miles; pabulum et ligna nec pauci petebant nec passim; equitum levisque armaturæ statio, composita instructaque in subitos tumultus, et suo militi tuta omnia et infesta effusis hostium populatoribus præbebat; neque universo periculo summa rerum committebatur, et parva momenta levium cer- taminum ex tuto cœptorum, finitimo receptu, assuefaciebant territum pristinis cladibus militem minus iam tandem aut virtutis aut fortunæ pænitere suæ. Sed non Hannibalem magis infestum tam sanis consiliis habebat quam magistrum equitum, qui nihil aliud, quam quod impar erat imperio, moræ ad rem publicam præcipitandam habebat, ferox rapidusque consiliis ac lingua immodicus. Primo inter paucos, dein propalám in vulgus pro cunctatore segnem, pro cauto timidum affingens vicina virtutibus vitia, compellabat, premendoque superiorem, quæ pessima ars nimis prosperis multorum successibus crevit, sese extollebat.

13 Hannibal ex Hirpinis in Samnium transit, Beneventanum depopulatur agrum, Telesiam urbem capit, irritat etiam de industria ducem, si forte accensum tot indignitatis bus ac cladibus sociorum detrahere ad aquam certamen possit. Inter multitudinem sociorum Italici generis, qui ad Trasumennum capti ab Hannibale dimissique fuerant, tres Campani equites erant, multis iam tum illeti donis promissisque Hannibalis ad conciliandos popularium animos. Hi nuntiantes, si in Campaniam exercitum admovisset, Capuæ potiendæ copiam fore, quem res maior quam auctores esset, dubium Hannibalem alternisque fidentem ac diffidentem tamen, ut Campanos ex Samnio peteret, moverunt. Monitos etiam atque etiam, ut promissa rebus affirmarent, iussosque cum pluribus et aliquibus principum redire ad se dimisit. Ipse imperat duci, ut se in agrum Casinatem ducat, edoctus a peritis regionum, si eum saltum occupasset, exitum Romano ad opem feren-dam sociis interclusurum; sed Punicum abhorrens ab Latinorum nominum pronuntiatione os, Casilinum pro Casino dux ut acciperet, fecit, aversusque ab suo iti-nere per Allifanum Callifanumque et Calenum agrum in campum Stellatem descendit. Ubi quam moutibus fluminibusque clausam regionem circumspexisset, vocatum ducem percontatur, ubi terrarum esset. Quum is Casilini eo die mansurum eum dixisset, tum demum cognitus est error, et Casinum longe inde alia regione esse; virgisque caso duce et ad reliqurum terrorem in crucem sublato, castris communitis, Maharbalem cum equitibus in agrum Falernum prædatum dimisit. Usque ad aquas Sinuessanas populatio ea pervenit.

Ingentem cladem, fugam tamen terremque latius Numidæ fecerunt; nec tamen is terror, quum omnia bello flagrarent, fide socios dimovit, videlicet quia iusto et moderato regebatur imperio nec abnuebant, quod unum vinculum fidei est, melioribus parere.

Ut vero, postquam ad Vulturnum flumen castra sunt posita, exurebatur amœnissimus Italiae aeger villæque passim incendiis fumabant, per iuga Massici montis Fabio ducente, tum prope de integro seditio accensa; quieverant enim per paucos dies, quia, quam celerius solito ductum agmen esset, festinari ad prohibendam populationibus Campaniam crediderant. Ut vero in extrema iuga Massici montis ventum, et hostes sub oculis erant Falerni agri colonorumque Sinuessæ tecta urentes, nec ulla erat mentio pugnæ, "Spectatum hic" inquit Minucius, "ut ad rem fruendam oculos, sociorum caedes et incendia venimus? nec, si nullius alterius nos, ne civium quidem horum pudet, quos Sinuessam colonos patres nostri miserunt, ut ab Samnitus hospite tuta haec ora esset, quam nunc non vicinus Samnis urit, sed Poenus adventas, ab extremis orbis terrarum terminis nostra concuttione et socordia iam hic progressus? Tantum, pro, degeneramus a patribus nostris, ut, praeter quam oram illi Punicas vagari classes dedecus esse imperii sui duxerint, eam nunc plenam hostium Numidarumque...
ac Maurorum iam factam videamus? Qui modo Saguntum oppugnari indignando non homines tantum, sed foedera et deos ciebamus, scendantem mænia Romanæ coloniae Hannibalem leuti spectamus. Fumus ex incendiis villarum agrorumque in oculos atque ora venit; strepunt aures clamoribus plorantium sociorum, sæpius nostram quam deorum invocantium opem; nos hic pecorum modo per aestivos saltus deviasque calles exercitum ducimus, conditi nubibus silvisque. Si hoc modo peragrando cacumina saltusque M. Furius recipere a Gallis urbem voluisset, quo hic novus Camillus, nobis dictator unicus in rebus affectis quæsitus, Italiam ab Hannibale recuperare parat, Gallorum Roma esset, quam vereor ne, sic cunctantibus nobis, Hannibali ac Pænis toties servaverint maiores nostri. Sed vir ac vere Romanus, quo die dictatorem eum ex auctoritate patrum iussuque populi dictum Veios allatum est, quam esset satis altum Ianiculum, ubi sedens prospectaret hostem, descendit in æquum atque illo ipso die media in urbe, qua nunc busta Gallica sunt, et postero die citra Gabios cecidit Gallorum legiones. Quid? post multos annos quam ad Furculas Caudinas ab Samnite hoste sub iugum missi sumus, utrum tandem L. Papirius Cursor iuga Samnii persuasendo an Luceriam premendo obsidendoque et lacerando victorem hostem depulsum ab Romanis cervicibus iugum superbo Samniti imposuit? Modo C. Lutatio quà alia res quam celeritas victoriam dedit, quod postero die, quam hostem vidit, classem gravem commeatibus, impeditam suomet ipsam instrumento atque apparatu, oppressit? Stultitia est sedendo aut votis debellari credere posse. Arma càpias oportet et descendas in æquum et vir cum viro congregiariis. Audendo atque agendo res Romana crevit, non his segnibus consiliis, quæ timidì cauta vocant." Hæc velut contionanti Minucio circumfundebatur tribunorum equitumque Romanorum multitudo, et ad aures quoque militum dicta ferocia evolventur; ac si militaris suffragii res esset, haud dubie ferebant, Minucium Fabio duci prælaturos.

Fabius pariter in suos haud minus quam in hostes intentus, prius ab illis invictum animum præstat. Quanquam probe scit, non in castris modo suis, sed iam etiam Romæ infamiam suam cunctationem esse, obstinatus tamen tenore eodem consiliorum æstatis reliquum extraxit, ut Hannibal destitutus ab spe summa ope petiti certaminis iam hibernis locum circumspectaret, quia ea regio præsentis erat copiae, non perpetuæ, arbusta vineæque et consita omnia magis amœnis quam necessariis fructibus. Hæc per exploratores relata Fabio. Quum satis sciret, per easdem angustias, quibus intraverat Falernum agrum, reductum, Calliculum montem et Casilinum occupat modicis præsidiis, quæ urbs Vulturno flumine dirempta Falernum a Campano agro dividit; ipse iugis iisdem exercitum reducit, misso exploratum cum quadringentis equitibus sociorum L. Hostilio Mancino. Qui, ex turba iuventum audientium sæpe ferociter contionantem magistrum equitum, progressus primo exploratoris modo, ut ex tuto spectaretur hostem, ubi vagos passim per vicos Numidas vidit et per occasionem etiam paucos occidit, extemplo occupatus certamine est animus, excideruntque præcepta dictatoris, qui, quantum tuto posset, progressum prius recipere sese insserat, quam in conspectum hostium veniret. Numidæ alii atque alii occursantes refugientesque ad castra prope ipsa cum fatigatione equorum atque hominum pertraxere. Inde Carthalo penes quem summa equestris imperii erat, concitatis equis invectus, quam prius, quam ad coniectum telis veniret, avertisset hostes, quinque ferme millia continenti cursu secutus est fugientes. Mancinus postquam nec hostem desistere sequi nec spem vidit effugiendi esse, cohortatus suos in præarium redivit, omni parte virium impar. Itaque ipse et delecti eque circumventi occiduntur; ceteri effuso [rursus] cursu Cales primum, inde prope inuis callibus ad dictatorum perfugerunt.

Eo forte die Minucius se coniunxerat Fabio, missus ad firmandum præsidio saltum, qui super Tarracina, Tarracinae in artas coactus fauces imminet mari, ne ab Sinuessa Pœnus Appiae limite pervenire in agrum Romanum posset. Coniunctis exercitibus dictator ac magister equestris castra in viam deferunt, qua Hannibal ducturus erat; duo inde millia hostes aberant. Postero die Pœni, quod vicæ inter bina castra erat, agmine complevere. Quum Romani sub ipso constitissent vallo, haud dubie æquior loco, successit tamen Pœnus cum expeditis equitibusque ad lacessendum hostem. Carptim Pœni et procursando recipiendoque sese pugnavere; restitit suo loco Romana acies; lenta pugna et ex dictatoris magis quam Hannibalis fuit voluntate. Ducenti ab Romanis, octingenti hostium cecidere.
Inclusus inde videri Hannibal, via ad Casilinum obsessa, quum Capua et Samnium et tantum ab tergo divitum sociorum Romanis commecatus subveheret, Pœnus inter Formiana saxa ac Literni arenas stagnaque et per horridas silvas hibernaturus esset; nec Hannibalem fefellit, suis se artibus peti. Itaque quum per Casilinum evadere non posset petendiique montes et iugum Calliculae superandum esset, necubi Romanus inclusum vallibus agmen aggrederetur, ludibrium oculorum specie terrible ad frustrandum hostem commentus, principio noctis furtim succedere ad montes statuit. Fallacis consili i talis apparatus fuit. Faces undique ex agris collectae fascesque virgarum atque aridi sarmenti praegantur cornibus boum, quos domitos indomitosque multos inter ceteram agrestem praedam agebat. Ad duo millia ferme boum effecta, Hasdrubalique negotium datum, ut nocte id armentum accensis cornibus ad montes ageret, maxime, si posset, super saltus ab hoste insessos. Primis tenebris silentio mota castra; boves aliquanto ante signa acti. Ubi ad radices montium viasque angustas ventum est, signum extemplo datur, ut accensis cornibus armenta in adversos concitentur montes; et metus ipse reluentis flammae ex capite calorque iam ad vivum ad ima que cornuum adveniens velut stimulatos furore agebat boves. Quo repente discursu, haud seclus quam silvis montibusque accensis, omnia circa virgulta visa ardere, capitumque irrita quassatio excitans flammam hominem passim discurrentium speciem præbebat. Qui ad transitum saltus insidendum locati erant, ubi in summis montibus ac super se quosdam ignes conspexere, circum-ventos se esse rati præsidio excessere. Qua minime densæ micabant flammæ, velut tutissimum iter petentes summa montium iuga, tamen in quosdam boves palatos a suis gregibus inciderunt. Et primo quum procul cernerent, veluti flammæ spirantium miraculo attoniti constiterunt; deinde ut humana apparuit fraud, tum vero insidias rati esse, cum maiore tumultu concitant se in fugam. Levi quoque armaturæ hostium incurrire; ceterum nox æquato timore neutros pugnam incipientes ad lucem tenuit. Interea toto agmine Hannibal traducto per saltum, et quibusdam in ipso saltu hostium oppressis, in agro Allifano posuit castra.

18 Hunc tumultum sensit Fabius: ceterum et insidias esse ratus et ab nocturno utique abhorrens certamine, suos munimentis tenuit. Luce prima sub iugo montis prælium fuit, quo interclusam ab suis levem armaturam facile (et enim numero aliquantum praestabant) Romani superassent, nisi Hispanorum cohors ad id ipsum remissa ab Hannibale supervenisset. Ea assuetior montibus et ad concursandum inter saxa rupesque aptior ac levior quum velocitate corporum, tum armorum habitu, campestrem hostem, gravem armis statariumque, pugnæ genere facile elusit. Ita haudquaquam pari certamine digressi, Spani fere omnes incolumes, Romani aliquid suis amissis in castra contenderunt.

5 Fabius quoque movit castra, transgressusque saltum super Allifas loco alto ac munito consedit. Both armies move through Samnium into Apulia, Tum per Samnium Romam se petere simulans Hannibal usque in Pelignos populabundus rediit; Fabius medius inter hostium agmen urbemque Romam iugis ducebat, nec absistens nec congrediens.
Ex Pelignis Pœnus flexit iter, retroque Apulum repetens Gereonim pervenit, urbem metu, quia collapsa ruinis pars maenium erat, ab suis desertam; dictator in Larinate agro castra communiit. Inde sacrorum causa Romam revocatus, non imperio modo, sed consilio etiam ac prope precibus agens cum magistro equitum, ut plus consilio quam fortunae confidat et se potius ducem quam Sempronium Flaminiumque imitetur: ne nihil actum censeret extracta prope æstate per ludificationem hostis; medicos quoque plus interdum quiete quam movendo atque agendo proficere; haud parvam rem esse ab toties victore hoste vinci desisse et ab continuis cladibus respirasse,—haec nequicquam præmonito magistro equitum Romam est profectus.

Principio æstatis, qua hæc gerebantur, in Hispania quoque terra marique cœptum bellum est. A Carthaginiam fleet is surprised by the Romans in the mouth of the Hiberus Hasdrubal ad eum navium numerum, quem a fratre instructum paratumque acceperat, decem adiecit; quadraginta navium classem Himilconi tradit, atque ita Carthagine profectus naves prope terram, exercitum in litore ducebat, paratus confligere, quacunque parte copiarum hostis occurrisset. Cn. Scipio postquam movisse ex hibernis hostem audivit, primo idem consilii fuit; deinde minus terra propter ingentem famam novorum auxiliorum concurrere ausus, electo milite ad naves imposito, quinque et triginta navium classe ire obviam hosti pergit. Altero ab Tarracone die ad stationem decem millia passuum distantem ab ostio Hiberi amnis pervenit. Inde duæ Massiliensium speculatoriæ præmissæ retulere, classem Punicam stare in ostio fluminis castraque in ripa posita.
Itaque ut improvidos incautosque universo simul effuso terrore opprimeret, sublatis ancoris ad hostem vadit. Multas et locis altis positas turres Hispania habet, quibus et speculis et propugnaculis adversus latrones utuntur. Inde primo conspectis hostium navibus, datum signum Hasdrubali est, tumultusque prius in terra et castris quam ad mare et ad naves est ortus, nondum aut pulsu remorum strepituque aliq nautico exaudito aut aperientibus classem promuntoriis, quum repente eques alius super alium ab Hasdrubale missus vagos in litore quietosque in tentoriis suis, nihil minus quam hostem aut praelium eo die exspectantes, conscendere naves propere atque arma capere iubet: classem Romanam iam haud procul portu esse. Haeque dimissi passim imperabant; mox Hasdrubal ipse cum omni exercitu aderat, varioque omnia tumultu strepunt, ruentibus in naves simul remigibus militibusque, fugientium magis e terra quam in pugnam euntium modo. Vixdum omnes conscenderant, quum alii resolutis oris in ancoras evenhuntur, alii, ne quid teneat, ancoralia incidunt; raptinque omnia æ præpropere agendo, militum apparatu nautica ministeria impedientur, trepidatione nautarum capere et aptare arma miles prohibetur. Et iam Romanus non appropinquabat modo, sed direxerat etiam in pugnam naves. Itaque non ab hoste et prælio magis Pæni quam suomet ipsi tumultu turbati, tentata verius pugna quam inita, in fugam averterunt classem, et quum adversi amnis os lato agmini et tam multis simul venientibus haud sane intrabile esset, in litus passim naves egerunt, atque alii vadis, alii sicco litore excepti, partim armati, partim inermes ad instructam per litus aciem suorum perfugere; ducis tamen primo concursu captae erant Punicae naves, quattuor suppressae. Romanis, quamquam terra hostium erat armatamque aciem toto pra-tentam [in] liteme cernebat, haud cunctanter insecati terpestam hostium classem naves omnes, qua non aut perforegerant proras litori illasas aut
2 carinas fixerant vadinis, religatas puppibus in altum extraxer; ad quinque et viginti naves e quadraginta capteer.

Neque id pulcherrimum eius victoriae fuit, sed quod una levi pugna toto eius ora mari potiti erant. Itaque ad Onusam classeprofecti; escensio ab navibus in terram facta. Quum urbem vi cepissent captamque diripuissent, Carthaginem inde petunt, atque omnem agrum circa depopulati postremo pecta quoque inicnete muro portisque incenderunt.
Inde iam praeda graviss ad Longunticam pervenit classis, ubi vis magna sparti erat, ad rem nauticam congruesta ab Hasdrubale. Quod satis in usum fuit, sublato, ceterum omne incensum est. Nec continentis modo praecta est ora, sed in Ebusum insulam transmissum.
Ibi urbe, quae caput insulae est, biduum neque quam summo labore oppugnata, ubi in spem irritam frustra teri tempus animadversum est, ad populationem agri versi, direptis aliquot incensisque vicis, maiorque quam ex continenti praeda parta quum in naves se recepissent, ex Baliaribus insulis legati pacem petentes ad Scipi-onem venerunt. Inde flexa retro classis reditumque in eiteriora provinciae, quo omnium populorum, qui Hiberum accollunt, multorum et ultimae Hispamie legati concurrerunt; sed qui vere dicionis imperiique
Romani facti sint obsidibus datis, populi amplius fuerunt

C. L.
centum viginti. Igitur terrestribus quoque copiis satis fidens Romanus usque ad saltum Castulonensem est progressus; Hasdrubal in Lusitaniam ac propius Oceannum concessit.

Quietum inde fore videbatur reliquum æstatis tempus, fuissetque per Pœnum hostem; sed præterquam quod ipsorum Hispanorum inquieta avida et novas res sunt ingenia, Mandonius Indibilisique, qui antea Ilergetum regulus fuerat, postquam Romani ad saltu recessere ad maritimam oram, concitis popularibus in agrum pacatum sociorum Romanaorum ad populandum venerunt. Adversus eos tribuni militum cum expeditis auxiliis a Scipione missi levi certamine, ut tumultuariam manum, fudere omnes, occisis quibusdam captisque magna parte armis extuta. Hic tamen tumultus cedentem ad Oceanum Hasdrubalem cis Hiberum ad socios tutandos retraxit.

Castra Punica in agro Ilergavonensis, castra Romana ad Novam classem erant, quam fama repens alio avertit bellum. Celtiberi, qui principes regionis suæ legatos miserant obsidesque dederant Romanis, nuntio misso a Scipione exciti arma capiunt provinciamque Carthaginiensium valido exercitu invadunt.

Tria oppida vi expugnant; inde cum ipso Hasdrubale duobus proeliis egregie pugnant; ad quindecim millia hostium occiderunt, quattuor millia cum multis militaribus signis capiunt.

Hoc statu rerum in Hispania P. Scipio in provinciam venit, prorogato post consulatum imperio ab senatu missus, cum triginta longis navibus et octo millibus militum magnoque
Liber XXII.

commeatn advecto. Ea classis ingenis agmine onerariarum procul visa cum magna letitia civium sociorumque portum Tarraconis ex alto tenuit. Ibi milite 3 exposito, profectus Scipio fratri se coniungit, ac deinde communi animo consilioque gerebant bellum. Occu-patis igitur Carthaginiensibus Celtiberico bello, haud cunctanter Hiberum transgrediuntur, nec ullo viso hoste, Saguntum pergunt ire, quod ibi obsides totius Hispaniae traditos ab Hannibale fame erat modico in arce custodiri presidio. Id unum pignus inclinatos ad 5 Romanam societatem omnium Hispaniae popullorum animos morabatur, ne sanguine liberum suorum culpa defectionis luaretur. Eo vinculo Hispaniam vir unus 6 sollerti magis quam fidelis consilio exsolvit. Abelux erat Sagunti nobilis Hispanus, fidus ante Poenis; tum, qualia plerumque sunt bar-barorum ingenia, cum fortuna mutaverat fidel. Ceterum transfugam sine magnae rei prodigionis venientem ad hostes nihil aliud qua unum vile atque infame corpus esse ratus, id agebat, ut quam maximum emolumentum novis sociis esset.
Circumspectis igitur omnibus, quae fortuna potestatis 8
cius poterat facere, obsidibus potissimum tradeudis animum adiecit, eam unam rem maxime ratus con-ciliaturam Romanis principum Hispaniae amicitiam.
Sed quam iniussu Bostaris praefecti satis seceret nihil 9 obsidum custodes facturos esse, Bostarem ipsum arte aggreditur. Castra extra urbem in ipso litore habebat 10 Bostar, ut aditum ea parte intercluderet Romanis. Ibi eum in secretum abductum, velut ignorantem, monet, quo statu sit res; metum continuisse ad eam diem 11
Hispanorum animos, quia procul Romani absensent;
nunc cis Hiberum castra Romana esse, arcem tutam perfugiumque novas volentibus res; itaque, quos metus non teneat, beneficio et gratia devinciendos esse.

Miranti Bostari percontantique, quodnam id subitum tantae rei donum posset esse, "Obsides" inquit "in civitates remitte. Id et privatin parentibus, quorum maximum momentum in civitatibus est suis, et publice populis gratum erit. Vult sibi quisque credi, et habitas fides ipsam plerumque obligat fidem. Ministerium restituendorum domos obsidum mihimet deposco ipse, ut opera quoque impensa consilium adiu- vem meum et rei suapte natura grate, quantam in super gratiam possim, adiiciam."

Homini non ad cetera Punica ingenia callido ut persuasit, nocte clam progressus ad hostium stationes, conventis quibusdam auxiliaribus Hispanis et ab his ad Scipionem perduc-tus, quid afferret expromit, et fide accepta dataque ac loco et tempore constituuto ad obsides tradendos, Saguntum redit. Diem insequentem absumpsit cum Bostare maudatis ad rem agendam accipiendis. Dimissus, quum se nocte iturum, ut custodias hostium falleret, constituisset, ad compositam cum iis horam excitatis custodibus puerorum prospectus, veluti ignarus in praeparatas sua fraude insidias ducit. In castra Romana perducti; cetera omnia de reddendis obsidibus, sicut cum Bostare constitutum erat, acta per eundum ordinem, quo si Carthaginiensium nomine sic ageretur. Maior aliquanto Romanorum gratia fuit in re pari, quam quanta futura Carthaginiensium fuerat. Illos enim graves superbosque in rebus secundis expertos fortuna et timor mitigasse videri poterat; Romanus primo adventu, incognitus ante, ab re clementi liberalique initium fecerat, et Abelux, vir prudens, haud frustra videbatur socios mutasse. Itaque ingenti consensu defectionem omnes spectare; armaque extemplo mota forent, ni hiems, quae Romanos quoque et Carthaginienses concedere in tecta coegit intervenisset.

Hæc in Hispania [quoque] secunda æstate Punici belli gesta, quum in Italia paulum intervalli cladibus Romanis sœllers cunctatio Fabii fecisset; quæ ut Hannibalem non mediocris sollicitum cura habebat, tandem eum militiæ magistrum delegisse Romanos cernentem, qui bellum ratione, non fortuna gereret, ita contempit erat inter cives armatos pariter togatosque, utique postquam absentе eo temeritate magistri equitum læto verius dixerim quam prospero eventu pugnatum fuerat. Accesserant duæ res ad augendam invidiam dictatoris, una fraude ac dolo Hannibalis, quod, quæ a perfugis ei monstratus ager dictatoris esset, omnibus circa solo aequatis ab uno eo ferrum ignemque et vim omnem hostium abstineri iussit, ut occulti alicuius pacti ea merces videri posset, altera ipsius facto, primo forsitan dubio, quia non exspectata in eo senatus auctoritas est, ad extremum haud ambigui in maximam laudem verso. In permutandis captivis, quod sic primo Punico bello factum erat, convenerat inter duces Romanum Pœnumque, ut, quæ pars plus recipieret quam daret, argentii pondo bina et selibras in militem præstaret. Ducentis quadraginta septem quum plures Romanus quam Pœnum recepisset argentumque pro eis debitum, sæpe iactata in senatu re, quoniam non consuluisset patres, tardius erogaretur, inviolatum ab hoste agrum, misso Romam Quinto filio, vendidit, fide

Hannibal pro Gereonii mœnibus, cuius urbis capta

Minucius gains some advantage over Hannibal whose soldiers are dispersed for forage.

Hannibal pro Gereonii mœnibus, cuius urbis capta

atque incensæ ab se in usum horreorum paucâ reliquarat tecta, in stativis erat Inde frumentatum duas exercitus partes mittebat; cum tertia ipse expedita in statione erat, simul castris præsidio et circumspectans, necunde impetus in frumentatores fieret. Romanus tunc exercitus in agro Larinati erat; præerat Minucius magister equitum, profecto, sicut ante dictum est, ad urbem dictatore. Ceterum castra, quæ in monte alto ac tuto loco posita fuerant, iam in planum deferruntur; agitabanturque pro ingenio ducis consilia calidiora, ut impetus aut in frumentatores palatos aut in castra relictæ cum levi præsidio fieret. Nec Hannibalèm fællit, cum duce mutatam esse belli rationem et ferocius quam consultius rem hostes gesturos; ipse autem quod minime quis crederet, quum hostis pro-pius esset, tertiam partem militum frumentatum, duas bus in castris retentis, dimisit; dein castra ipsa pro-pius hostem movit, duo ferme a Gereonio millia, in tumulum hosti conspectum, ut intentum sciret esse ad frumentatores, si qua vis fieret, tutandos. Proprior inde ei atque ipsis imminens Romanorum castris tumulus apparuit; ad quem capiendum si luce palam iretur, quia haud dubie hostis breviore via praeventurus erat, nocte clam missi Numidæ cepernunt. Quos tenentes locum contempta paucitate Romani postero die quem deiecissent, ipsi eo transferunt castra. [Tum ut] itaque exiguum spatii vallum a vallo aberat, et id ipsum totum prope compleverat Romana acies. Simul et per aversa a castris Hannibalis equitatus cum levi armatura emissus in frumentatores late cædam fugam-que hostium palatorum fecit. Nec acie certare Hannibal ausus, quia tanta pars exercitus aberat et iam ca pancitate vix castra, si oppugnarentur, tutari po-terat; iamque aribus Fabii sedendo et cunctando bellum gerebat, receperatque suos in priora castra, quæ pro Gereonii mœnibus erant. Iusta quoque acie et collatis signis dimicatum, quidam auctores sunt; primo concursu Pœnum usque ad castra fusum; inde eruptione facta repente versus terrem in Romanos; Numerii Decimii Samnitis deinde interventu prælimium restitutum. Hunc principem genere ac divitiis non Boviani modo, unde erat, sed toto Samnio, iussu dictatoris octo millia peditum et equites quingentos du-centem in castra, ab tergo quum apparuisset Hannibal, speciem parti utrique præbuisse novi presidii cum Q. Fabio ab Roma venientis. Hannibalem, in-sidiarum quoque aliquid timentem, recepisse suos; Romanum insecutum adiuvante Samnite duo castella eo die expugnasse. Sex millia hostium caesa, quinque admodum Romanorum; tamen in tam pari prope clade vanam famam egregiae victoriae cum vanioribus litteris magistri equitum Romam perlatam.

De his rebus per sepe et in senatu et in contione actum est. Quum, læta civitate, dictator unus nihil nec famæ nec litteris crederet et, ut vera omnia essent, secunda se magis quam adversa timere diceret, tum M. Metilius tribunus plebis id enim vero ferendum esse negat, non præsentem solum dictatorem obstitisse rei bene gerendæ, sed ab- sentem etiam gestæ obstare, et in ducendo bello sedulo tempus terere, quo diutius in magistratu sit solusque et Romæ et in exercitu imperium habeat. Quippe consulum alterum in acie cecidisse, alterum specie classis Punicæ persequendæ procul ab Italia ablega-tum; duos prætores Sicilia atque Sardinia occupatos, quarum neutra hoc tempore provincia prætore egeat;
M. Minucium magistrum equitum, ne hostem videret, ne quid rei bellicaæ gereret, prope in custodia habitum.

Itaque hereule non Samnium modo, quo iam tanquam trans Hiberum agro Pœnis concessum sit, sed Campanum Calenumque et Falernum agrum pervastatos esse, sedente Casilini dictatore et legionibus populi Romani agrum suum tutante. Exercitum cupientem pugnare et magistrum equitum clausos prope intra vallum retentos; tanquam hostibus captivis arma adempa. Tandem, ut abscesserit inde dictator, ut obsidione liberatos, extra vallum egressos fudisse ac fugasse hostes. Quas ob res, si antiquus animus plebei Romanae esset, audaciter se laturum fuisse de abrogando Q. Fabii imperio; nunc modicam rogationem promulgaturum de æquando magistri equitum et dictatoris iure. Nec tamen ne ita quidem prius mittendum ad exercitum
Q. Fabium, quam consulem in locum C. Flaminii suffecisset.

Dictator contionibus se abstinuit in actione minime populari. Ne in senatu quidem satis æquis auribus audiebatur [tunc], quam hostem verbis extolleret bienniique clades per temeritatem atque inscientiam ducum acceptas referret et magistro equitum, quod contra dictum suum pugnasset, rationem diceret reddendam esse.

Si penes se summa imperii consiliique sit, propediem effecturum, ut sciant homines, bono imperatore haud magni fortunam momenti esse, meatem rationemque dominari, et in tempore et sine ignominia servasse exercitum, quam multa millia hostium occidisse, maiorem gloriam esse. Huius generis orationibus frustra habitis, et consule creato M. Atilio Regulo, ne praesens de iure imperii dimicaret, pridie quam rogationis ferendae dies adesset, nocte ad exercitum abiit. Luce orta quam plebis concilium esset, magis tacita invidia dictatoris favorque magistri equitum animos versabat, quam satis audebant homines ad suadendum, quod vulgo placebat, prodire, et favore superante auctoritas taunen rogationi deearat. Unus inventus est suasor legis C. Terentius Varro, qui priore anno praetor fuerat, loco non humili solum, sed etiam sordido ortus. Patrem laniumuisse ferunt, ipsum institorem mercis, filioque hoc ipso in servilia eius artis ministeria usum. Is iuvenis, ut primum ex eo genere quaestus pecunia a patre relictâ animos ad spem liberalioris fortunæ fecit, togaque et forum placuer, proclamando pro sordidis hominibus causisque adversus rem et famam bonorum primum in notitiam populi, deinde ad honores pervenit, quæsturaque et duabus ædilitatibus, plebeia et curuli, postremo et praetura perfunctus, iam ad consulatus spem quam attolleret animos, haud parum callide auram favoris popularis ex dictatoris invidia petiit scitique plebis unus gratiam tulit.

Omnes eam rogationem, quique Romæ quique in exercitu erant, sequi atque iniqui, præter ipsum dictatorem in contumeliam eius latam acceperunt. Ipse, qua gravitate animi criminantes se ad multitudinem inimicos tulerat, eadem et populi in se saevientis iniuriam tuit; acceptisque in ipso itinere litteris senatus de aequato imperio, satis fidens, haudquaquam cum imperii iure artem imperandi aequatam, cum invicto a 27 civibus hostibusque animo ad exercitum rediit. Minucius vero quum iam ante vix tolerabilis fuisset secundis rebus ac favore vulgi, tum utique immodice immodesteque non Hannibale magis victo ab se quam Q. Fabio gloriari. Illum in rebus asperis unicum ducem ac parem quasitum Hannibali, maiorem minori, dictatorem magistro equitum, quod nulla memoria habeat annalium, iussu populi aequatum in eadem civitate, in qua magistri equitum virgas ac secures dictatoris tremere atque horrere soliti sint; tantum suam felicitatem virtutemque enituisse. Ergo secuturum se fortunam suam, si dictator in cunctatione ac segnitie deorum hominumque iudicio damnata perstaret. Itaque quo die primum congressus est cum Q. Fabio, statuendum omnium primum ait esse, quemadmodum imperio aequato utantur: se optimum ducere, aut diebus alternis aut, si maiora intervalla placerent, partitis temporibus alterius summum ius imperiumque esse, ut par hosti non solum consilio, sed viribus etiam esset, si quam occasionem rei gerendae habuisset. Q. Fabio haudquaquam id placere: omnia fortunam eam habitura, quamcunque temeritas collegae habuisset; sibi communicatum cum illo, non ademp tum imperium esse; itaque se nunquam volentem parte, qua possit, rerum consilio gerendarum cessurum, nec se tempora aut dies imperii cum eo, exercitum divisurum, suisque consiliis, quoniam omnia non liceret, quae posset, servaturum. Ita obtinuit, ut legi-ones, sicut consulis mos esset, inter se dividerent. Prima et quarta Minucio, secunda et tertia Fabio evenerunt. Item equites pari numero sociumque et Latini nominis auxilia diviserunt. Castris quoque se separari magister equitum voluit.

Duplex inde Hannibali gaudium fuit; neque enim quicquam eorum, quae apud hostes agerentur, eum fallebat et perfugis multa indicantibus et He falls into a per suos explorantem: nam et liberam him by Hannibal Minucii temeritatem se suo modo captaturum, et sollertiae Fabii dimidium virium recessisse. Tumulus 3 erat inter castra Minucii et Poenorum, quem qui occu-passet, haud dubie iniquiorem erat hosti locum facturus.
Eum non tam capere sine certamine volebat Hannibal, 4 quianquam id opere pretium erat, quam causam certaminis cum Minucio, quem procursum ad obsistendum satis sciebat, contrahere. Ager omnis medius 5 erat prima specie inutilis insidiator, quia non modo silvestre quicquam, sed ne vepribus quidem vestitum habebat, re ipsa natus tendegis insidiis, eo magis quod 6 in nuda valle nulla talis fraus timeri poterat; et erat in anfractibus cave rupes, ut quaedam earum ducenos armatos possent capere. In has latebras, quot quemque locum apte insidere poterant, quinque millia conduntur peditum equitumque. Necubi tamen aut motus 8 alicuius temere egressi aut fulgor armorum fraudem in valle tam aperta detegeret, missis paucis prima luce ad capiendum, quem ante diximus, tumulum avertit oculos hostium. Primo statim conspectu contempta paucitas, 9 ac sibi quique deoscere pellendos inde hostes ac locum capiendum; dux ipse inter stolidissimos ferocissimosque ad arma vocat et vanis minis increpat hostem. Principio levem armaturam [dimittit], deinde conferto armine mittit equites; postremo, quem hostibus quoque subsidia mitti videret, instructis legionibus procedit. Et Hannibal laborantibus suis alia atque alia increcente certamine mittens auxilia peditum equitumque iam iustam expleverat aciem, ac totis utrinque viribus certatur. Prima levis armatura Romanorum, præoccupatum ex inferiore loco succedens tumulum, pulsa detrusaque terrorem in succedentem intulit equitem et ad signa legionum refugit. Peditum acies inter perculsos impavida sola erat videbaturque, si iusta ac directa pugna esset, haudquaquam impar futura; tantum animorum fecerat prospere ante paucos dies res gesta; sed exorti repente insidiatores eum tumultum terroremque in latera utrinque ab tergoque incursantes feecerunt, ut neque animus ad pugnam neque ad fugam spes cuiquam superesset. Tum Fabius, primo clamore paventium audito, dein conspecta procul turbata acie, "Ita est" inquit; "non celerius, quam timui, depredavit fortuna temeritatem. Fabio æquatus imperio Hannibalem et virtute et fortuna superiorem videt. Sed aliud iurgandi succensendique tempus ctit; nunc signa extra vallum proferte; victoriam hosti extorqueamus, confessionem erroris civibus." Iam magna ex parte cæsis aliis, aliis circumspectantibus fugam Fabiana se acies repente velut caelo demissa ad auxilium ostendit. Itaque priusquam ad coniectum teli veniret aut manum consersret, et suos a fuga effusa et ab nimis feroci pugna hostes continuat. Qui solutis ordinibus vage dissipati erant, undique confugerunt ad integrum aciem; qui plures simul terga dedere, conversi in hostem vol-ventesque orbem nunc sensim referre pedem, nunc conglobati restare. Ac iam prope una acies facta erat 6 victi atque integri exercitus, inferebantque signa in hostem, quum Pœnus receptui cecinit, palam ferente Hannibale, ab se Minucium, se ab Fabio victum.

Ita per variam fortunam dies maiore parte exacta, 7
quum in castra reditum esset, Minucius, 8 convocatis militibus, "Sæpe ego" inquit
"audivi, milites, cum primum esse virum, qui ipse consulat, quid in rem sit, secundum eum, qui bene momenti obediat; qui nec ipse consulere nec aliter parere sciat, eum extremi ingenii esse. Nobis 9 quoniam prima animi ingeniique negata sors est, secundum ac medium teneamus et, dum imperare dis-cimus, parere prudenti in animum inducamus. Castra 10 cum Fabio iungamus. Ad prætorium eius signa quum tulerimus, ubi ego eum parentem appellavero, quod beneficio eius erga nos ac maiestate eius dignum est, vos, milites, eos, quorum vos modo arma ac dexterae 11
texerunt, patronos salutabitis, et, si nihil aliud, gra-torum certe nobis animorum gloriam dies hic dederit."
Signo dato clamatur inde, ut colligantur vasa. Pro-30 fecti et agmine incendetes ad dictatoris castra in admirationem et ipsum et omnes, qui circa erant, converterunt. Ut constituta sunt ante tribunal signa, 2 progressus ante alios magister equitum, quum patrem Fabium appellasset, circumfusosque militum eius to um agmen patronos consalutasset, "Parentibus" inquit 3
"meis, dictator, quibus te modo nomine, quod fando possum, æquavi, vitam tantum debeo, tibi quam meam salutem, tum omnium horum. Itaque plebeiscitum, 4
quo oneratus sum magis quam honoratus, primus antiquo abrogoque et, quod tibi mihi [quod] exercitibusque his tuis, servato ac conservatori, sit felix, sub imperium auspiciumque tuum redeo et signa hac legionesque restituo. Tu, quæso, placatus me magisterium equitum, hos ordines suos quemque tenere iubeas.” Tum dextræ interiunctæ militesque, contione dimissa, ab notis ignotisque beneigne atque hospitaliter invitati, lætusque dies ex admodum tristi paulo ante ac prope exsecrabilis factus. Romæ, ut est perlata fama rei gestæ, dein litteris non magis ipsorum imperatorum quam vulgum militum ex utroque exercitu affirmata, pro se quisesque Maximum laudibus ad cælum ferre. Par gloria apud Hannibalem hostesque Pœnos erat; ac tum demum sentire, cum Romanis atque in Italia bellum esse; nam biennio ante adeo et duces Romanos et milites spreverant, ut vix cum eadem gente bellum esse crederent, cuius terribilem famam a patribus accepiisse. Hannibalem quoque ex acie redeuntem dixisse ferunt, tandem eam nubem, quæ sedere in iugis montium solita sit, cum procella imbrem dedisse.

31 Dum hæc geruntur in Italia, Cn. Servilius Geminius consul cum classe centum viginti navium circumvectus Sardiniæ et Corsicæ oram, et obsidibus utrinque acceptis, in Africam transmisit, et priusquam in continentem escensionem faceret, Menige insula vastata et ab incolentibus Cercinam, ne et ipsorum ureretur diripere turque ager, decem talentis argenti acceptis, ad litora Africæ accessit copiasque exposuit. Inde ad populum agrum ducti milites navalesque socii iuxta effusi, ac si in insulis cultorum egentibus praedarentur. Itaque in insidias temere illati, quum a frequentibus palantes, ab locorum gnaris ignari circumvenirentur, cum multa cede ac foeda fuga retro ad naves com- puisi sunt. Ad mille hominum, cum iis Sempronio Bleso quaestore amisso, classis ab litoribus hostium plenis trepide soluta in Siciliam cursum tenuit, traditique Lilybaei T. Otacilio praetori, ut ab legato eius P. Sura Romam reduceretur. Ipse per Siciliam pedibus profectus freto in Ita- liam traiecit, litteris Q. Fabii accitus et ipse et collega eius M. Atilius, ut exercitus ab se, ex- acto iam prope semestri imperio, acciperent.

Omnium prope annales Fabium dictatorem adver- sus Hannibalem rem gessisse tradunt; Cælius etiam eum primum a populo creatum dictatorem scribit. Sed et Cælius et ceteros fugit, uni consuli Cn. Servilio, qui tum procul in Gallia provincia aberat, insuisses dicendi dictatoris; quam moram quia exspectare territa iam clade civitas non poterat, eo decursum esse, ut a populo crearetur, qui pro dictatore esset; res inde gestas gloriamque insignem ducis et augentes titulum imaginis posteros, ut, qui pro dictatore fuisse dictator crederetur, facile obtinuisset.

Consules Atilius Fabiano, Geminus Servilius Mi- nuiano exercitu accepto, hibernaculis mature communitis, quod reliquam autumni erat, Fabii artibus cum summa inter se concordia bellum gesserunt. Frumentatum exeunti Hannibali diversis locis opportunis aderant, carpentes agmen palatosque excipientes; in casum uni-

The Romans harass Hannibal at Geronium without accepting battle.
versæ dimicationis, quam omnibus artibus petebat hostis, non veniebant, eoque inopiam est redactus Hannibal, ut, nisi cum fugae specie abeundum ei fuisset, Galliam repetiturus fuerit, nulla relicta spe alendi exercitus in eis locis, si inequentes consules eisdem artibus bellum gererent.

Quum ad Gereonium iam hieme impediente con-Neapolis sends stitisset bellum, Neapolitani legati Romam gifts and promises venere. Ab iis quadraginta pateræ au-of loyal help. reæ magni ponderis in curiam illatæ atque ita verba facta, ut dicerent, scire sese, populi Romani æarium bello exhauriri, et, quum iuxta pro urbibus agrisque sociorum ac pro capite atque arce Italiam, urbe Romana, atque imperio geratur, æquum censuisse Neapolitanos, quod auri sibi quum ad templorum ornatum, tum ad subsidium fortunæ a maioribus relictum foret, eo iuvare populum Romanum. Si quam opem in sese cre-derent, eodem studio fuisset oblaturos. Gratum sibi patres Romanos populumque facturum, si omnes res Neapolitanorum suas duxissent, dignosque iudicaverint, ab quibus donum animo ac voluntate eorum, qui libentes darent, quam re maius ampliusque acciperent. Legatis gratiae actae pro munificentia curaque; patera, quæ ponderis minimi fuit, accepta.

Rome is not too much distracted by the war to take vigilant action towards the kings of Macedonia and Illyria, and also the Ligurians.

Per eosdem dies speculator Carthaginiansis, qui per biennium sefellerat, Romæ deprensus præcisisque manibus dimissus, et servi quinque et viginti in crucem acti, quod in campo Martio coniurassent; indici data libertas et æris gravis viginti millia.

Legati et ad Philippum Macedonum regem missi ad deprecandum Demetrium Pharium, qui bello victus ad eum fugisset, et alii in Ligures ad expostulandum, quod Pænum opibus auxiliisque sui iuvissent, simul ad visendum ex propinquo, quæ in Boiis atque Insubribus gererentur. Ad Pænum quoque regem in Illyrios legati missi ad stipendium, cuius dies exierat, poscendum aut, si diem proferri vellet, obsides accipiendos. Adeo, etsi bellum ingens in cervicibus erat, nullius usquam terrarum rei cura Romanos, ne longinquæ quidem, effugiebat. In religionem etiam venit, ædem Concordiæ, quam per seditionem militarem biennio ante L. Manlius prætor in Gallia vovisset, locatam ad id tempus non esse. Itaque duumviri ad eam rem creati a M. Æmilio prætore urbano, C. Pupius et Caeso Quinctius Flamininus, ædem in arce faciendam locaverunt.

Ab eodem prætore ex senatus consulto litteræ ad consules missæ, ut, si iis videretur, alter eorum ad consules creandos Romam veniret; se in eam diem, quam iussissent, comitia edicturum. Ad hæc a consulis rescriptum, sine detrimento rei publicæ abscedi non posse ab hoste; itaque per interregem comitia habenda esse potius, quam consul alter a bello avocaretur. Patribus rectius visum est, dictatorem a consule dici comitiorum habendorum causa. Dictus L. Veturius Philo M'. Pomponium Mathonem magistrum equitum dixit. Iis vitio creatis iussisque die quarto decimo se magistratu abdicare, ad interregnum res rediit. Consulibus prorogatum in annum imperium. Interreges proditi sunt a patribus C. Claudius App. filius Cento, inde P. Cornelius Asina. In eius interregno comitia habita magno certamine patrum ac C. I. plebis. C. Terentio Varroni, quem sui generis hominem, plebi insectatione principum popularibusque artibus conciliatum, ab Q. Fabii opibus et dictatorio imperio concusso aliena invidia splendentem, vulgus extrahere ad consulatum nitebatur, patres summa ope obstabant, ne se insectando sibi aequari assuecserent homines. Q. Baebius Herennius tribunus plebis, cognatus C. Terentii, eriminando non senatorum modo, sed etiam augures, quod dictatorem prohibuissent comitia perficere, per invidiam eorum favorem candidato suo conciliabant. Ab hominibus nobilibus, per multos annos bellum quaerentibus, Hannibalem in Italianum adductum; ab iisdem, quum debellari possit, fraude bellum trahi. Quum quattuor legionibus universis pugnari posse apparuisset eo, quod M. Minucius absente Fabio pros pere pugnasset, duas legiones, hosti ad cædem obiectas, deinde ex ipso cæde eripatas, ut pater patronusque appellaretur, qui prius vincere prohibuisset Romanos quam vinci. Consules deinde Fabianis artibus, quum debellare possent, bellum traxisse. Id fœdus inter omnes nobiles ictum, nec finem ante belli habituros, quam consulem vere plebeium, id est, hominem novum fecissent; nam plebeios nobiles iam eisdem initiatos esse sacris et contemnere plebem, ex quo contemni a patribus desierint, cœpisse. Cui non apparere, id actum et quæsitum esse, ut interregnum iniretur, ut in patrum potestate comitia essent? Id consules ambos ad exercitum morando quæsisse; id postea, quia invitis iis dictator esset dictus comitiorum causa, ex pugnutum esse, ut vitiosus dictator per augures fieret. Habere igitur interregnum eos; consulatum unum certer plebis Romanæ esse; populum liberum habiturum ac daturum ei, qui mature vincere quam diu imperare malit.

Quam his orationibus accensa plebs esset, tribus patriciis potentibus, P. Cornelio Merenda, L. Manlio Vulsone, M. Æmilio Lepido, duobus nobilibus iam familiarum plebei, C. 2 Atilio Serrano et Q. Ælio Paeto, quorum alter pontifex, alter augur erat, C. Terentius consul unus creatur, ut in manu eius esset comitia rogando collegæ. Tum experta nobilitas, parum fuisse virium in competitoribus eius, L. Æmilium Paulum, qui cum M. Livio consul fuerat et damnatione collegæ et sua prope ambustus evaserat, infestum plebei, diu ac multum recusantem ad petitionem compellit. Is proximo comitiali die, concedentibus omnibus, qui cum Varrone certaverant, par magis in adversandum quam collega datur consuli. Inde prætorum comitia habita. Creati M'. Pomponius Matho 5 et P. Furius Philus; Philo Romæ iuri dicundo urbansors, Pomponio inter cives Romanos et peregrinos evenit; additi duo prætores, M. Claudius Marcellus 6 in Siciliam, L. Postumius Albinus in Galliam. Omnes absentes creati sunt, nec cuiquam eorum, præter Terentium consulem, mandatus honos, quem non iam antea gessisset, præteritis aliquot fortibus ac strenuis viris, quia in tali tempore nulli novus magistratus videbatur mandandus.

Exercitus quoque multiplicati sunt; quantae autem copiae peditum equitumque additae sint, adeo et numero et genere copiarum variant auctores, ut vix quicquam satis

Larger armies are set on foot in the hope of bringing the war to a close, certum affirmare ausus sim. Decem millia novorum militum alii scripta in supplementum, alii novas quattuor legiones, ut octo legionibus rem gererent; numero quoque peditum equitumque legiones auctas, millibus peditum et centenis equitibus in singulas adiectis, ut quina millia peditum, trecenti equites essent, socii duplicem numerum equitum darent, peditis aequarent, septem et octoginta millia armatorum et ducentos in castris Romanis fuisse, quam pugnatum ad Cannas est, quidam auctores sunt. Illud haudquaquam discrepat, maiore conatu atque impetu rem actam quam prioribus annis, quia spem, posse vinciri hostem, dictator praebuerat.

Ceterum priusquam signa ab urbe novae legiones moverent, decemviri libros adire atque inspicere iussi propter territos vulgo homines novis prodigis. Nam et Romae in Aventino et Ariciae nuntiatum erat sub idem tempus lapidibus pluvisse, et multo cruore signa in Sabinis sudasse et aquas fonte calido gelidas manasse; id quidem etiam, quod sæpius acciderat, magis terrebat; et in via fornicata, quae ad campum erat, aliquot homines de caelo tacti examinatique fuerant. Ea prodigia ex libris procurata. Legati a Pæsto pateras aures Romam attulerunt. Iis, sicut Neapolitanis, gratiae actae, aurum non acceptum.

Per eosdem dies ab Hierone classis Ostia cum magno commate accessit. Legati in senatum introducti nuntiarunt, cædem C. Flaminii consultis exercitusque allatum adeo ægre tulisse regem Hieronem, ut nulla sua propria regniique sui clade moveri magis potuerit. Ita-que, quamquam probe sciat, magnitudinem populi Romani admirabiliorem prope adversis rebus quam secundis esse, tamen se omnia, quibus a bonis fidelibusque sociis bella iuvari solcant, misisse; quae ne accipere abnuant, magno opere se patres conscriptos orare. Iam omnium primum ominus causa Victoriam auream pondo ducentum ac viginti afferre sese. Acciperent eam tenerentque et haberent propriam et perpetuam. Advexisse etiam trecenta millia modium tritici, ducenta hordei, ne commenatus deessent, et quantum præterea opus esset, quo iussissent, subvecturos. Milite atque equite scire nisi Romano Latinique nominis non uti populum Romanum; levium armorum auxilia etiam externa vidisse in castris Romanis. Itaque misisse mille sagittariorum ac funditorum, aptam manum adversus Baliarcs ac Mauros pugnacessque alias missili telo gentes. Ad ea dona consilium quoque addebat, ut praetor, cui provincia Sicilia evenisset, classem in Africam traiiceret, ut et hostes in terra sua bellum haberent, minusque laxamenti daretur iis ad auxilia Hannibali summittenda. Ab senatu ita responsum regi est, virum bonum egregiumque socium Hieronem esse atque uno tenore, ex quo in amicitiam populi Romanis venerit, fidemcoluisse ac rem Romanam omni tempore ac loco munifice adivisse. Id perinde, ac deberet, gratum populo Romano esse. Aurum et a civitatibus quibusdam allatum, gratia rei accepta, non accepisse populum Romanum; Victoriam omenque accipere, sedemque eis se divæ dare dicare Capitolium, templum Iovis optimi maximi. In ea arce urbis Romanæ sacratam volentem propitiamque, firmam ac stabilem fore populo Romano.
Funditores sagittariique et frumentum traditum consulis. Quinqueremēs ad centum viginti navium classem, quae cum T. Otacilio prōp[r]ætore in Sicilia erat, quinque et viginti addita, permissumque est, ut, si e re publica censeret esse, in Africam traiiceret.

Dilectu perfecto consules paucos morati dies, dum ab sociis ac nomine Latino venirent milites. Tum, The levies are raised with unusual solemnities. iurando ab tribunis militum adacti milites; nam ad eam diem nihil præter sacramentum fuerat, iussu consulum conventuros neque iniussu abituros, et ubi ad decurium aut centuriandum convenissent, sua voluntate ipsi inter sese decuriant equites, centuriati pedites coniurabant, sese fugae atque formidinis ergo non abituros neque ex ordine reces-suros nisi teli sumendi aut potendi [et] aut hostis fer-i-endi aut civis servandi causa. Id ex voluntario inter ipsos fœdere ad tribunos ac legitimam iuris iurandi adactionem translatum.

Contiones, priusquam ab urbe signa moverentur, consulis Varronis multæ ac feroce fuere, denuntiantis, bellum arcessitum in Ita-liam ab nobilibus mansurumque in visce-ribus rei publicæ, si plures Fabios imperatores haberet, se, quo die hostem vidisset, perfecturum. Collegiæ eius Paulus in a diffe-rent mood paulus is in a different mood Pauli una, pridie quam ex urbe proficisci- ceretur, contio fuit, verior quam gravior populo, qua nihil inclementer in Varronem dictum nisi id modo, mirari se, [quod ne] qui dux, priusquam aut suum aut hostium exercitum, locorum situm, naturam; regionis nosset, iam nunc togatus in urbe secrect, quæ sibi agenda armato forent, et diem quoque prædicere posset, qua cum hoste signis collatis esset dimicatus; se, quæ consilia magis res dent hominibus quam homines rebus, ea ante tempus immatura non præcepturum; optare, ut, quæ caute ac consule gesta essent, satis prospere evenirent; temeritatem, præterquam quod stulta sit, infeliciem etiam ad id locorum fuisse. Et sua sponte apparebat tuta celeribus consiliis præpositurum, et, quo id constantius perseveraret, Q. Fabius Maximus sic eum proficisceretem allocutus fertur.

"Si aut collegam, id quod mallem, tui similem, L. Æmili, haberes aut tu collega tui esses similis, supervacanea esset oratio mea; nam et duo boni consules, etiam me indicente, omnia e re publica fideque vestra faceretis et mali nec mea verba auribus vestris nec consilia animis acciperetis. Nunc et collegam tuum et te talem virum intuenti mihi tecum omnis oratio est, quem video nequicquam et virum bonum et civem fore, si, altera parte claudente re publica, malis consiliis idem ac bonis iuris et potestatis erit. Erras enim, L. Paule, si tibi minus certaminis cum C. Te-rentio quam cum Hannibale futurum censes; nescio an infestior hic adversarius quam ille hostis maneat te.
Cum illo in acie tantum, cum hoc omnibus locis ac temporibus certaturus es; adversus Hannibalem legionesque eius tuis equitibus ac peditibus pugnandum tibi erit, Varro dux tuis militibus te est oppugnaturus.
Ominis etiam tibi causa absit C. Flaminii memoria. Tamen ille consul demum et in provincia et ad exercitum cœpit furere; hic, priusquam peteret consulatum, deinde in petendo consulatu, nunc quoque consul, priusquam castra videat aut hostem, insanit. Et qui tantas iam nunc procellas prœlia atque acies iactando inter togatos ciet, quid inter armatam iuventutem censes facturum et ubi extemplo res verba sequitur?

Atqui si hic, quod facturum se denuntiat, extemplo pugnaverit, aut ego rem militarem, belli hoc genus, hostem hunc ignorò, aut nobilior alius Trasumenno locus nostris cladibus erit. Nec gloriandi tempus adversus unum est, et ego contemnendo potius quam appetendo gloriam modum exesserim; sed ita res se habet: una ratio belli gerendi adversus Hannibalem est, qua ego gessi. Nec eventus modo hoc docet (stultorum iste magister est), sed eadem ratio, quæ fuit futuraque, donec res eadem manebunt, immutabilis est. In Italia bellum gerimus, in sede ac solo nostro; omnia circa plena civium ac sociorum sunt; armis, viris, equis, commeatibus iuvant iuvabuntque:
id iam fidei documentum in adversis rebus nostris dederunt; meliores, prudentiores, constantiores nos tempus diesque facit. Hannibal contra in aliena, in hostili est terra inter omnia inimica infestaque, procul ab domo, ab patria; neque illa terra neque mari est pax; nullæ eum urbes accipiunt, nulla mœnia; nihil usquam sui videt, in diem rapto vivit; partem vix tertiam exercitus eius habet, quem Hiberum annem traiecit; plures fame quam ferro absumpti; nec his paucis iam victus suppeditat. Dubitas ergo, quin sedendo superaturi simus eum, qui senescat in dies, non commeatus, non supplementum, non pecuniam habeat?
Quamdiu pro Gereonii, castelli Apulie inopis, tanquam pro Carthaginis mœnibus sedet? Sed ne adversus te quidem de me gloriabor. Cn. Servilius atque Adversus ea oratio consulis haud sane laeta fuit, magis fatentis ea, quæ diceret, vera quam facilia factu esse. Dictatori magistrum equitum intolerabilem fuisset; quid consuli adversus collegam seditiosum ac temerarium virium atque auctoritatis fore? Se populare incendium priore consulatu semustum effugisse; optare, ut omnia prospere evenirent; sed si quid adversi caderet, hostium se telis potius quam suffragiis iratorum civium caput obieceturum.

Ab hoc sermone profectum Paulum tradunt, prosequentibus primoribus patrum; plebeium consulem sua plebes prosecuta, turba conspectior, quum dignitas deesset. Ut in castra venerunt, permixto novo exercitu ac vetere, castris bifariam factis, ut nova minora essent propius Hannibalem, in veteribus maior pars et omne robur virium esset, consulem anni prioris M. Atilium, aetatem excusantem, Romam miserunt, Geminum Servilium in minoribus castris legioni Romanæ et socium peditum equitumque duobus millibus praeficiunt. Hannibal quamquam parte dimidia auctas hostium copias cernebat, tamen adventu consulum mire gaudere. Non solum enim nihil ex raptis in diem commeatibus superabat, sed ne unde raperet quidem, quicquam reliqui erat, omni undique frumento postquam ager parum tutus erat, in urbes munitas convecto, ut vix decem dierum, quod compertum postea est, frumentum superesset, Hispanorumque ob inopiam transitio parata fuerit, si maturitas temporum exspectata foret.

Ceterum temeritati consulis ac præpropero ingenio materiam etiam fortuna dedit, quod in prohibendis praedatoribus tumultuario prœlio ac procursu magis militum quam ex præparato aut iussu imperatorum orto haudquaquam par Pœnis dimicatio fuit. Ad mille et septingenti cæsi, non plus centum Romanorum sociorumque occisis. Ceterum victoribus effuse sequentibus metu insidiarum obstitit Paulus consul, cuius eo die (nam alternis imperitabant) imperium erat, Varrone indignante ac vociferante, emissum hostem e manibus debellariique, ni cessatum foret, potuisse. Hannibal id damnum haud ægerrime pati; quin potius credere, velut ines-catam temeritatem ferocioris consulis ac novorum maxime militum esse. Et omnia ei hostium haud secus quam sua nota erant: dissimiles discordesque imperitare, duas prope partes tironum militum in exercitu esse. Itaque locum et tempus insidiis aptum se habere ratus, nocte proxima, nihil præ-ter arma ferente secum milite, castra plena omnis fortunae publicae privataeque relinquit, transque proximos montes læva pedites instructos condit, dextra equites, impedimenta per convalmem mediam traducit, ut diriendiis velut desertis fuga dominorum castris occupatum impeditusque hostem opprimeret. Crebri relictii in castris ignes, ut fides sieret, dum ipse longius spatium fuga præciparet, falsa imagine castrorum, sicut Fabium priore anno frustratus eset, tenere in locis consules voluisse. Ubi illuxit, subductæ primo stationes, deinde propius adeuntibus insolitum silentium admirationem fecit. Iam satis comperta solitudine in castris, concursus fit ad praetoria consulum nuntiantium fugam hostium adeo trepidam, ut tabernaculis stantibus castra reliquerint, quoque fuga obscurior esset, crebros etiam relictos ignes. Clamor inde ortus, ut signa proferri iuberent ducerentque ad persequendos hostes ac protinus castra diripienda. Et consul alter velut unus turbæ militaris erat; Paulus etiam atque etiam dicere providendum præcaven-dumque esse; postremo, quam aliter neque seditionem neque ducem seditionis sustinere posset, Marium Sta-tilium praefectum cum turma Lucana exploratum mittit. Qui ubi adequitavit portis, subsistere extra munimenta ceteris iussis, ipse cum duobus equitibus
He lays a trap for them.
vallum intravit, speculatusque omnia cum cura renuntiat, insidias profecto esse; ignes in parte castro-rum, quae vergat ad hostem, relictos; tabernacula aperta et omnia cara in promptu relictæ; argentum quibusdam locis temere per vias velut obiectum ad praedam vidisse. Quæ ad deterrendos a cupiditate animos nuntiata erant, ea accenderunt, et clamore or to a militibus, ni signum detur, sine ducibus ituros, haud-quaquam dux defuit; nam extemplo Varro signum dedit proficiscendi. Paulus, quem ei sua sponte eunc-tanti pulli quoque auspicio non addixisset, nuntiari iam efferenti porta signa collocavit. Quod quamquam Varro ægre est passus, Flaminii tamen recens casus Claudiique consulis primo Punico bello memo-rata navalis clades religionem animo incussit. Di prope ipsi eo die magis distulere quam prohibuere imminentem pestem Romanis; nam forte ita evenit, ut, quem referri signa in castra iubenti consuli milites non parerent, servi duo, Formiani unus, alter Sidicini equitis, qui Servilio atque Atilio consulibus inter pabulatorum excepti a Numidis fuerant, profugerent eo die ad dominos; deductique ad consules nuntiant, onnem exercitum Hannibalis trans proximos montes sedere in insidiis. Horum opportunus adventus consules imperii potentes fecit, quam ambitio alterius suam primum apud eos prava indulgentia maiestatem solvisset.

43 Hannibal postquam motos magis inconsulte Romanos quam ad ultimum temere evectos vidit, nequicquam detecta fraude in cas-tra redit. Ibi plures dies propter inopiam frumenti manere nequit, novaque consilia in dies non apud milites solum mixtos ex colluvione omnium gentium, sed etiam apud ducem ipsum oriebantur. Nam quum initio fremitus, deinde aperta vociferatio fuisset ex-posecentium stipendium debitum querentiumque anno-num primo, postremo famem, et mercenarios milites, maxime Hispani generis, de transitione cepisse con-silium fama esset, ipse etiam interdum Hannibal de fuga in Galliam dicitur agitasse, ita ut, relicito peditatu omni, cum equitibus se proriperet. Quum hæc consilia atque hic habitus animorum esset in castris, movere inde statuit in calidiora atque eo maturiora messibus Apuliae loca, simul ut, quo longius ab hoste recessisset, transfugia impeditiora levibus ingenii esse-sent. Profectus est nocte ignibus similiter factis ta-bernaculisque paucis in speciem relictis, ut insidiarum par priori metus contineret Romanos. Sed per eun-dem Lucanum Statilium omnibus ultra castra transque montes exploratis, quum relatum esset, visum procul hostium agmen, tum de insequendo eo consilia agitari copta. Quum utriusque consulis eadem, quæ ante semper, fuisset sententia, ceterum Varroni fere omnes, Paulo nemo praeter Servilium, prioris anni consulem, assentiretur, maioris partis sententia ad nobilitandas clade Romana Cannas urgente fato profecti sunt. Pro-pe eum vicum Hannibal castra posuerat aversa a Vul-turno vento, qui campis torridis siccitate nubes pulveris vehit. Id quum ipsis castris percommodum fuit, tum salutare præcipue futurum erat, quum aciem dirigerent, ipsi aversi, terga tantum asflante vento, in occæcatum pulvere offuso hostem pugnaturi.

Consules, satis exploratis itineribus, sequentes Poenum, ut ventum ad Cannas est et in conspectu Pœnum habeant, bina castra communient, eodem ferme intervallo, quo ad Gereonium, sicut ante, copiis divisis. Aufidus amnis, utrisque castris affluens, aditum aquatoribus ex sua cuiusque opportunitate haud sine certamine dabat; ex minoribus tamen castris, quæ posita trans Aufidum erant, liberius aquabantur Romani, quia ripa ulterior nullum habebat hostium praesidium. Hannibal spem nactus, locis natis ad equestrem pugnam, qua parte virium invictus erat, facturos copiam pugnandi consules, dirigit aciem lacessitque Numidarum procursatione hostes. Inde rursus sollicitari seditione militari ac discordia consulum Romana castra, quum Paulus Semproniiique et Flaminii temeritatem Varro-ni, Varro Paulo speciosum timidis ac segnibus ducibus exemplum Fabium obiiceret, testareturque deos hominesque hic, nullam penes se culpam esse, quod Hannibal iam velut usu cepisset Italian; se constrictum a collega teneri; ferrum atque arma iratis et pugnare cupidentibus adimi militibus; ille, si quid proiectis ac proditis ad inconsultam atque improvidam pugnam legionibus accideret, se omnis culpæ exsortem, omnis eventus participem fore diceret; videret, ut, quibus lingua tam prompta ac temeraria, æque in pugna vigerent manus.

45 Dum alterationibus magis quam consiliis tempus The Punic skirmishers harass the Romans, teritur, Hannibal ex acie, quam ad nul-tum diei tenuerat instructam, quum in castra ceteras reciparet copias, Numidas ad invadendos ex minoribus castris Romanorum aquatores trans flumen mittit. Quam inconditam turbam quam vixdum in ripam egressi clamore ac tumultu fugassent, in stationem quoque pro vallo locatam atque ipsas prope portas evecti sunt. Id vero adeo indignum visum, ab tumultuari auxilio iam etiam castra Romana terreri, ut ea modo una causa, ne extemplo transirent flumen dirigerentque aciem, tenerit Romanos, quod summa imperii eo die pene Paulum fuerit. Itaque postero die Varro, cui sors eius diei imperii erat, nihil consulto collega signum proposuit instructasque copias flumen traduxit, sequente Paulo, quia magis non probare quam non adiuquare consilium poterat. Transgressi flumen eas quoque, quas in cas- tris minoribus habuerant, copias suis adiungunt atque ita instruunt aciem: in dextro cornu (id erat flumini propius) Romanos equites locant, deinde pedites; læ- vum cornu extremiti equites sociorum, intra pedites, ad medium inuncti legionibus Romanis, tenerunt; iacu- latores cum ceteris levium armorum auxiliis prima acies facta. Consules cornua tenuere, Terentius lævum, Æmilius dextrum; Gemino Servilio media pugna tuenda data.

Hannibal luce prima, Balaribus levique alia arma-tura præmissa, transgressus flumen, ut quosque traduxerat, ita in acie locabat, Gallos Hispanosque equites prope ripam lævo in cornu adversus Romanum equitatum; dextrum cornu Numi-dis equitibus datum, media acie peditibus firmata, ita ut Afrorum utraque cornua essent, interponerentur his medi Galli atque Hispani. Afros Romanam magna ex parte crederes aciem; ita armati erant armis et ad Trebiam, ceterum magna ex parte ad Trasumenum captis. Gallis Hispanisque scuta eiusdem formæ fere erant, disparae ad dissimiles gladii, Gallis prælongi ac sine mucronibus, Hispano, punctim magis quam caesim assuetο petere hostem, brevitate habiles et cum mucronibus. Ante alios habitus gentium harum quem magnitudine corporem, tum specie terribilis erat: Galli super umbilicum erant nudi; Hispani linteis prætextis purpura tunicis, candore miro fulgentibus, constiterant.

Numerus omnium peditum, qui tum steterunt in acie, millium fuit quadraginta, decem equitum. Duces cornibus praerant sinistro Hasdrubal, dextro Maharbal; medium aciem Hannibal ipse cum fratre Magone tenuit. Sol seu de industria ita locatis, seu quod forte ita stetere, peropportune utrique parti obliquus erat, Romanis in meridiem, Pœnis in septentrionem versis; ventus (Vulturnum regionis incolae vocant) adversus Romanis coortus multo pulvere in ipsa ora volvendo prospectum ademit.

Clamore sublato, procursum ab auxiliis et pugna levibus primum armis commissa; deinde outmanoeuvred at Canne,
equitum Gallorum Hispanorumque lævum
cornu cum dextro Romano concurririt, minime equestris more pugnae; frontibus enim adversis concurrendum erat, quia, nullo circa ad evagandum relictio spatio, hinc amnis hinc peditum acies clausierant. In directum utrinque nitentes, stantibus ac confertis postremo turba equis, vir virum amplexus detrahebat equo. Pedestre magna iam ex parte certamen factum erat; acrius tamen quam diutius pugnatum est, pulsique Romani equites terga vertunt. Sub equestris finem certaminis coorta est peditum pugna, primo et viribus et animis par, dum constabant ordines Gallis Hispanisque; tandem Romani, diu ac sæpe connisi, obliqua fronte acieque densa impulere hostium cuneum nimis tenuem eoque parum validum, a cetera prominentem acie. Impulsis deinde ac trepide referentibus pedem institere ac tenore uno per praeceps pavore fugientium agmen in medium primum aciem illati, postremo nullo resistente ad subsidia Afrorum pervenerunt, qui utrinque reductis alis constiterant, media, qua Galli Hispanique steterant, aliquantum prominentem acie. Qui cuncus ut pulsus aequavit frontem primum, dein cedendo etiam sinum in medio dedit, Afri circa iam cornua fecerant, irrudentibusque incaute in medium Romanis circumdedere alas; mox cornua extendinge clausere et ab tergo hostes. Hinc Romani, defuncti nequicquam proelio uno, omissis Gallis Hispanisque, quorum terga ceciderant, adversus Afros integrum pugnam ineunt, non tantum eo iniquam, quod inclusi adversus circumfusos, sed etiam quod fessi cum recentibus ac vegetis pugnabant.

Iam et sinistro cornu Romano, ubi sociorum equites adversus Numidas steterant, consertum proelium erat, segne primo et a Punica coeptum frite. Quingenti ferme Numidae, praeter solita arma telaque gladios occultos sub loricis habentes, specie transfugarum quum ab suis parmas post terga habentes adequitissent, repetente ex equis desiliunt, parmisque et iaculis ante pedes hostium proiectis, in medium aciem accepti ductique ad ultimos considere ab tergo iubentur. Ac dum proelium ab omni parte consertitur, quieti manserunt; postquam omnium animos oculosque occupaverat certamen, tum arreptis scutis, que passim inter acervos caesorum corporum strata erant, aversam adorintur Romanam aciem, tergaque ferientes ac poplices caedentes stragem ingentem ac maiorem aliquanto pavorem ac
5 tumultum fecerunt. Quum alibi terror ac fuga, alibi pertinax in mala iam spe prœlium esset, Hasdrubal, qui ea parte prœerat, subductos ex media acie Numidas, quia sequi eas eorum cum adversis pugna erat, ad persequendos passim fugientes mittit, Hispanos et Gallos equites Afris prope iam fessis eæ magis quam pugna adiungit.

49 Parte altera pugnæ Paulus, quanquam primo statim praebiit, et prœliio funda graviter ictus fuerat, tamen et occurrit sepe cum confertis Hannibali et aliquot locis prœlium restituit, pro Gentibus eum equitibus Romanis, omissis postremo equis, quia consulem et ad regendum equum vires deficiebant. Tum renuntianti cuidam, iussisse consulem ad pedes descendere equites, dixisse Hannibalem ferunt: "Quam mallem, vinctos mihi traderet." Equitum pedestre prœlium, quale iam haud dubia hostium victoria, fuit, quum victi mori in vestigio mallent quam fugere, victores morantibus victoriam irati trucidarent, quos pellere non poterant. Pepulerunt tamen iam paucos superantes et labore ac vulneribus fessos. Inde dissipati omnes sunt, equosque ad fugam, qui poterant, repetebant. Cn. Lentulus tribunus militum quum praetervehens equo sedentem in saxo cruore oppletum consulem vidisset, "L. Æmili" inquit, "quem unum insontem culpæ cladis hodiernæ dei respicere debent, cape hunc equum, dum et tibi virium aliquid superest et comes ego te tollere possum ac protegere. Ne funestam hanc pugnam morte consulis feceris; etiam sine hoc lacrimarum satis luctusque est." Ad ea consul: "Tu quidem, Cn. Corneli, macte virtute esto; sed cave, stra miserando exiguum tempus e manibus hostium

2 and completely defeated with the loss of Paulus and nearly all the army.
evadendi absumas. Abi, nuntia publice patribus, ur-10 bem Romanam muniant ac, priusquam hostis victor advenit, præsidiiis firment; privatim Q. Fabio, L.
Æmilium præceptorum eius memorem et vixisse adhuc et mori. Me in hac strage militum meorum patere exspirare, ne aut reus iterum e consulatu sim aut accusa-tor college existam, ut alieno crimine innocentiam meam protegam." Hæc eos agentes prius turba fu-gientium civium, deinde hostes oppressere; consulem ignorantes, quis esset, obruere telis, Lentulum inter tumultum abripuit equus. Tum undique effuse fugiunt. Septem millia hominum in minora castra, decem in maiora, duo ferme in vicum ipsum Cannas perfugerunt, qui extemplo a Carthalaone atque equitibus, nullo munimento tegente vicum, circumventi sunt.
Consul alter, seu forte seu consilio nulli fugientium insertus agmini, cum quinquaginta fere equitibus Venusiam perfugit. Quadraginta quinque millia quingenti pedites, duo millia septimegenti equites, †et tanta prope civium sociorumque pars, caesi dicuntur; in his ambo consulum quaestores, L. Atilius et L. Furius Bibaculus, et undetriginta tribuni militum, consulares quidam praetorique et ædilicii (inter eos Cn. Serviliun Geminum et M. Minucium numerant, qui magister equitum priore anno, aliquot annis ante consul fuerat), octoginta praeterea aut senatores aut qui eos magis-tratus gessissent, unde in senatum legi deberent, quem sua voluntate milites in legionibus facti essent. Capta co prælo tria millia peditum et equites mille et quingenti dicuntur.

Hæc est pugna Cannensis, Aliensi cladi nobilitate par, ceterum ut illis, quæ post pugnam accidere, levior, quia ab hoste est cessatum, sic strage exercitus gravior fœdiorque. Fuga namque ad Aliam sicut urbem pro-didit, ita exercitum servavit; ad Cannas fugientem consulem vix quinquaginta secuti sunt, alterius mori-entis prope totus exercitus fuit.

Binis in castris quum multitudo semieri mis sine ducibus esset, nuntium, qui in maioribus ducibus est, mittunt, dum proelio, deinde ex lætitia epulis fatigatos quies nocturna hostes premeret, unt ad se transient: uno agmine Canusium abituros esse. Eam sententiam alii totam aspernari; cur enim illos, qui se arcessant, ipsos non venire, quam æque coniungi possent? quia videlicet plena hostium omnia
in medio essent, et aliorum quam sua corpora tanto periculo mallent obicere. Aliis non tam sententia dispricere quam animus deesse. P. Sempronius Tudita nus tribunus militum "Capi ergo mavultis" inquit
"ab avarissimo et crudelissimo hoste, aestimare capita vestra et exquiri pretia ab interrogantibus, Romanus civis sis an Latinus socius, ut ex tua conmelia et miseria alteri honos quaeratur? Non tu, si quidem L. Æmilii consulis, qui se bene mori quam turpiter vivere maluit, et tot fortissimorum virorum, qui circa eum cumulati iacent, cives estis. Sed antequam opprimit lux maioraque hostium agmina obsæpiunt iter, per hos, qui inordinati atque incompositi obstrepunt portis, erumpamus. Ferro atque audacia via fit quamvis per confertos hostes. Cuneo quidem hoc laxum atque solutum agmen, ut si nihil obstet, disiiicias. Itaque ite mecum, qui et vosmet ipsos et rem publicam salvam vultis." Hæc ubi dicta dedit, stringit gladium, cuncoque facto per medios vadit hos-LIBER XXII.

133
tes, et, quam in latus dextrum, quod patebat, Numidae iniacularentur, translatis in dextrum secatis, in maiora castra ad sexcentos evaserunt, atque inde protinus, alio magno agmine adiuncto, Canusium incolumes perveniunt. Hæc apud victos magis impetu animorum, quem ingenium suum cuique aut fors dabat, quam ex consilio ipsorum aut imperio cuiusquam agebantur.

Hannibali victori quam ceteri circumfusi gratularentur suaderentque, ut, tanto perfunctus bellò, diei quod reliquum esset noctisque insequentis quietem et ipse sibi suomeret et fessis dare militibus, Maharbal praefectus equitum, minime cessa sundum ratus, "Immo ut, quid haec pugna sit actum, scias, die quinto," inquit "victor in Capitolio epulaberis. Sequere; cum equite, ut prius venisse quam venturum sciant, præcedam." Hannibali nimis lata res est visa maiorque, quam ut eam statim capere animo posset. Itaque voluntatem se laudare Maharbalis ait; ad consilium pensandum temporis opus esse. Tum Maharbal: "Non omnia nimirum eidem di dedere. Vincere scis, Hannibal; victoria uti nescis." Mora eius diei satís creditur saluti fuisse urbi atque imperio.

Postero die, ubi primum illuxit, ad spolia legenda fœdamque etiam hostibus spectandam stragem exeunt. Iacebant tot Romanorum millia, pedites passim equitesque, ut quem cuique fors aut pugna iunxerat aut fuga; assurgentes quidam ex strage media cruenti, quos stricta matutino frigore excitaverant vulnera, ab hoste oppressi sunt; quosdam et iacentes vivos succisis feminibus poplitibusque invenerunt, nudantes cervicem iugulumque et reliquum sanguinem iubentes haurire; inventi quidam sunt mersis in effossam terram capitibus, quos sibi ipsos fecisse foveas obruentesque ora supericcta humo interclusisse spiritum apparebat. 9 Præcipue convertit omnes substratus Numida mortuo superincubanti Romano vivus, naso auribusque laceratis, quum, manibus ad capiendum telum inutilibus, in rabiem ira versa, laniando dentibus hostem exspirasset. 52 Spoliis ad multum diei lectis, Hannibal ad minora ducit castra oppugnanda, et omnium primum brachio obiecto flumine eos exclusit; ceterum ab omnibus labore, vigiliis, vulneribus etiam fessis maturior ipsius spe deditio est facta. Pacti, ut arma atque equos traderent, in capita Romana trecentis nummis quadrigatis, in socios duenos, in servos centenis, et ut eo pretio persoluto cum singulis abirent vestimentis, in castra hostes acceperunt, traditique in custodiam omnes sunt, seorsum cives sociique. Dum ibi tempus teritur, interea quam ex maioribus castris, quibus satis virium et animi fuit, ad quattuor millia hominum et ducenti equites, alii agmine, alii palati passim per agros, quod haud minus tutum erat, Canusium perfugissent, castra ipsa ab sauciis timidisque cadem condicione, qua altera, tradita hosti. Præda ingens parta est, et præter equos virosque et si quid argenti (quod plurimum in phaleris equorum erat; nam ad vescendum facto perexiguo, utique militantes, utebantur) omnis cetera præda diripienda data est. Tum sepeliendi causa conferri in unum corpora suorum iussit; ad octo milliauisse dicuntur fortissimorum virorum. Consulem quoque Romanum conquisitum sepultumque, quidam auctores sunt. 7 Eos, qui Canusium perfugerant, mulier Apula nomine Busa, genere clara ac divitiis, mœnibus tantum tectisque a Canusinis acceptos, frumento, veste, viatico etiam iuuit, pro qua ei munificentia postea, bello perfecto, ab senatu honorcs habiti sunt. Ceterum quum ibi tribuni militum quattuor essent, Fabius Maximus de legione prima, cuius pater prior anno dictator fuerat, et de legione secunda L. Publicius Bibulus et P. Cornelius Scipio et de legione tertia App. Claudius Pulcher, qui proxime ædilis fuerat, omnium consensu ad P. Scipionem admodum adelescentem et ad App. Claudium summa imperii delata est. Quibus 4 consultantibus inter paucos de summa rerum nuntiat P. Furius Philus, consularis viri filius, nequicquam eos perditam spem fovere; desperatam comploratamque rem esse publicam; nobiles iuvenes quosdam, quorum principem L. Cæcilium Metellum, mare ac naves spectare, ut deserta Italia ad regum aliquem transfugiant. Quod malum, præterquam atrox, super tot clades etiam novum, quem stupore ac miraculo torpidos defixisset, qui aderant, et consilium advocandum de eo censerent, negat consilii rem esse Scipio iuvenis, fatalis dux huiusce belli. Audendum atque agendum, non consultandum aut in tanto malo esse. Irent secum extemplo armati, qui rem publicam salvam vellent; nulla verius, quam ubi ea cogitentur, hospitium castra esse. Pergit ire sequentibus paucis in hospitium Metelli et, quam concilium ibi iuvenum, de quibus allatum erat, invenisset, stricto super capita consultantium gladio, "Ex mei animi sententia" inquit, "ut ego rem publicam populi Romani non deseram neque alium civem Romanum deserere patiar; si sciens fallo, tum me, Iuppiter optime maxime, domum, familiam remque meam pessimo leto afficias. In hæc verba, L. Cæcili, iures postulo ceterique, qui adestis. Qui non iuraverit, in se hunc gladium strictum esse scient." Hand secus pavidis, quam si victorem Hannibalern cernerent, iurant omnes custodiendosque semet ipsos Scipioni tradunt.

54 Eo tempore, quo hæ Canusii agebantur, Venusiam ad consulem ad quattuor millia et quinquagenti pedites equitesque, qui sparsi fuga per agros fuerant, pervenere. Eos omnes Venusini per familias benignè accipiendos curandosque quem divisisset, in singulos equites togas et tunicas et quadrigatos nummos quinos vicenos, et pediti denos, et arma, quibus deerant, dederunt, ceteraque publice ac privatim hospitaliter facta certatumque, ne a muliere Canusina populus Venusinus officiis vinceretur. Sed gravius onus Busæ multitudo faciebat; et iam ad decem millia hominum erant, Appiusque et Scipio postquam incolarem esse alterum consulem acceptum, nuntium extemplo mittunt, quantae secum pedites equitumque copiae essent, sciscitatumque simul, utrum Venusiam adduci exercitum an manere iubernet Canusii. Varro ipse Canusium copias traduxit; et iam aliqua species consularis exercitus erat mœnibusque se certe, si non armis, ab hoste videbantur defensori.

Romam ne has quidem reliquias superesse civium sociorumque, sed occidione occisum cum duobus consulibus exercitum deletasque omnes copias allatum fuerat. Nunquam salva urbe tantum pavoris tumultusque intra mœnia Romana fuit. Itaque succumbam oneri neque aggregiar narrare, quae edissertando minora vero faciam. Consule a exercitique ad Trasumenum priore anno amisse, non vulnus super vulnus, sed multiplex elades, cum duobus consulibus duo consulares exercitus amissi nuntiabantur, nec ulla iam castra Romana nec ducem nec militem esse; Hannibal is Apuliam, Samnium ac iam prope totam Italiam factam. Nulla profecto alia gens tanta mole cladis non obruta esset. Compare scilicet cladem ad Aegates insulas Carthaginensium praelio navali acceptam, qua fracti Sicilia ac Sardinia cessere et vextigales ac stipendiarii fieri se passi sunt, aut pugnam adversam in Africa, cu postea hic ipse Hannibal succubuit; nulla ex parte comparandae sunt, nisi quod minore animo latae sunt.

P. Furius Philus et M. Pomponius praetores senatum in curiam Hostiliam vocaverunt, ut de urbis custodia consulerent; neque enim dubitabant, deletis exercitibus hostem ad oppugnandum Romam, quod unum opus belli restaret, venturum. Quum in malis sicuti ingentibus, ita ignotis ne consilium quidem satis expediret, obstreperetque clamor lamentantium mulierum et, nondum palamfacto, vivi mortuique per omnes pene domos promiscue complorarentur, tum Q. Fabius Maximus censuit, equites expeditos et Appia et Latina via mittendos, qui obvios percontando (aliquos profecto ex fuga passim dissipatos fore) referant, quae fortuna consulum atque exercituum sit et, si quid dii immortales, miseriti imperii, reliquum Romani nominis feecerint, ubi ea copiae sint; quo se Hannibal post praelium contulerit, quid paret, quid agat acturasque sit. Hae 6 exploranda nescendaque per impigros iuvenes esse; illud per patres ipsos agendum, quoniam magistratu\um parum sit, ut tumultum ac trepidationem in urbe tollant, matronas publico arceant continerique intra suum quamque limen cogant, comploratus familiarum coercceant, silentium per urbem faciant, nuntios rerum omnium ad prætores deducendos curent, suæ quisque fortunæ domi auctorem exspectent, custodesque præterea ad portas ponant, qui prohibeant quemquam egredi urbe, cogantque homines nullam nisi urbe ac mænibus salvis salutem sperare. Ubi conticuerit tumultus, tum in curiam patres revocandos consulendumque de urbis custodia esse.

56 Quum in hanc sententiam pedibus omnes issent, summotaque foro per magistratus turba, patres diversi ad sedandos tumultus discessissent, tum demum litteræ a C. Tercientio consule allatae sunt: L. Æmilium consulem exercitumque cæsum; sese Canusii esse, reliquias tante cladis velut ex naufragio colligentem; ad decem millia militum ferme esse incompositorum inordinatorumque; Pœnum sedere ad Cannas, in captivorum pretiis prædaque alia nec victoris animo nec magni ducis more nundinantem. Tum privatae quoque per domos clades vulgatae sunt, adeoque totam urbem opplevit luctus, ut sacrum anniversarium Cereris intermissum sit, quia nec lugentibus id facere est fas nec ulla in illa tempestate matrona expers luctus fuerat. Itaque ne ob eandem causam alia quoque sacra publica aut privata desererentur, senatus consulto diebus triginta luctus est finitus. Ceterum quum, sedato urbis tumultu, revocati in curiam patres essent, aliae insuper ex Sicilia litteræ allatæ sunt ab T. Otacilio propraetore, regnum Hieronis classe Punica vastari; cui quem opem impioranti ferre vellet, nuntiatum sibi esse, aliam classem ad Ægates insulas stare paratam instructamque, ut, ubi se versum ad tuendam Syracusanam oram Pœni sensissent, Lilybœum extemplo provinciamque aliam Romanam aggregarentur; itaque classe opus esse, si regem socium Siciliamque tueri vellent.

Litteris consulis praetorisque lectis, consuerunt praetorem M. Claudium, qui classi ad Ostiam stanti praesset, Canusium ad exercitum mittendum, scribendumque consuli, ut, quem praetori exercitum tradidisset, primo quoque tempore, quantum per commodum rei publicae fieri posset, Romam veniret. Territi etiam super tantas clades quum ceteris prodigiis, tum quod duæ Vestales eo anno, Opimia atque Floronia, stupri comperta et altera sub terra, uti mos est, ad portam Collinam necata fuerat, altera sibimet ipsa mortem consciverat; L. Cantilius scriba pontificis, quos nunc minores pontifices appellant, qui cum Floronia stuprum fecerat, a pontifice maximo eo usque virgis in comitio cæsus erat, ut inter verbera exspiraret. Hoc nefas quem inter tot, ut fit, clades in prodigium versum esset, decemviri libros adire iussi sunt, et Q. Fabius Pictor Delphos ad oraculum missus est sciscitatum, quibus precibus suppliciis que deos possent placare, et quœam futura finis tantis cladibus foret. Interim ex fatalibus libris sacrificia aliquot extraordinaria facta, inter quæ Gallus et Galla, Graecus et Graeca in foro boario sub terram vivi demissi sunt in locum saxo consæptum, iam ante hostiis humanis, minime Romano sacro, imbutum.
Placatis satis, ut rebantur, deis M. Claudius Marcellus ab Ostia mille et quingentos milites, quos in classem scriptos habebat, Romam,
ut urbi præsidio essent, mittit; ipse, legione classica (ea legio tertia crat) cum tribunis mili-
tum Teanum Sidicinum præmissa, classe tradita P.
Furio Philo college, paucos post dies Canusium magnis itineribus contendit. Inde dictator ex auctoritate patrum dictus M. Iunius et T. Sempronius magister equi-tum, dilectu edicto, iuniores ab annis septendecim et quosdam prætextatos scribunt; quattuor ex his legiones et mille equites effecti. Item ad socios Latinumque nomen ad milites ex formula accipiendos mittunt. Arma, tela, alia parari iubent et vetera spolia hostium detrahunt templis porticibusque. Et aliam formam novi dilectus inopia liberorum capitum ac necessitas dedit; octo mil-lia invenum validorum ex servitiis, prius sciscitantes singulos, vellentne militare, empta publice armaverunt.
Hic miles magis placuit, quem pretio minore redimendi captivos copia fieret.

Namque Hannibal secundum tam prosperam ad cannas pugnam victoris magis quam bel-lum gerentis intentus curis, quum, capt-tivis productis segregatisque, socios, sicut ante ad Tre-biam Trasumennumque lacum, benigne allocutus sine pretio dimisisset, Romanos quoque vocatos, quod nun-quam alias antea, satis miti sermone alloquitur: non internecivum sibi esse cum Romanis bellum; de dignitate atque imperio certare. Et patres virtuti Romanæ cessisse et se id anniti, ut suæ in vicem simul felicitati et virtuti cedatur. Itaque redimendi se cap-tivis copiam facere; pretium fore in capita equiti quin-genos quadrigatos nummos, treecenos pediti, servo centenos. Quanquam aliquantum adiiciebatur equitibus ad id pretium, quo pepigerant dedentes se, laeti tamen quamcunque condicionem paciscendi acceperunt. Pla-cuit suffragio ipsorum decem deligi, qui and let's ten go to Rome to ask for funds, alius fidei, quam ut iurarent se redituros, acceptum. Missus cum bis Carthalo, nobilis Carthaginiensis, qui, si forte ad pacem inclinaret animus, condiciones ferret. Quum egessi castris essent, unus ex iis, minime Romani ingenii homo, veluti aliquid oblitus, iuris iurandi solvendi causa quum in castra redisset, ante noctem comites assequitur. Ubi Romam venire eos nuntiatum est, Carthaloni obviam lictor missus, qui dictatoris verbis nuntiaret, ut ante noctem excederet finibus Romanis. Legatis captivorum senatus ab dictatore datus est, quorum princeps M. Iunius “Patres conscripti” inquit, “nemo nostrum ignorat, nulli unquam civitati viliores fuisse captivos quam nostræ; ceterum, nisi nobis plus iusto nostra placet causa, non alii unquam minus negligendi vobis quam nos in hostium potestatem venerunt. Non enim in acie per timorem arma tradidimus, sed, quem prope ad noctem superstantes cumulis cæsorum corporum prælimium extraxissemus, in castra recipimus nos; diei reliquum ac noctem insequentem, fessi labore ac vulneribus, vallum sumus tutati; postero die, quam circumsessi ab exercitu victore aqua arceremur, nec ulla iam per confertos hostes erumpendi spes esset, nec esse nefas duceremus, quinquaginta millibus hominum ex acie nostra trucidatis, aliquem ex Cannensi pugna 6 Romanum militem restare, tune denum pacti sumus pretium, quo redempti dimitteremur, arma in quibus nihil iam auxilii erat, hosti tradidimus. Maiores quoque acceperamus se a Gallis auro redemisse, et patres vestros, asperrimos illos ad condiciones pacis, legatos tamen captivorum redimendorum gratia Tarentum misisse. Atqui et ad Aliam cum Gallis et ad Heraclæam cum Pyrrho utraque non tam clade infamis quam pavore et fuga pugna fuit. Cannenses campos acervi Romanorum corporum tegunt, nec supersumus pugnæ, nisi in quibus trucidandis et ferrum et vires hostem defeecerunt. Sunt etiam de nostris quidam, qui ne in acie quidem fuerunt, sed præsidio castris reliqui, quam castra traderentur, in potestatem hostium vererunt. Haud equidem ullius civis et commilitonis fortunæ aut condicioni invideo, nec premendo alium me extulisse velim: ne illi quidem, nisi pernicitatis pedum et cursus aliquod præmium est, qui plerique inermes ex acie fugientes non prius quam Venusie aut Canusii constiterunt, se nobis merito prætulerint gloriatique sint, in se plus quam in nobisnet præsidii rei publicæ esse. Sed et illis bonis ac fortibus militibus utemini et nobis etiam promptioribus pro patria, quod beneficio vestro redempti atque in patriam restituti fuerimus. Dilectum ex omni ætate et fortuna habetis; octo millia servorum audio armari. Non minor numerus noster est, nec maiore pretio redimi possumus, quam ii emuntur; nam si conferam nos cum illis, inu-riam nomini Romano faciam. Illud etiam in tali consilio animadvertendum vobis censeam, patres conscripti, si iam duriores esse velitis, quod nullo nostro merito faciatis, cui nos hosti relicturi sitis. Pyrrho videlicet, qui hospitum numero captivos habuit? An barbaro ac Pæno, qui utrum avarior an crudelior sit, vix existimari potest? Si videatis eatenas, squalorem, deformitatem civium vestrorum, non minus profecto vos ea species moveat, quam si ex altera parte cernatis stratas Cannensibus campis legiones vestras. Intueri potestis sollicitudinem et laerimas in vestibulo curiae stantium cognatorum nostrorum exspectantiumque responsum vestrum. Quum ii pro nobis proque iis, qui absunt, ita suspensi ac solliciti sint, quem censetis animum ip-sorum esse, quorum in discrimine vita libertasque est?
Si, mediusfidius, ipse in nos mitis Hannibal contra naturam suam esse velit, nihil tamen nobis vita opus esse censeamus, quam indigni ut redimeremur [a] vobis visi simus. Rediere Romam quondam remissi a Pyrrho sine pretio capti; sed rediere cum legatis, primoribus civitatis, ad redimendos sese missis. Redeam ego in patriam trecentis nummis non aestimatus civis? Suum quisque habet animum, patres conscripti. Scio, in discrimine esse vitam corpusque meum; magis me fama pe-riculum movet, ne a vobis damnati ac repulsi abeamus;
neque enim vos pretio pepercisse homines credent."

Ubi is finem fecit, extemplo ab ea turba, quæ in 60
comitio erat, clamor flebilis est sublatus, manusque ad curiam tendebant orantes, ut sibi liberos, fratres, cognatos redderent. Feminas quoque metus ac necessitas in foro turbae virorum immiscerat. Senatus sum-motis arbitris consuli capitus. Ibi quum sententiis variaretur, et alii redimendos de publico, alii nullam publice impensam faciendum nec prohibendos ex privato redimi; si quibus argentum in præsentia deesset, 4 dandum ex ærario pecuniam mutuam prædibusque ac praediiis cavendum populo censerent, tum T. Manlius Torquatus, priscæ ac nimis dure, ut plerisque videbatur, severitatis, interrogatus sententiam ita locutus fertur: Si tantummodo postulassent legati pro iis, qui in hostium potestate sunt, ut redimerentur, sine ullius insectatione eorum brevi sententiam peregissem; quid enim aliud quam admonendi essetis, ut morem traditum a patribus necessario ad rem militarem exemplo servaretis? Nunc autem, quum prope gloriat i sint, quod se hostibus dediderint, præferri que se non captis modo in acie ab hostibus, sed etiam iis, qui Venusiam Canusiumque pervenerunt, atque ipsi C. Terentio consuli æquum censuerint, nihil vos eorum, patres conscripti, quæ illie acta sunt, ignorare patiar. Atque utinam hæc, quæ apud vos acturus sum, Canusii apud ipsum exercitum agerem, optimum testem ignaviæ cuinque et virtutis, aut unus hic saltem adesset P. Semproni us, quem si isti ducem secuti essent, milites hodie in castris Romanis, non captivi in hostium potestate essent. Sed quum, fessis pugnando hostibus, tum victoria lætis et ipsis plerisque regressis in castra sua, noctem ad erumpendum liberam habuisse t, et septem millia armatorum hominum erumpere etiam per confertos hostes possent, neque per se ipsi id facere conati sunt neque alium sequi voluerunt. Nocte prope tota P. Semproni us Tuditanus non destitit monere, adhor tari eos, dum paucitas hostium circa castra, dum quies ac silentium esset, dum nox inceptum tegere posset, se ducem sequerentur: ante lucem pervenire in tuta loca, in sociorum urbes posse. Si, ut avorum memoria P. Decius tribunus militum in Samnio, si, ut nobis adolescentibus priore Punico bello Calpurnius Flamma trecentis voluntariis, quum ad tumulum cos capiendum situm inter medios duceret hostes, dixit 'Moriamur, milites, et morte nostra eripiamus ex obsidione circumventas legiones,' si hoc P. Sempronius diceret, nec viros equidem nec Romanos vos ducerem, si nemo tantae virtutis exstitisset comes. Viam non ad gloriam magis quam ad salutem ferentem demonstrat; reduces in patriam ad parentes, ad coniuges ac liberos facit. Ut servemini, deest vobis animus: quid, si moriendum pro patria esset, faceretis? Quinquaginta millia civium sociorumque circa vos eo ipso die caesa iacent. Si tot exempla virtutis non movent, nihil unquam movebit; si tanta clades vilem vitam non fecit, nulla faciet. Liberi atque incolumes desiderate patriam; immo desiderate, dum patria est, dum cives eius estis! sero nunc desideratis, deminuti capite, abalienato iure civium, servi Carthaginienium facti. Pretio redituri estis eo, unde ignavia ac nequitia abistis? P. Sempronius civem vestrum non audistis arma capere ac sequi se iubentem; Hannibalem post paulo audistis castra prodi et arma tradi iubentem. Quanquam ego ignaviam istorum accuso, quem scelus possim accusare. Non modo enim sequi recusarunt bene monentem, sed obsistere ac resistere conati sunt, ni strictis gladiis viri fortissimi inertes summovissent. Prius, inquam, P. Sempronio per civium agmen quam per hostium fuit erumpendum. Hos cives patria desideret, quorum si ceteri similis fuissent, neminem hodie ex iis, qui ad Cannas pugnaverunt, civem haberet? Ex millibus septem armaorum sexcenti exstiterunt, qui erumpere auderent, qui in patriam liberi atque armati redirent, neque his sexcentis hostes obstitere; quam tutum iter duarum prope legionum agmini futurum censetis fuisse? Haberetis hodie viginti millia armatorum Canusii fortia, fidelia, patres conscripti. Nunc autem quemadmodum hi boni fidelesque (nam ‘fortes’ ne ipsi quidem dixerint) cives esse possunt? Nisi quis credere potest, aut favisse erumpentibus, qui, ne erumperent, obsistere conati sunt, aut non invidere eos quum incolunmitati, tum glorie illorum per virtutem partae, quum sibi timorem ignaviamque servitutis ignominiosæ causam esse sciant.

Maluerunt in tentoriis latentes simul lucem atque hostem exspectare, quam silentio noctis erumpendi occasio esset. At ad erumpendum e castris definit animus, ad tutanda fortiter castra animum habuerunt; dies noctesque aliquid obsessi vallum armis, se ipsi tutati vallo sunt; tandem ultima ausi passique, quum omnia subsidia vitae deessent affectisque fame viribus arma iam sustinere nequirent, necessitatiis magis humanis quam armis victi sunt. Orto sole hostis ad vallum accessit; ante secundam horam, nullam fortunam certaminis experti, tradiderunt arma ac se ipsos. Hæc vobis istorum per biduum militia fuit. Quum in acie stare ac pugnare decuerat, tum in castra refugerunt; quum pro vallo pugnandum erat, castra tradiderunt, neque in acie neque in castris utiles. Et vos redimam? Quum erumpere e castris oportet, cunctamini ac manetis; quum manere et castra tutari armis neccesse est, et castra et arma et vos ipsos traditis hosti. Ego non magis istos redimendos, patres conscripti, censeo, quam illos dedendos Hannibali, qui per medios hostes e castris eruperunt ac per summam virtutem se patriæ restituerunt.”
Postquam Manlius dixit, quanquam patrum quo-que plerosque captivi cognitione attinge-bant, praeter exemplum civitatis minime in captivos iam inde antiquitus indulgentis, pecuniae quoque summa homines movit, quia nec serrarium exhaurire, magna iam summa erogata in ser-vos ad militiam emendos armandosque, nec Hannibalem, maxime huiusce rei, ut fama erat, egentem, locupletari volebant. Quum triste responsum, non redimi 3 captivos, redditum esse, novusque super veterem luc-tus tot iactura civium adiectus esset, cum magnis fletibus questibusque legatos ad portam prosecuti sunt.
Unus ex iis domum abiit, quod fallaci reeditu in castra iure iurando se exsolvisset. Quod ubi innotuit relatumque ad senatum est, omnes censuerunt comprehendendum et custodibus publice datis deducendum ad Hannibalem esse.

Est et alia de captivis fama: decem primos venisse;
de eis quum dubitatum in senatu esset, admitterentur in urbem necne, ita admissos esse, ne tamen iis senatus daretur; morantibus deinde longius omnium spe, alios tres insuper legatos venisse, L. Scribonium et C. Calpurnium et L. Man-lium; tum demum ab cognato Scribonii tribuno plebis de redimendis captivis relatum esse, nec censuisse redimendos senatum; et novos legatos tres ad Hannibalem revertisse, decem veteres remansisse, quod per causam recognoscendi nomina captivorum ad Hannibalem ex itinere regressi religione sese exsolverissent; de iis dedendis magna contentione actum in senatu esse, victosque paucis sententiis, qui dedendos censuerint; ceterum proximis censoribus adeo omnibus notis

10—2
ignominiisque confecos esse, ut quidam corum mortem sibi ipsi extemplo consciverint, ceteri non foro solum omni deinde vita, sed prope luce ac publico caruerint. Mirari magis, adeo discrepare inter auctores, quam, quid veri sit, discernere queas.

Quanto autem maior ea clades superioribus cladi-bus fuerit, vel ea res judicio est, quod fides sociorum, quae ad cam diem firma steterat, tum labare ccepit, nulla profecto alia de re quam quod desperaverant de imperio. Defecere autem ad Pœnos hi populi: Atellani, Calatini, Hirpini, Apulorum pars, Samnites præter Pentros, Bruttii omnes, Lucani, præter hos Uzentini, et Græcorum omnis ferme ora, Tarentini, Metapontini, Crotonienses Locrique, et Cisalpini omnes Galli. Nec tamen ea clades defectionesque sociorum moverunt, ut pacis usquam mentio apud Romanos fieret, neque ante consulis Romam adventum nec postquam is rediit renovavitque memoriam acceptæ cladis; quo in tempore ipso adeo magno animo civitas fuit, ut consuli ex tanta clade, cuius ipse causa maxima fuisset, redeunti et obviam itum frequen-ter ab omnibus ordinibus sit et gratiae actæ, quod de re publica non desperasset; qui si Carthaginiensi ductor fuisset, nihil recusan-dum supplicii foret.

The Romans hear of revolt among their allies on all sides but will not think of making peace.

Varro on his return is met, not with reproaches, but with thanks for not despairing of the common wealth.
NOTES.

BOOK XXI.

P. 1, c. 1. § 1. In parte operis. Livy’s work in nearly 150 books covered the whole history of Republican Rome; books xxi.—xxx. dealt with the Second Punic War.

summae totius = τῆς συντάξεως of Polybius. Cf. Lucr. i. 983, spatio summae totius omne. Cic. Qu. fr. iii. 5. 5, in omni summa. Summa is often used substantively in Livy, and with a genitive as summa rerum, imperii, spei, rei bellicae, rei publicae. Cf. Vita summa brevis, Hor. Carm. i. 4. 15, and hodiernae summae, iv. 7. 17.

rerum scriptores. For the historians who wrote specially on this war see the Introduction on the Authorities, but cf. also the beginning of Thucydides, who calls the Peloponnesian War μέγαν τε καὶ αξιολογώτατον τῶν προγεγενημένων.

unquam, though properly used in negative sentences, is employed at times with si to increase the indefiniteness of the statement, and even absolutely when the indefiniteness is to be made still more emphatic. Cf. use of quisquam Seneca de tranquill. 11, cuivis potest accidere quod cuiquam potest.

Hannibale. The name meant in Punic ‘favour of Baal,’ Schröder Phœn. Sprache p. 87. The 2nd a was long in Ennius and in the speech of the earlier Romans (Aul. Gell. iv. 7) as in Hasdrubal, Hamilcar, but became shortened in familiar use, just as the aspirate which had at first the Punic sound of ch, was softened, and often dropped completely, as in the Greek, 'Αννίβας. Corssen Aussprache der Lat. Spr. i. 99.

§ 2. virium aut roboris, ‘resources or endurance.’ Polyb. ii. 24 estimates the armies which Rome could raise with the Italian contingents as 700,000 foot and 70,000 horse. He asks the question i. 64 why in later days of empire she could no longer put such forces on the field.

inter sese, sed. Heerwagen notes that the alliteration was in such cases less displeasing to Roman than to modern ears, cf. Cic. opt. gen. or. 2. 6, nec generibus inter sese sed facultatibus different.

artes conserebant is formed on the analogy of pugnam or manus conserere. The reading conferebant found in some MSS. is approved by Rupert and by Madvig as a more natural expression.

expertas primo Punico, i.e. each of the combatants had learnt its rival's skill by the experience of the first war. Yet the naval skill of Carthage was comparatively little used in the 2nd war, probably because the Barcine party had neglected the fleet. But Hamilcar had given proof of a genius like that of Hannibal in his power of welding into unity a motley host of various nationalities.

propius p. ... q. vicerunt. Rome, though victorious, was brought to the brink of ruin by the early successes of Hannibal. Muretus notes that Silius Italicus in the corresponding passage writes propiusque fuere periclo | quies superare datum. Livy elsewhere often uses the acc. as xxii. 40. 5, propius Hannibalem, iv. 17. 3, propius fidem, xxiii. 12. 4, quo propius spem vicerunt here used absolutely, cf. xxiii. 13. 4, quam (pacem) quum vincimus, dat nemo.

§ 3. ultro inferrent a. 'should presume to attack.' Cf. i. 5. 2, ultro accusantes; of the robbers who accused Romulus of theft.

superbe, in threatening war and taking Sardinia; avare in raising the war indemnity by 1200 talents. Polyb. iii. 10.

crederebant does not properly balance inferrent, as it rather repeats than justifies the idea of the word indignantibus, and the subj. is due to a looseness of style as in Cic. Phil. ii. 4, at etiam literas, quas me sibi misisse diceret, recitavit homo.

imperitatum. Livy has a special affection for frequentative forms, and often uses this one.

§ 4. Fama est. Polyb. iii. 11 says that H. himself told this story to Antiochus in later days. Cf. Livy, xxxv. 19.

annorum novem. The gen. of the quality is here immediately connected with a proper name as in iii. 27. 1, L. Tarquiniun patriciæ gentis; xxii. 60. 5, Torquatus priscæ se-veritatis. Fabri.
blandientem, used in pregnant sense with ut, 'coaxingly entreating.' Blandus is connected by Bopp and Curtius with ἰδεῖνος and ἰλία, mla passing into bla, cf. the like change in the formation of βλαττέων, βροτός.

Hamilcar, a name meaning 'friend of Melcart.' Schröder, p. 87.

altaribus, a word used almost exclusively in the plural, though of a single altar (ara).

P. 2, § 5. amissae, 'the loss of Sicily and S.' Cf. 16. 2, pudor non lati auxiliis, and xxii. 34. 2, ex dictatorio imperio concusso. It is a form not used by Cicero, but very common in Tacitus, as Ann. i. 8, Occisus Cæsar aliis pessimum, aliis pulcherrimum facinus visum.

Sardinia said by Polybius to be νῆσος τῆς μεγέθει καὶ πολυentreating.' Blandus is connected by Bopp and Curtius with ἰδεῖνος and ἰλία, mla passing into bla, cf. the like change in the formation of βλαττέων, βροτός.

Hamilcar, a name meaning 'friend of Melcart.' Schröder, p. 87.

altaribus, a word used almost exclusively in the plural, though of a single altar (ara).

P. 2, § 5. amissae, 'the loss of Sicily and S.' Cf. 16. 2, pudor non lati auxiliis, and xxii. 34. 2, ex dictatorio imperio concusso. It is a form not used by Cicero, but very common in Tacitus, as Ann. i. 8, Occisus Cæsar aliis pessimum, aliis pulcherrimum facinus visum.

Sardinia said by Polybius to be νῆσος τῆς μεγέθει καὶ πολυentreating.' Blandus is connected by Bopp and Curtius with ἰδεῖνος and ἰλία, mla passing into bla, cf. the like change in the formation of βλαττέων, βροτός.

Hamilcar, a name meaning 'friend of Melcart.' Schröder, p. 87.

altaribus, a word used almost exclusively in the plural, though of a single altar (ara).

P. 2, § 5. amissae, 'the loss of Sicily and S.' Cf. 16. 2, pudor non lati auxiliis, and xxii. 34. 2, ex dictatorio imperio concusso. It is a form not used by Cicero, but very common in Tacitus, as Ann. i. 8, Occisus Cæsar aliis pessimum, aliis pulcherrimum facinus visum.

Sardinia said by Polybius to be νῆσος τῆς μεγέθει καὶ πολυentreating.' Blandus is connected by Bopp and Curtius with ἰδεῖνος and ἰλία, mla passing into bla, cf. the like change in the formation of βλαττέων, βροτός.

Hamilcar, a name meaning 'friend of Melcart.' Schröder, p. 87.

altaribus, a word used almost exclusively in the plural, though of a single altar (ara).

P. 2, § 5. amissae, 'the loss of Sicily and S.' Cf. 16. 2, pudor non lati auxiliis, and xxii. 34. 2, ex dictatorio imperio concusso. It is a form not used by Cicero, but very common in Tacitus, as Ann. i. 8, Occisus Cæsar aliis pessimum, aliis pulcherrimum facinus visum.

Sardinia said by Polybius to be νῆσος τῆς μεγέθει καὶ πολυentreating.' Blandus is connected by Bopp and Curtius with ἰδεῖνος and ἰλία, mla passing into bla, cf. the like change in the formation of βλαττέων, βροτός.

Hamilcar, a name meaning 'friend of Melcart.' Schröder, p. 87.

altaribus, a word used almost exclusively in the plural, though of a single altar (ara).

P. 2, § 5. amissae, 'the loss of Sicily and S.' Cf. 16. 2, pudor non lati auxiliis, and xxii. 34. 2, ex dictatorio imperio concusso. It is a form not used by Cicero, but very common in Tacitus, as Ann. i. 8, Occisus Cæsar aliis pessimum, aliis pulcherrimum facinus visum.

Sardinia said by Polybius to be νῆσος τῆς μεγέθει καὶ πολυentreating.' Blandus is connected by Bopp and Curtius with ἰδεῖνος and ἰλία, mla passing into bla, cf. the like change in the formation of βλαττέων, βροτός.

Hamilcar, a name meaning 'friend of Melcart.' Schröder, p. 87.
NOTES. XXI. c. ii. §§ 1—3.

imbrem, is decisive for 'just before.' The mercenary war "which followed closely on the treaty with Rome," lasted three years and four months, Pol. i. 88. The five years of Livy probably cover the warlike movements against the Numidians mentioned by Diodorus.

novem annis, from 236 to 227 B.C. Note the change to the abl. after quinque annos.

In Hispania. The Phœnicians had in remote ages planted colonies on the coast of Spain, which fell in time under the influence of Carthage. The wealth of the mines tempted her to push her way further inland, but no great progress had been made till Hamilcar annexed much of the South, and changed the imperial policy of Carthage. The vast revenues of the mines and the hardy material for soldiers were the chief objects in view; like Cæsar, he went to conquer a province, and organize an army for future uses. It is curious to contrast the speedy conquests made by these generals with the slow progress of Rome in finally subduing Spain. In a later age the Arabs, of Semitic race (possibly) akin to that of Carthage, possessed themselves of Southern Spain, and attained to a high degree of power and culture, in the Moorish kingdoms of Cordova and Granada.

§ 2. que. Weissenborn and Fabri adopt the qui of the MSS. but it is a less probable reading.

ductu. The modal abl. of one of the verbal forms in the 4th decl. which are of frequent use in Livy. It is here employed to vary the H. duce of the line before.

peropportuna. Cf. vi. 1. 5, mors adeo opportuna ut voluntariam magna pars crederet.

distulerunt. For the use of this word Fabri compares xliv. 1. 12, metus de consule atque exercitu distulit munienda Aquileia curam.

Hasdrubal means 'help of Baal,' Schröder, p. 100.

flore ætatis. Scandalous gossip probably circulated among the partisans of Hanno, the rival faction to that of the Barca family, so styled from the personal name, meaning lightning, of the great Hamilcar.

conciliatus, for this use cf. xxii. 34. 2, hominem plebi insectatione principum conciliatum.
§ 4. plus quam modicæ. Fabius Pictor (ap. Polyb. iii. 8) stated that Hasdrubal returned to Carthage from Spain, with the design of making himself despot, but being opposed by the ἀειωλογοι ἄνδρες, he returned to Spain, disregarding henceforth the authority of the senate, as did his successor Hannibal. This Polyb. regards as an idle effort of faction to throw all the odium of the war on the Barcine faction, which later history reflecting such jealousies of party calls an ἐταιρία τῶν πονηροτάτων ἄνδρῶν.

piebem...principum. See the Introduction for a sketch of the government of Carthage. Livy here, as elsewhere, employs technical Roman terms, as if the constitutional usages were the same.

§ 5. hospitium. Formal contracts of friendly alliance were often entered into in the old world between persons, families and tribes, pledges of which were interchanged as ξύμβολα or tesseræ. Documents are still preserved in the inscriptions in which engagements of this kind are entered into or formally renewed, as in one where two Spanish clans (gentilitates) of the same tribe hospitium vetustum antiquum renovaverunt eique omnes altis altum in fidem clientelamque suam suorumque liberrum posterorumque recepit. One form lasted on in Greece in the προεκληθήνα which was largely used in commercial and religious intercourse. Corssen i. 796 explains hospes as a shortened form of hosti-pe(t)s = stranger-protecting from root patis = πόσις. As to the root ghus- from which he derives hostis, Mommsen, R. F. 326, regards it as simply = 'to eat.' Corssen says it is to 'tear' or 'wound.'

conciliandis. Hasd. according to Diodorus, 25. 17, married himself the daughter of one of the Sp. chieftains; principes may be distinguished from reguli as nobles from kings, as Weissenborn suggests.

§ 6. nihilō tuitor. For the form of the phrase Fabri compares nihilō accurātōr το. 37. 1, nihilō quietior, ix. 37. 1, nihilō faciētor, xxxi. 26. 5.

ridentis speciem. Here as often Livy employs a partic. absolutely, where we should use a subst. Compare the Stoic firmness of some uncivilized races with the sensibilities of the Greeks of Homer.

praebuerit. The frequency of the subjunc. perf. in dependent sentences after ut is a peculiarity of Livy's style, as realizing more vividly the completed result § 7. Cum hoc Hasd. To imply his practical independence of the government at Carthage.

sollicitandis. Connected with Oscan sollus = totus, ὅλος and salvus, so sollistimus, sollemnis, &c. Corssen, i. 486.

foedus renov. Polyb. ii. 13 gives details of the disquietude at Rome, and of the wish to attack the growing power in Spain, which was delayed only by the pressure of the Gallic war. As the Romans had no possessions in Spain, to define the limit of the Hiberus, and to stipulate for Saguntum, was in fact an insult to the sovereign power of Carthage. Foedus = foïdus is connected with fides, like πίστωθα with πίστις. Curtius, Gr. Etym. p. 236, rejects Mommsen’s explanation from fundere, like σπονδῇ, spondeo.

ut, ‘on condition that’ = ἐκφέρει, cf. Polyb., as it was a new stipulation added to the treaty of 241 B.C., but Pol. does not mention any provision for Saguntum.

P. 3, c. iii. § 1. In Hasdrubalis locum. There is nothing in the sentence to correspond to these words. Something may have dropped out which referred to them, but more probably it is one of those cases of which Madvig speaks in his Kleine Phil. Schr. p. 359, where there is a want of balance and connexion in Livy’s artificial periods. He specifies as examples i. 7. 7 and i. 46. 1. Fabri quotes as an example of Livy’s anacolutha, xxviii. 31. 1, Lælius...auditis qua acta Gadibus erant......nuntiiis ad L. Marcium missis...redeundum ad imperatorem esse, adsentiente Marcio paucos post dies ambo Carthaginem rediere.

quin...sequebatur. The MS. reading is here quite corrupt, especially in quam, where only qua is possible, and in the omission of the apodosis after erat. Drakenborch’s reading prærogativam...sequeretur makes fair sense, but lays great stress on the popularity of Hannibal, who could hardly have been much known by the plebs, although the wealth of Spain may have been used to secure adherents at home, and Polybius says, δὲ ὑμοὶ μηδὲ γνώμη κυριαν ἐπολήσε τὴν τῶν στρατοπέδων αἵρεσιν, iii. 13.

prærogativa. A metaphor taken from the usage of the Roman comitia. The tribe on which the lot fell to vote first often influenced the vote of the wavering, and so the term carried associations of authority. Cf. iii. 51. 5, ne comitiorum militarium prærogativam sequeret urbana comitia, add Cic. Mur. 18. 38, tanta illis comitiis religio est ut adhue semper omen valuerit prærogativum.

prætorium. The tent of the Roman general, and so the head-quarters of the legion; hence applied to the palace of a governor, Ev. Matt. xxvii. 27, as also to the quarters of the prætorian cohorts, Ep. ad Philipp. i. 13. prætor = prætori, 'first in rank,' is the oldest title of the chief magistrate of the republic. Cf. Ascon. in Cic. Verr. i. 14, veteres omnem magistratum, cui paret exercitus, prætorem appellaverunt. Unde et prætorium tabernaculum ejus dicitur, et in castris porta prætoria, et hodie quoque Prefectus Prætorio. The term is here extended to Punic usage.

favor is said by Quintilian to have been thought a new word by Cicero, favorem et urbanum Cicer nova credit, ii. 20. 10, though it was used by Lucretius, vi. 47. It was first probably applied to applause in the theatre, and Cicero speaks apologetically of his use of it. Or. pro Sestio 54, qui rumore et, ut ipsi loquuntur, favore populi tenetur.

§ 2. Vixdum puberem. He was however about 23-years old, for he was nine when his father went to Spain for nine years, and he joined Hasdrubal after five of his eight years of rule were over. Cf. 2. 3 and 4. 10.

ad se accers. Yet 1. 4 implies that he went to Spain with Hamilcar. Probably here, as elsewhere, Livy reproduces distinct traditions. Cælius Antipater, in a passage quoted by Priscian, viii. 960, seems to refer to H., antequam Barca pererat alii rei causa in Africam est missus. Yet Livy xxx. 37. 9 makes him say, novem annorum a vobis profectus post sextum et tricesimum redii. In that case he would have had little chance of learning statesmanship at home.

§ 3. Hanno. Probably the chief rival of Hamilcar after the 1st war, the feud and reconciliation between whom were so important in the struggle with the mercenaries. It was however, like other Punic names, a common one with leading men at different periods.

§ 4. admiratione...convertisset. For the form of the phrase cf. xxii. 30. 1, prefecti...in admirationem...converterunt.

pro...rudimento. For this use of pro = 'as if that were' Fabri compares xxii. 33. 6, hostes pro hospitibus comiter accepti. xxiv. 25. 3, quum...pro domino possederit.

§ 5. regni paterni sp. 'The show of monarchy which his father assumed.' Cf the charges of Fabius in Polyb. iii. 8 against Hasdrubal, ἐπιβαλέσθαι εἰς μοναρχίαν περιστήσαι τὸ πολίτευμα.

hereditarii. Cf. the power of associations, coupled with a name, over the veterans of Caesar and the countrymen of Napoleon.

quandoque is commonly used by Livy in the sense of 'since,' or 'whenever.' Here the indefinite meaning 'at some time or other' grows out of the elliptical use 'whenever it may be,' following ne as it follows quoad in Cic. Fam. 6. 19 quoad ille quandoque veniat. Tacitus however, Ann. vi. 20, uses it in this indefinite sense by itself, et tu Galba quandoque degustabis imperium.

c. iv. § 1. maior pars. Note the admission that the partisans of H. were the majority in the senate. It was not therefore merely a popular party, supported by the army, which dragged the country against its will into a war with Rome, according to the theory maintained by Fabius Pictor, and refuted by Polyb. iii. 8, though in later days H. may have been accused by his political opponents as responsible for all the losses of the war, and Livy puts this charge into the mouth of the ambassadors of Carthage, xxx. 22. r, eum injussu senatus non Alpes modo sed Iberum quoque transgressum.

In optimus, meliorem, we have traces of the old confusion so common in classical literature, by which moral terms are used to distinguish political parties. Cf. the use of ἐπιεικείς, βέλτιστοι, σοφοί, πολιτεύειν σωφρονέστερον in Thucydides, who speaks of the unscrupulous Antiphon as ἀρετῆς οὐδενὶ ύπερος.

credere...intueri. The historic infinitives here give vigour and liveliness to the passage.

P. 4. lineamenta. Linea is connected with littera, lino, from a root sli=smear, found in our slime, Corssen i. 383.

pater in se... 'His father's memory was but little needed to gain the popular good will,' or, 'his likeness to his father was but the least influence,' &c., i.e. was only the least among many influences. For use of momentum cf. i. 47. 4, ipsa regio semine orta nullum momentum in dando adimendoque regno faceret. From the early meaning of the 'weight which turned the scale,' movimentum, came secondary meanings, as in the parallel cases of gravis, serius, both of which first denoted physical weight, and then moral.

§ 3. discerneres, a use of the imperfect subj., frequent in Livy, where the pluperf. would seem more natural to us, as ii. 43. 9, crederes victos. The earlier part of this description seems too enthusiastic to have come from a Roman annalist; probably it may be traced to Philinus, who wrote in the Punic interest. Here again Livy seems to have combined two distinct accounts, for the latter part is purely Roman. It has been thought that Sallust's description of Catiline suggested some of the language here used, but the resemblance is not very close. The early part of it is repeated by Livy xxvi. 41. 25, of the young Scipio Africanus.

§ 4. praeficere is used absolutely, a common feature of Livy's style.

fortiter ac strenue, epithets frequently combined. Fabri quotes Cic. Phil. ii. 32, si minus fortem, attamen strenuum. Strenuus is probably connected with στερεός, στρηνής, sterilis, starr, Curtius 193.

§ 7. id, i.e. temporis. The use of superesse with the dative of the gerundive is unusual. 'Leisure from active work.'

custodias, sentinels on guard on the ramparts of the camp.

stationes, 'outposts' or pickets at outlying points.

§ 9. Polyb. ix. 24 says that the Romans thought cruelty the special vice of H., but that his namesake, Monomachus, was the real author of much that was complained of. In any case, the sufferings imposed on Italy by so desperate and long a struggle, the requisitions for the troops, and the outrages of camp followers, must have associated the name of H. in popular memory with deeds of terrible oppression. Polyb. regards the charge of avarice as best supported by the evidence of the Carthaginians themselves, and of Masinissa, who knew him well.

perfidia...Punica. Cf. xxii. 6. 12, Punica religione servata fides ab Hannibale est. On this popular sentiment, cf. Horace, Carm. iv. 4. 45, dixitque tandem perfidus Hannibal, and 43, impio | vastata Pænorum tumultu | fana. As to the Punic character, cf. Cic. de leg. agr., Carthaginienses fraudulenti et mendaces, non genere sed natura loci, quod propter portus suos, multit et variis mercatorum et advenarum sermonibus, ad studium fallendi studio questus vocabantur. It was like the 'perfidious Albion' as used of England. The Romans had little right to make such a charge. Their treatment of Carthage had been strangely wanting in good faith, and the foreign policy of the Roman Senate was too often a course of unscrupulous craft and egotism, for the religious reverence for which Polybius praises them so highly was little shown in international dealings.

nihil ... The Latin writers have recourse to nihil with the partitive genitive, or to nullus, to express ideas for which no abstract negatives existed, such as ‘irreverence,’ ‘irreligious.’ See Nägelsbach, Stilistik, p. 61.

Religio is the sense of the unseen world as a binding or constraining force (whether from religare, as in Lucretius, religionum nodis exsolvere, or from relegere, as Cicero N. D. ii. 28). It is wider than deum metus, which refers only to the fear of divine punishment. Fabri quotes as a limitation of this Pliny, Nat. H. xvi. 40, cui (templo) pepercit religione inductus Hannibal. But it is needless to discuss seriously the extreme language of national antipathy.

§ 10. meruit, used properly with stipendia, then absolutely = ‘served.’

agenda..., ‘which one who hoped to be some day a great general could do for himself or learn from others.’

c. v. § 1. provincia delecta. A metaphor taken from the Roman usage by which special departments were assigned to the consuls and praetor. Cf. 17. 1.

§ 2. ne se quoque. But the time may have seemed auspicious while Rome had the Gauls upon her hands.

P. 5. cunctantem. Notwithstanding the similarity in form the root of cunctor (connected with okveiv) is probably distinct from that of cunctus (= covincius or cojunctus), or percontor (from contus, a punt-pole). Cf. Curtius, 638.

§ 3. Quibus oppugnandis... ‘as by an attack on them Rome was sure to be provoked to war.’

Olcadum, a people to the S. W. of Saguntum, mentioned also in Polyb. iii. 13, in connexion with this campaign, but otherwise unknown.

ultra, i.e. from the point of view of Livy or a Roman reader.

in parte magis, i.e. on the side of the Hiberus which was left to Carthage by the treaty with Hasdrubal, though not as yet conquered.

rerum serie... ‘by the course of events, the conquest that is of neighbouring tribes, and the annexation of their territory.’ The absolute use of jungendo seems very awkward, and Usener suggests aliud agendo quasi tractus, but Fabri illustrates this use of jungere from Pliny, Ep. iii. 19, Prædia agris meis vicina atque etiam inserta venalia sunt...sollicitat primum ipsa pulchritudo jungendi. For the combination of subst. and gerund. in appos. serie...jungendo, cf. iii. 40. 1, nec ire nec ignoscendi modum, vi. 13. 6, fugae sequendique finis.

§ 4. Cartala, called 'Αλβάλα by Polyb. iii. 13. The first syllable is probably Carth or Kiriath as in Carthago, Carteia.

Carthaginæm Novam. Note the pleonasm in the name, for Carthago itself = Carthada a shortened form of Carth-had-(as) = new town, so Serv. Æn. i. 366, Carthago est lingua Πανορόμ νων νως, ut docet Livius. Schröder, p. 85. Cf. like formations in Hampton-wick, Wansbeck-water.

Carth. Nova had been built by Hasdrubal with regal splendour, and chosen as a naval base for aggressive operations, having a spacious harbour sheltered by an island at the mouth, and being protected by marshes. Strabo speaks of its great natural strength, and the revenue from its mines, fisheries and commerce (iii. 4. 6). Pliny (33. 6) mentions a single mine which brought in to Hannibal 300 pounds of silver daily. A full description of the site is given in Polyb. x. 10, an eyewitness, in connexion with its memorable capture by Scipio.

§ 5. partiendo ... Note the awkwardness of so many abl. forms in this sentence. It is one of the peculiarities of Livy's style to employ the abl. so often without a prepos. praedâ for præ-henda. Cf. prædium (præhendium), præbere (præhibere), debere (dehibere). Corssen, i. 108.

§ 6. Hermandica. Polyb. 'Ελμαντική, possibly the Salamanca of later days, W.

§ 7. Carpetanos. Καρπατίου, described by Polyb., iii. 14, as one of the strongest tribes in the neighbourhood of the Tagus, where Madrid and Toledo afterwards were built.

§ 9. ab hostibus, 'on the side of.' Cf. xxii. 16. 3, and i. 50. 6, ne id quidem ab Turno tulisse tacitum ferunt.

ita, 'only so far,' Fabri; but perhaps not necessarily 'only,' as Hannibal may have thrown his camp forward beyond the crossing place.

§ 10. impediment, the acute suggestion of Heerwagen for peditum.

§ 11. appendicibus, 'contingents.'

invicta contains elliptically the protasis to si= 'which would have been unconquerable.'

P. 6, § 12. id morari... 'that their victory was delayed only by the river which flowed between them.'
NOTES. XXI. c. v. § 14—c. vi. § 3.

§ 14. instabilis ac vix vado f. i.e. could hardly be sure of his footing even where the stream was fordable.

§ 16. a tanto pavore. To justify insertion of a cf. ii. 50. 7, recipiendi a pavore tanto animum.

fugam ex r. f. 'drove them in flight from the bank.'

c. vi. § 1. "War with S. was not yet declared, but there were already grounds for war. The neighbouring tribes were made to pick a quarrel with them, especially the Turdetani. As he who had stirred them to arms also espoused their cause, and it was clear that the intention was to appeal, not to arbitration, but the sword," &c. Fabri and W. leave out the stop after causa, and make it an abl. explanatory of serebantur.

Turdetani. These, according to Strabo m. 2, lay on the Bætis near Gades; the Edetani may be meant, for they were on the coast between Carthago Nova and the Hiberus, Str. m. 4. 1.

§ 3. Consules tunc. Yet see the doubts expressed by Livy 15. 4.

de re publ. rettul. The position of the consul who presided in the Senate was unlike that of Speaker or of Leader in a modern Parliament. He did not commonly keep order merely in debate, or move a distinct resolution, but stated the subjects for discussion, and appealed to the senators to speak de re publica. As to this expression Fabri quotes from Gell. xiv. 7 Varro's description of the customary usage, de rebus quoque divinis prius quam humanis ad senatum referendum esse, tum porro referri oportere aut infinite de republica aut de singulis rebus finite.

Legatus is used for a commissioner entrusted with a special function, and is not a definite name for official rank, and hence it retains its participial meaning, as 'bound,' or 'despatched.' (Cf. lex, collega, ligare, Corssen, n. 444.) The fetiales in early days had been the regii nuntii to discharge formalities of international intercourse. This was however a priestly corporation, and filled by co-optation: its duties were gradually narrowed to ceremonial details when war was actually declared. For previous negotiations the Senate decided in each case to have commissioners (legati), leaving their choice commonly to the Executive, but fixing their number and qualifications, and giving them definite instructions. In later days for foreign wars the commander-in-chief was allowed to nominate legati, who should represent the Senate in his council of war, and undertake any functions, military or administrative, to which he might depute them. Like praefectus, the name implied only delegated functions, and required other adjuncts to make it definite.

ad res inspic. A usual phrase in Livy for the duties of special commissioners. Cf. iv. 36. 2, xxvi. 35. 8.

§ 4. quibus si v., for qui si videretur iis...according to a frequent usage of attraction.

denuntiarent. To be written with a t like all compounds of nuntius, which = noventius, from novus, like nundinae from novem, contio from conventio. So the inscriptions and best MSS. Corssen, i. 51.

P. 7, § 5. hac legatione...resumes the whole series of clauses which form the protasis of the sentence.

necdum missa. This is hardly consistent with the account of Polyb. iii. 14, who makes the Roman envos treat with H. at Carth. Nova, and spreads the whole over a longer time. The conjunction dum, which is also found as an affix of many words, as in nedum, vixdum, nihildum, interdum, &c., seems to proceed from -dium, the accus. form of -dius, -diu, found in perdius, interdiu, and to mean ‘the day through,’ ‘the while.’ Corssen, ii. 856.

§ 6. alii prov. ‘Some were for assigning at once to the consuls the departments of,’ &c. Cf. 17. 1. As Fabri remarks, decerno is often used for decerni volo. Cf. 10. 13, ii. 29. 8.

alii totum. ‘Others were for limiting the range of war to’... Fabri and Weiss. read intenderant with most of the MSS., i.e. ‘they had already at the first discourse,’ &c. This is an awkward change of tense, but not unexampled in Livy.

e. vii. § 1. Saguntum lay in the midst of a rich and fertile country, Polyb. iii. 17. It was afterwards rebuilt, and famous for its red pottery, the calices Saguntini of Martial, and though Moor and Goth have built with the materials of the past, its muri veteres have given it the modern name of Mur-viedro, as the urbs vetus of central Italy became Orvieto. The old castle, crowned by Moorish walls and towers, is still a fortress which is the key of Valencia.

§ 2. passus mille. The sea has since retired to three times this distance from the site of the old town.

Oriundi. For the constr. ad synesim, civitas...oriundi, cf. xxvi. 19, 11, Emporiis urbe Graeca (oriundi et ipsi a Phocaea sunt) copias exposuit. With the participial use of oriundi compare that of volvendus as used by Lucr. v. 514, 1276 with sidera, ætas, the volvenda dies of Vergil, and volvendus clamor of Ennius.

a Zacyntho. The identity of the names becomes apparent if we remember that in early Latin there was no distinction of C and G, and that Z, T and Ø were all letters of late introduction. The termination um may be paralleled by Epidamnum, Ilium, Pergamum, formed from Greek words in -os. Early coins clearly point to the fact of Greek inhabitants, and are very like those of Massilia. Cf. C. I. L. ii. p. 511.

§ 3. tantas. There is no relative to balance this, but it may refer to the proofs drawn from the siege.

fidem socialem. This is a bit of false sentiment, as Saguntum fought for itself, though it asked help from Rome.

§ 4. infesto. A word constantly used with exercitu, signis, agmine, &c., of any aggressive movement.

§ 5. Polybius omits all details of the siege, but he states the motives of H., his wish to strike terror into Spain, and to leave no elements of danger behind him in his march for Italy, as also his need of funds to secure adherents at Carthage.

cetera circa. This use of the adverb for the adj. or ellipse for qua circa erant, where the Greeks would put an article before the adverb, is common in Livy, especially in the case of circa. Cf. xxii. 28. 4, omnibus circa solo æquatens, i. 58. 2, postquam satis tuta circa...videbantur.

vineas. These were an important part of a Roman siege train, covering as they did the men who were trenching, undermining, or bringing up the battering rams. They are described by Vegetius iv. 15 as eight feet high, seven broad, and sixteen long, covered above with planks and hurdles, and at the sides with a screen of osiers, coated with raw hides at the surface. They were then locked together to form one continuous defence, under which the assailants could work.

§ 6. ut ..., ‘although ... yet little progress was made when they came to press the siege in earnest.’

effectum is one of Livy’s favourite verbals in us, of which he uses more than most writers, and in cases elsewhere less familiar, as spe effectus for Cicero’s spe efficiendi.

succeedebat, often used impersonally by Livy. Fabri quotes xxiv. 38. 3, cui (fraudi) quoniam parum succidit; xxv. 37. 19, si successisset captis.

P. 8, § 7. ut in suspecto, i.e. as was natural in. Cf. 12. 4, ut ab irato victore, and viii. 30. 7, multis potitus spoliis ut ex tanta cæde, where the Greeks might use ola elkos. At other times the ut is used in a restrictive sense, as vir ut inter Ætolos facundos, xxxii. 33. 9.

ceteræ alt., briefly put for the height of the wall in other places, constr. prægn.

obsistebant. The plural verb with inventus is common in Livy, cf. iv. 56. 6, omnium populorum inventus Antium contracta, ibi castris positis hostem opperiebantur, so vii. 2. 5.

§ 8. nec quicquam ..., ‘did not allow the besiegers to approach anywhere in safety,’ a favourite form of Sallust. Jug. 66, nihil intactum neque quietum pati; also 88. Fabri.

§ 9. tumultuariis, often used by L., as 8. 7 of pugna, and extended even to miles i. 37. 6, castra xxvii. 16. 7, and opus xlii. 63. 4.

§ 10. tragula, so xxiv. 42. 2, femur tragula confixum, and Cæsar, Bell. Gall. v. 35. 6, utrumque femur tragula trajicitur. Varro, L. Lat. iv. 24, derives it from trajicere. The construction of the acc. of the part affected is more frequent in poetry than prose.

c. viii. § 1. curaretur. The subj. expresses the purpose of the delay.

§ 2. pluribus p., a local abl. constantly used by Livy without a prepos.

cæptæ agi. Livy varies in his use of the word cæpi. Often as here he says, like Cicero, agi cæptum, impediri cæpta res, and nearly always with fieri, using a double passive, but at times he has phrases like templum adificari capit. Cf. Madvig Kleine Phil. Schr. p. 364.

§ 4. itaque is generally taken with the next sentence, but the asyndeton of cæpti sunt, non sufficiebant would be very abrupt. W. proposes to omit sunt, and thinks the passage unfinished or corrupt. It is not satisfactory as it stands. Sufficere is used by Livy both with a case, as x. 18. 7, quum bello tuo forsitan vix sufficias, and absolutely as xxxvi. 45. 2, quoad remiges sufficere potuerunt.

§ 5. una..., "one side (pars), where a wide breach was made, had exposed the city to assault." The form of the sentence is somewhat bold, for 'the city was exposed on one side by,' &c.

deciceps, 'one after the other,' explanatory of the foregoing clause. It seems to be an old nominative form, used adverbially, such as princeps, manceps, terticeps, anceps, inceps (Festus), so 'taking the place from there,' de-in-cep. Corssen, n. 591.

§ 6. velut si, i.e. besiegers and besieged showed equal readiness in their advance, as if the wall had been before a screen to both alike.

§ 7. tumultuariae pugnae, explained in xxv. 34. 9 by agmina magis quam acies pugnabant...ut in tumultuaria pugna... per occasionem, i.e. when either side gave or seized a chance of attack.

alterius is here, as elsewhere, nearly equivalent to alterius utrius. Heerwagen compares xxiv. 3. 17, inter eos levia prælia ex occasione aut opportunitate hujus aut illius partis oriabantur.

conscri, a more graphic phrase for a number of petty conflicts than conciri, adopted by Heerwagen for the conscri of most MSS.

cetera. Heerwagen notes that Cicero does not use this neut. plur. absolutely as Livy and Horace often do.
§ 12. conceptumque ..., 'and the flame which it carried was fanned by the mere motion to a fiercer heat.'

nudum, often used like γυμνὸς, of anyone unarmed or defenceless. Cf. iii. 19. 6, arma vobis ademit nudosque servis vestris ... object.

c. ix. § 1. Saguntinis...Pœnus. The change in number is abrupt, but the latter word is used of the army, and not as sometimes of the general, cf. xxxv. 40. 6.

quia resisterent is properly in the conj., as the thought of the S., and ground of their confidence: unlike the quod crederent of 1. 3, which is irregular.

§ 2. in ruinas muri. The battle had taken place in the clear ground between the walls and the houses inside, answering probably to the pomarium of Roman towns, or to the space left for the way which ran inside the walls, by which the garrison could pass to any point.

§ 3. tot tam. For the asyndeton Fabri compares v. 54. 3, tot tam valida oppida, xxv. 24. 14, tot tam opulentii tyranni.

Hannibali... 'H. had no leisure for negotiations at such a moment,' cf. in ipso discrimine periculi, vi. 17. 1; and on the use of rerum 1. 5. Polyb. iii. 15 says that the envoys were admitted, but answered scornfully. Note the hexameter, arma, nec Hannibali in tanto discrimine rerum. On the tendency to let such verses slip into prose style, Cic. in Orat. lxvi. Versus sæpe in oratione per imprudentiam dicimus: quod vehementer est vitiosum...senarios vero et hippoclacteos effugere vix possumus; magnam enim partem ex iambis nostra constat oratio ...inculcamus autem...sæpe etiam minus usitatos. Quintilian notices, Inst. ix. 4, T. Livius hexametri exordio copit, 'facturusque opera pre tum sim.' So Tacitus Ann. i. 1, Urbem Romanam a principio reges habuere. Livy vii. 11, Pugnatum hanc procul | Porta Collina est totius viribus urbis, and xxii. 50. 10, hac ubi dicta dedit stringit gladium cuneoque facto per medios vadit. In Greek writers also the same tendency may be noted at times, as in Thuc. ii. 49, φλυκτάναις μικραίς καὶ ἐκείνην ἐξηνιθηκός. And Ep. Iacob. i. 17, πᾶσα δόσις ἀγαθὴ καὶ πᾶν δῶρημα τέλειον. Cf. Drakenburch, Livy, Praef. i.

P. 10, § 4. ne quid... 'That the rival party might take no steps in deference to Rome,' this is the reading of Perizonius for pro R., which is opposed to the common construction of gratificari.

e. x. § 1. præterquam qualifies vana atque irrita, and is not related to quoque as usually in sentences of this form. W.
§ 2. adversus senatum. The reading of most MSS. is adverso senatu ‘contrary to the wishes of the senate,’ in which H. had a majority, as adversa nobilitate, vi. 42. 6. The non is omitted in the MSS. before cum adsensu, but is required by the facts of the case, and there will be no repetition if we take adversus in the sense of ‘urged before the senate.’

causam...egit, ‘pleaded for the maintenance of the treaty.’

§ 3. monuisse, præd. For this asyndeton Fabri compares ii. 10. 1, itaque monere prædicere, ut pontem...interrumpant.

manes means properly the ‘good folk,’ opposed to immanis. Corssen, i. 43, connects both with manus, metari, mensura, from the root ma=measure.

quietura, ‘would rest...undisputed,’ for this negative sense of q. cf. xxii. 18. 9, medicos plus quiete quam movendo proficere.

§ 4. flagrantem cup. r. This was a charge frequently used with dangerous effect in the civil struggles of Rome. The examples of J. Cæsar would be fresh in the minds of Livy and his readers.

ex bellis bella serendo. Cf. ii. 18. 10 and xxxi. 6. 4.

legio, properly ‘a gathering’ from legere, like legumen, spicilegium, sacrilegus, &c.

§ 6. ius gentium sust., ‘made light of international law;’ this insisted on respectful treatment of ambassadors, but H. was justified in referring them to his own government. Cf. jure gentium agunt, i. 14. 1.

ut publica, i.e. as a proof that, or assuming that the state was not at fault they demand the surrender of the guilty cause of the offence. For this sense of publica fraus cf. xxx. 25. 4, seu Hasdrubale...sine publica fraude auro facinus. Cf. v. 36. 7, postulatum ut pro jure gentium violato Fabii dedentur. Most MSS. omit the ut which Perizonius inserted.

§ 7. Ægates. The decisive defeat of Carthage off these islands brought the first war to a close, b. c. 241. They were in front of Lilybaeum.
Erycem, now Monte di San Guiliano, the scene of Hamilcar's gallant stand for years against the Roman forces.

Isti, i.e. the Barcine party; iste is often used of an opponent in a lawsuit, and with implied dislike.

Tarento. The appearance of a Punic fleet off Tarentum had been urged as a ground for the first war, cf. Epit. Liv. xiv., but Polyb. iii. 26 gives at length the early treaties between Rome and Carthage, and exposes the error of those writers who hold that R. was bound to abstain from Sicily, and C. from Italy.

§ 9. homines. Madvig omits the que usually added to this word in order to emphasize the divine intervention, and makes vicerunt used absolutely; but dii hominesque is a very common phrase, and the change seems needless.

Id de quo is used absolutely, not in appos. to a following sentence. It may be explained as referring to judex, as if it were ejus de quo = 'the subject of debate.'

Unde, for 'on whose side,' as above, § 6, unde ne hostium q. l. Cf. iv. 43. 9, unde (i.e. ab Æquis) si quid increparet terroris.

§ 11. in eo, 'in the case of,' H. eo...quod 'for this reason.' eo...unde, 'thither.' Note the different senses in which eo is used in following lines.

§ 12. dedendum. We must supply censeo from the next sentence.

Ad piaculum... 'to atone for...' as xlv. 10, ad piaculum noxæ. Some MSS. have id p., and piaculum is often used by Livy as 'victim,' cf. vi. 21. 7, ne piacula dederentur.

Accidere. Cf. 61. 1. So in L. vox, clamor, strepitus accidit; the common reading was accedere.

Quietae civ. st. Hypallage for quietum civitatis statum, as 11. 8, structure antiquæ genere for antiquo.

c. xi. § 1. perorasset. The peroratio which brought a speech to a close was of special rhetorical importance.

Adeo prope omnis. Cf. 57. 14 the still stronger form adeo omnis.

Omnis...Hannibalis erat. Cf. iii. 36. 10, hominum non causarum toti erant.

Flaccus Valerius. Fabri notes that the usual order of prænomen, nomen and cognomen, is often neglected by Livy, sometimes in putting the prænomen last as Fabius Quintus, more often in putting nomen after cognomen as Crassus Licinius, Antias Valerius.

§ 2. ortum ab S. Polyb. iii. 15 refers to a despatch from H. to Carthage complaining of aggressions of the Saguntines on the Carthaginian subjects. Saguntinos short for Saguntinorum societatem. Cf. ix. 10. 1, Postumium...devotione P. Decii...aquabant, and many like examples in Livy.

P. 12. vetustissimæ. The earliest treaty of R. with C. dated from 508 B.C.

ira...stimulando. The abl. accompanied by the gerund is awkward. The MSS. do not vary, though Gronovius reads stimulanda, but Fabri observes that Livy does not use stimulare iram, but st. aliquem or animum, in other places. Usener supposes promittenndo to have slipped out of the second half of the sentence, in which there is a want of balance.

§ 4. contio for conventio is used for an assembly in the city, or the camp, as also for an harangue pronounced on such occasions, so pro contione = 'publicly.'

extemplo. Adverb formed of prepos. and noun like inprimis, perviam, illico, obviam, &c. Templo connected with tempus and τέμπευω.

§ 7. turris. The moveable tower (t. ambulatoria) of later times is described by Vegetius, iv. 17, as 30 to 50 feet square, and so high as to overtop, not the walls only, but the towers of the besieged city. It was covered with raw hides to be screened from fire, and was moved along on rollers to the point of attack. In the lowest story was contained a battering ram, in the middle was a drawbridge, which might suddenly be lowered and secured with grappling irons to the walls for a boarding party, while the higher stories were filled with men who poured a shower of missiles of every kind upon the enemy.

catapultis. Latinized form of καταπέλτης from πάλλω. With it we may possibly connect pilum. Corssen, n. 157.

ballistis. See the description in Vegetius iv. 22, Ballista funibus nervinis tenditur, quæ quanto prolíxiōra brachiola habuerit, hoc est, quanto major fuerit, tanto spicula longius mittit.
§ 8. caementa. The small stones used in rambling work, or for foundations, or piers. Cf. Hor. Od. iii. 1. 34, caementa demittit redemptor. Corssen connects it with cæspes, lapicida, scindo, and the root skid = cut.

interlita luto, 'with layers of mud between the courses.'

§ 9. patentia ruinis, 'the breach.' L. often uses neut. participles substantively, like aversa urbis, extrema agminis, but the constr. with an abl. is still bolder.

P. 13, § 10. murum interiorem ducent. A wall crossing the other at points where the old work was firm. This was sometimes called brachium. Cf. iv. 9. 14, consul muro Ardeæ brachium injuxerat, xxii. 52, brachio objecto flumine eos excludit.

Oretanos. Described by Strabo iii. 1 as South of the Carpetani, and on the mountain range now called the Sierra Morena.

dilectus. This is the proper form of the word, not delectus, as the Roman idea was not so much that of choosing from the mass (de), as of distributing (di) among the 4 legions the conscripts of each tribe, as described by Polyb. vi. 20.

c. xii. § 1. cives. The term could strictly be applied to only few in H.'s army, which was mainly composed of the subject races.

§ 2. arietibus. In the 16th century large fragments of a battering ram were still shown at Saguntum (Murviedro) in the castle, which were of great antiquity, and traditionally described as part of the siege train of H., and as such copied in the works of early travellers. Cf. Hermes ii. 450.

§ 4. Tentata. 'Slight as was the hope of peace, efforts were made to gain it.' Cf. xxviii. 38. 4, tentata est spes triumphi. On the spelling of tentare Ritschi says in his Prolegomena, nec de temptare forma post Bentleium hodie fere dubitatur, referring to Bentley's remark, Hoc in omne genus MSS. animadverteri, tam veterrimus mille et ducentorum annorum, quam recentioribus, vel temptare scribi, vel rarius tentare; nunquam quod hodie obtinet, tentare. Some of the best inscriptions also give temptare. It was however an etymological blunder, by which the tentare from tentus, tendere was assimilated to the temptus from temnere, in which the p was inserted for euphony between m and n.

Hispanum. Either generally, or in distinction to the Saguntines who were said to be of foreign race.

movebant. Fabri remarks on the frequent use of the imperfect with postquam, in cases where the action is supposed still to continue. Cf. iii. 60. 8, postquam jam multa dies erat, necque movebatur quiquam.

condiciones. 'Harsh conditions were named as might be expected from an implacable enemy.' This spelling of condicio is almost invariably found in the best MSS. and inscriptions; the derivation from condere must therefore be given up in favour of that which connects it with dicio, judicare, dikη, and the root dik. On the use of ut, cf. 7. 7.

transfuga ex or. 'Turned deserter instead of advocate.'

sub condic. The sub is very rarely used in this connexion, as condicio is used absolutely in the abl. Heerwagen thinks that it emphasizes the dependent condition of the Saguntines.

P. 14, § 6. interpretem. For the use of the word cf. ii. 33. 14, huic interpreti arbitroque concordiae civium. Curtius connects interpretem with S. prat, and φραδ, φράσσω.

publice S. 'Recognized by the State of Saguntum as,' &c.

§ 8. senatus datus. 'Audience was given in the senate to.' This sense suits most of the passages in which the phrase is used in Livy, but in some it can only refer to a special meeting convened for the purpose, as in xxvi. 21. 1, where the prætor calls the senate together to discuss the claims of an applicant for a triumph. So too of the corresponding expressions, xxiii. 7. 11, senatum extemplo postulat, where the demand is for a special meeting.

c. xiii. § 1. veni. The subj. venissem of the MSS. here seems out of place in reference to the definite hoc iter, and Madvig reads veni. sed, thinking that this was written veni set, then changed to venisset, and afterwards as a mistake in the person to venissem.

§ 2. pro. 'In the name of,' 'out of regard for.'

§ 3. loqui, quæ loquor. A sort of repetition constantly occurring in Latin writers. Fabri compares Quintil. ix. 3. 80, accedit et ea illa figura gratia, qua nomina dixi mutatis casibus repeti 'non minus cederet quam cessit.'

vel ea fides sit. 'Evidence may be found in the fact that.'
§ 4. Postquam...est. 'Now that there is.' A rare sequence of tense, as the est is not the historical present. It should be postquam eo ventum est ut. Heerwagen compares 30. 5, postquam multo majorem partem itineris emensam cernat.

§ 5. Culus ita. 'Some slight hope of which is left provided that you accept its terms as conquered men, seeing that H. dictates them as a conqueror, and do not think of what you forfeit as a loss, but of what you are allowed to keep as a free gift, seeing that all you have is at your conqueror's mercy.' The change of mood from the auditis of the MSS. which most editors retain, to habituri estis, can hardly be explained on any principle, so Madvig reads audietis after Gronovius.

P. 15, § 6. captam habet. A strong form of the perfect for a completed act, as fessum militem habebat, 11. 3.

§ 7. binis. Why this instead of singuis, 12. 5, we do not know, and Lipsius therefore suggested.privis as privis tunicis donati, vii. 37. 2.

§ 8. Equidem. The e seems to be an intensifying particle as in edepol (e. deus. Pollux), equirine, ecator, edius Fidius, another form of medius Fidius. Corssen, ii. 857.

§ 9. patienda...sinatis. Note the change of construction, patiamini being understood in patienda.

trucidari. Derived by Corssen from truncum cadere, as if shortened from truci-cidare like stipendium for stipi-pendium, xi. 581.

c. xiv. § 1. paulatim. Like raptim, confection, this adverb seems to be an accusative form of an abstract substantive otherwise lost. Corssen ii. 532 explains paulus, or paulus the older form, as a diminutive pauro from a root pauro, preserved in παυόσ, like misellus, tenellus, &c. for miserulus, tenerulus. So the name Paulus means 'the little man' as Crassus 'the fat man.'

argentum aurumque omne. Livy seems in this chapter to combine two accounts of the event, one of which emphasized the tragic despair of the S., while another reported ingens praeda and captivi. Polybius iii. 17 after a very short account of the siege dwells on the booty gained. Like stories of the self-destruction of the inhabitants were told in the case of other Spanish towns in later times. Cf. xxviii. 23, Juv. xv. 93. Compare also the sieges of Numantia and Zaragoza.

§ 3. momento. More frequently with temporis, or horæ, not absolutely, as here and in iii. 63. 1, xxiv. 22. 9.

crudele. Requires fuit to balance cognitum est, but Livy often omits in like cases.
nullum ante finem. The long delay and heavy losses of the siege may well have disgusted Hannibal with operations which gave so little scope for his genius for strategy. We find therefore that in Italy he rarely persevered in the siege of any of the fortresses by which he passed in his campaigns. He marched too rapidly through hostile country to carry with him the heavy materials of a siege train.

P. 16, c. xv. § 2. supellectilem. We may explain supellez as a contracted form of superlectus, though we read Labeo ait originem fuisse supelleetilis quod olim his qui in legionibus proficiscerentur locari solerent quae sub pellibus usui forent. Dig. 33. 10. 7. 1.

Octavo mense. Rome had therefore ample time to send the needful succour to Saguntum, and by her long delay she not only deserted an ally, but brought invasion upon Italy.

Octavo...quam. The post is here omitted before quam, as in iv. 47. 5, die octavo quam creatus erat, and other places.

capeptum. Note the omission of sit after this word, and of esse after captem.

quidam scripsere, as Polyb. iii. 17.

§ 4. fieri non p. The chronological difficulty existed only in the authorities which Livy followed. The account of Polybius is clear and consistent, agreeing only with L. in the eight months for the siege, and the five for the march to Italy. He makes the Roman envoys reach H. at Carthago Nova before the siege begins, and throws back the embassy of Saguntum to the year before the consulship of Scipio and Sempronius.

§ 5. capeptum. Weissenborn remarks that Livy forgets that the consuls entered office on the 15th of March, and that the army which took Sag. could not then be returning in hiberna.

§ 6. excessisse. 'The battle on the T. cannot have fallen so late.' As for the phrase Fabri compares xxx. 26. 1, insequentia excedunt in eum annum quo.

pugna ad Trebiam. So xxi. 7. 1, ad Trasumenum pugna, 54. 11, clades ad Ægates insulas.

C. Flaminius Ar. Cf. 63. 1.

creatus a T. S. The magistrate presiding at the elections must be of like or higher rank, i.e. dictator, consul, or interrex. He was said creare, that is, to declare the candidate elected, though the phrase populus creat is also used.

c. xvi. § 1. Sub idem tempus, 'about the same time.' Cf. 2. 1.
NOTES. XXI. c. xvi. §§ 1—6. 173

qui redierant. The delay of the envoys seems unreasonable according to Livy's dates, still more so if we accept those of Polybius.

§ 2. pudor non lati aux., 'shame at the neglect to send,' cf. on 1. 5.

summa r., 'the safety of the state,' cf. xxii. 12. 10, and note on 1. 1.

P. 17, § 3. nam neque hostem, thrown into the acc. of the oblique narration, giving the reason of metus. Cf. 'nam et Siciliam,' 1. 5.

§ 4. Sardos. These hostilities took place just after the 1st, and before the 2nd Punic war. Sardinia, which Rome had wrested from Carthage at the end of the 1st Punic war, rebelled shortly afterwards and made common cause with the Corsicans, whose indignation had been roused by the refusal of the Roman government to recognize the treaty of peace just concluded without its sanction, nor would they accept the person of M. Claudius Glicia, the author of the obnoxious treaty. The unhealthy climate stayed awhile the progress of the Roman arms, but both islands were finally subdued by Sp. Carvilius, b.c. 234.

The Illyrians, b.c. 230, under the queen-regent Teuta provoked hostilities by their piracies on Italian traders and murder of the R. envoys, but they were speedily defeated, as were also the Histrians who followed their example.

tumultuatum. These passive forms of neuter verbs are especially frequent in historical writers, e.g. discursum, procursum, consensum, desperatum, introitum, transcensum. The term is justified by the old phrase often used of Gallicus tumultus which Cicero thus explains, tumultum majores nostri Italicum quod erat domesticus tumultus, Gallicum quod erat Italicum finitimus, praeterea nullum tumultum nominabant. Phil. 8. 1. But the alarm at Rome as described by Polybius, ii. 24, and the care with which the muster-rolls of the Italian contingents were reviewed, show how real the danger was then thought to be, though the great victory at Telamon soon put an end to it. As to form of the sentence cf. ii. 26. 1, tumultus fuit verius quam bellum.

§ 5. trium et vig. includes the whole period between the two Punic wars, 241—218 b.c., though the conquest of Spain was not begun so early.

§ 6. bellum in Italia. Pol. iii. 15 states that the Romans did not expect to wage war in Italy but in Spain, and there is no reason to suppose that the plans of Hannibal could have been foreseen.

c. xvi. § 1. The term provincia is strictly used only in connexion with the imperium of a Roman magistrate, that is with military and judicial functions. For this reason, as for others, we must reject the derivation from providentia which is often given for it, together with that from proventus of Niebuhr, and accept the old derivation from provincere ('to be the mightiest') of Festus, though his words vinciam dicebant continentem,... provinciae quod eas pop. Rom. provicit seem wrongly to restrict the use of the term to land beyond the seas, and to point to the conquest rather than the rule. The Annalists employed it early for the limits of each consul's sphere of military action. Thus Livy n. 40. 14, Aquilio Hernici provincia evenit; for some such division of functions must have been needful from the first, though not constitutionally binding. As the senate's influence increased, it claimed more right to define the work of the executive from year to year, or nominare provincias, or in less appropriate terms decernere (c. 6. 6); but the several departments were decided by lot (sortiri) or by agreement (comparare inter se provincias,... extra sortem concedente collega).

The principle of division was extended to the praetorship when two forms of jurisdiction were distinguished, and with the conquest of Sicily a precedent was set for the new system of departments locally distinct from the executive centralized at Rome. Each of these provinces in the latter sense was ruled by a governor invested with an imperium which covered military and judicial functions.

§ 2. socium, quantum i. v. Such discretionary power was not commonly vested in the consuls, unless by special commission as in this case. The policy of Rome was to throw more and more of the military burdens upon the allies, who had been gradually brought closer to R., and severed from each other by distinct ties of relationship to the central city.

Note the contracted form of the gen. plur. which is frequently used in this word as in deum, modium, jugerum, denarium. Cf. Cic. Orat. 157, alias ita loquier ut concessum est, ut hoc vel 'pro deum' dico vel 'pro deorum', alias ut necesse est, cum 'trium virum' non virorum, cum 'sestertium numnum' non nummorum, quod in his consuetudo varia non est.

ipsis, i. e. consulis.

§ 3. scripta, enrolled. The verbal copula is omitted throughout the chapter.

celoes-κυλητες or light galleys, commonly feminine. A large fleet was ready in consequence of recent operations in Illyria.
NOTES. XXI. c. xvii. §§ 3—9. 175

deducti. The fuller form is given xli. 9. 1, naves si deducere ex navalibus vellet. Gr. καθιλκεων.

§ 4. Latum. 'The question was brought before the commons (i.e. the Com. Centuriata to which all questions of war were constitutionally referred) whether it was their will and pleasure.' populus is used of the general assembly of the whole people, as distinct from the plebs; the asyndeton is especially common in technical phrases like these terms for the resolution on which the vote was taken.

supplicatio. V. Excursus on Roman religion.

bellum is here inserted in the relative sentence, though the subject of the principal clause. Cf. Hor. Sat. i. 4. 2, alii quorum comedia prisca virorum est.

§ 5. quaterna millia. Polyb. ii. 24 gives the full strength of the legion as 5200 foot with 300 horse attached.

naves longae = μακρά πλωτα of Polyb. These were triremes or quinqueremes, or rostratae as distinct from the onerariae which carried only the supplies.

P. 18, § 6. Sempronius...ita...si. Polyb. iii. 41 speaks of the preparations of S. in Sicily, and of his confidence of taking Carthage as it were by a coup de main.

transmissurus. The future participle implies the commission given conditionally. Livy uses this participle with more shades of meaning than earlier writers, not merely to imply a future act, a determination or destiny, but hypothetical statements such as vi. 38. 10, haud sine pudore fractum priore anno in se imperium repetiturum. Cf. Nägelsbach, Stil. 314.

§ 7. et ipse. This combination is very rare in Cicero, who used et for etiam sparingly.

§ 8. cum suo iusto, 'with their proper complement of,' i.e. 300 in each, yet suo seems enough by itself, as Cic. Ver. v. 51, Si suum numerum naves haberent. Usener suggests that justo may have slipped in from the beginning of the next chapter.

§ 9. Duas legiones. This sentence explains the haud invalido presidio of § 7, W. Polyb. iii. 40 implies that only one legion was sent.

eodem versa. The reading, if genuine, is harsh; versa must be taken to agree with millia or be understood absolutely of all the forces specified.

eodem is further explained by in Pun. bellum, i.e. the province had forces sent with the same object (or in the same direction) to meet the coming war with Carthage. But as a matter of fact they were sent mainly to keep the Gauls in check. The old reading is eodem anno, which has little MS. authority. It would seem as if some word had dropped out, like missa, after eodem, and that Livy meant that the forces sent to keep watch over the Gauls were diverted to the war with Hannibal (versa habuit).

c. xviii. § 1. omnia iusta. So ix. 8. 5, nec prius ingredi hostium fines quam omnia iusta...perfecta erunt. It was characteristic of the Romans to observe scrupulously the diplomatic forms preceding war, and it was the special duty of the fetiales to watch over them that it might be a pium justumque bellum. On the use of the term justus cf. i. 4. 4 ad justi cursum annis; xxiv. 14. 4 justus miles as opposed to volunteers, justa arma of the legionaries compared with those of the skirmishers.

mittunt ad perc....ut ind. Note the change of constr. from ad to ut. On derivation of percontor, see note on 5. 2; it is sometimes spelt percunctor from a mistaken analogy. Corssen, i. 36.

§ 2. publico consilio, ‘with the sanction of the state,’ cf. 9. 6 publica fraus.

§ 4. Præceps... ‘The language of your earlier embassy was peremptory enough...but your present ultimatum &c.’

adhuc ‘so far’ (at least) Polybius had mentioned an earlier embassy to Carthage, but had said nothing of so improbable a demand as the surrender of H. before the siege of S.

P. 19, § 6. censeam. The use of the subj. in courtesy, or irony as here, is more common in Greek (opt. with àv) than Latin; cf. use of crediderim, ausim.

§ 7. una discept. ‘With you there is one question only for debate.’

§ 8. quoniam...placet,...nobis...est. In the apodosis there is an ellipse of ‘we say,’ ‘answer,’ as frequently in Livy.

C. Lutatio. The consul who drew up the terms of peace at the end of the 1st Punic war.

quum caveretur. ‘Though the interests of allies on both sides were stipulated for.’

§ 9. At enim. Only used in the speeches as a reply to a supposed objection ‘but that matters not, you will say, for,’ so sed enim, verum enim, immo enim, and sometimes without another particle as quid enim, id enim.

§ 10. icit, the old preterite of icturn, of very rare use. The MSS. read iecit, possibly as W. suggests, for fecit. The form
NOTES. XXI. c. xviii. § 10—c. xix. § 3. 177

faedus ictum or ferire is to be explained perhaps from the ancient custom of slaughtering an animal (porcus) as an impressive symbol.

auctoritate patrum. This phrase is here used in its most general sense as the sanction of the senate, as the great governing power in the state. But it has also more specific senses. (1) In early times possibly the patrician members of the senate had the right of veto on any popular vote of the comitia; their sanction or patrum auctoritas was expressed by the formula patres auctores fiunt. Their action was gradually confined to questions of procedure and ceremonial usage, and by the Publian law 338 B.C., their assent was required before the result of the voting was known, i. 17. 9, in incertum comitiorum eventum patres auctores fiunt, viii. 12. 16, ante initium suffragium. (2) The action of the senate was subject to the veto of the tribunes, but in such case of interference, the resolution come to, though it could not technically rank as a senatus consultum, was protocolled, and quoted as a patrum auctoritas, as the old sense of the term patres became fainter. Cf. Mommsen, Römische Forschungen, 233—249.

§ 13. sinu facto. This kind of symbolic act was of frequent occurrence in the ceremonial usage of Roman law and diplomacy, as in the contracts of marriage and sale. Compare its use also by the Hebrew Prophets. Sinus, a fold in the dress which might serve as a pocket.

§ 14. iterum 'in reply,' not qualifying sinu effuso, but the whole sentence.

c. xix. § 1. ante...Sagunto. We should naturally expect post Saguntum excisam to balance the ante. The feminine participle seems used per synesim of urben understood with Saguntum as Mela ii. 6. 92 S. fide inclitam and an Inscr. C. L. L. n. 3836, ob restitutam Saguntum. The feminine form Saguntus is only known in later writers Juv. xv. 114, Florus i. 22. Discipatari varies the form of the phrase for discipatio, which would correspond to percontatio.

§ 2. Nam si. There is here an ellipse 'though the Romans had arguments to urge, for &c.' Fabri.

P. 20. quid. 'To what purpose,' 'in what respect.'

§ 3. diserte additum. 'It had been expressly provided that it was to be binding only subject to the approval of the commons.' Polyb. iii. 22 inserts a full account of the various treaties between Rome and Carthage, as copied by him from old documents at Rome, the very language of which had become obsolete, and as such they were probably distasteful to Livy, who had little love for monumental evidence, and seldom consults it. For diserte Cicero uses dilucide, aperte, plane, definite, nominatim, v. Nagelsbach, p. 255.

C. L. 12

ita...si, as 17. 6 and 19. 4 'on condition that.'
censuisset, a word not commonly used of the commons. Fabri quotes xxxi. 7. 14, quae patres censuerunt vos jubete.
tot annorum... i.e. 8 or 9 years.
§ 5. receptos in fidem, i.e. where the honour of the state was pledged to them. It may be convenient to quote from Nagelsbach p. 165 the analysis of the different shades of meaning of fides. It seems to pass through an active, neuter, and passive sense, both as (1) a state of mind, and (2) a quality of things.

(1) a. 'trust' cf. ca peritis amnis vix fidelm fecerint, xxii. 47. 5.
b. 'trustworthiness.' dubia fidei videbatur, i. 54. 5.
c. 'credit.' fides nuntiantibus fuit, iii. 43. 6.
(2) a. 'guarantee. vestra causa me...loqui vel ea fides sit, xxii. 13. 3.
β. 'certainty.' plus famæ habiturum quam fidei, ii. 10. 11.
γ. 'pledged troth.' receptos in fidem.
tantum ne. An elliptical expression, in which we may supply aquum censeret from above, or 'on the understanding that.' Fabri quotes Ovid Rem. 714 nec solum faciem, mores quoque confer et artes, tantum judicio ne tuus obsit amor. Cf. 52. 4 modo ne quid moverent.

§ 6. ut adirent et... The MSS. have ut repeated, in which case the second ut would explain the object of the visit (adirent), but it is awkward in form, and Madvig's correction is probably right.

§ 7. Bargusii. Perh. to be identified with the Bergistani of xxxiv. 21. 6.
quia tædebat. This cannot refer to the Bargusii, as they lived too far north to be subject to Carthage. The clause must refer to the trans Hiberum pop. W.

§ 8. Volciani. The exact position of this people is unknown.

§ 9. Quæ verecundia. 'What a modest request this is.' postulare is in appos. with verecundia like xxii. 14. 14 stultitia est sedendo aut votis debellari credere posse. All the MSS. have Saguntini after fecerunt instead of Saguntinos which some editors prefer. In 17. 4 bellum the subject of the chief clause is inserted in the relative sentence, but it is much bolder to turn the object of the verb into a nominative attracted to the relative. Madvig regards the word as a gloss which has slipped into the text from the margin.

§ 10. documentum, ‘warning.’ Cf. v. 51. 7, tantum panarum dedimus ut terrarum orbi documento essemus, and Pref. 7, omnis exempli documenta.

P. 21, c. xx. § 1. gentis. The early commentators noticed that some tribal name had probably dropped out, as venerate implies a definite subject, and in ceteris conciliis, of § 7, implies a definite locality. Dion Cassius says Ναρβωνήλου 'P. ἔκδοσε. Gronovius suggested Ruscinone for in his, Heusinger proposed Arvernī before armati. For the usage, cf. Cæsar, Bell. Gall. v. 54, Armatum concilium indicit. Hoc more Gallorum est initium belli, quo legē communi omnes puberes armati convenire coguntur.

§ 2. Peno b. inf. Here, as elsewhere, Livy implies that the Romans were fully aware of Hannibal’s intended march, yet their own inadequate preparations show that they had not realized the danger.

§ 3. cum fremitu. ‘Noisy.’ It is put instead of another adjective after tantus.

§ 4. stolida. ‘Absurd,’ another form of stultus, from which it was commonly distinguished in sense as ‘rude,’ ‘boorish,’ e.g. stolidum genus Αἰκαδαρον | Bellipotentes sunt magis quam sapientipotentes, and also sues stolidi in Ennius. Corssen derives from star, cf. στερεός, sterilis, stare, still, ii. 156.

censere. This is an awkward pleonasm if it is explanatory of postulatio ‘request which proposed that’ &c., like the Greek διότω. It might be taken, though less probably, with ipsos ‘that the Gauls should vote’ &c.

avertere is most common, though the reading of the MSS. is advertere, which W. adopts.

§ 6. agro pelli. Refers to the R. colonies in Cisalpine Gaul which roused such resentment at Cremona and Pla-centia.

stipendium. Here the ordinary taxes or tribute, not as cetera ind. ‘The other indignities’ practised by a dominant race.

1. 5.

§ 7. Massiliam. Rome had long since formed alliance with this colony of the Phocæans, whose rising power had of old excited the jealousy of her neighbours on the mainland, and of her Phoenician rivals in the trade of those waters. Her alliance with Rome brought advantage to both sides, and was long honourably maintained.

§ 8. Inquisita cum cura ac fide is the subject and cognita the predicate of the sentence; the relative is omitted with the former, as often by Livy.

preoccupatos iam ante. This pleonasm is in Livy’s style.
Cf. xlvi. 47. 2, ut omnia opportuna loca preoccupari ante ab eo potuerint, xxxvi. 17. 12, satis undique provisum, antequaque precautum est. So xx. 32. 7, prius precarious, x. 41. 5, ex ante preparato.

cuius... est must be taken parenthetically as a remark of the writer. Otherwise it should be in the subj., as part of an orat. oblq.

§ 9. Haud ita. Fabri observes that Livy prefers this to the non ita, used exclusively by Cicero.

P. 22. transmisisse. The verb is often used absolutely of the crossing of the sea, and here of a river. Cf. 17. 6, 51. 4.

c. xx. § 1. seque non ducem. This sentence is made to follow auditis, as the news from Carthage included the demand for his surrender, hence causam belli. Cf. i. 13. 1, nos causa belli.

§ 3. socii, the term applied in Roman usage to the Italian races, is here employed of the conquered dependents of Carthage.

pacatis. ‘Reduced to submission,’ in the sense in which pax Romana was spoken of.

§ 8. Ad edictum, i.e. diem or locum. Cf. diem edicere ad conveniendum.

Herculi. Gades was an early colony of the Phœnicians, which had fallen into the hands of Carthage after the capture of Tyre. Here was a famous shrine of the Hercules, or Melcarth, whose fabled wanderings reflected the enterprising spirit of the Phoenician traders. Like the Hague = ’sGravenhage, the name meant ‘a fence.’ Cf. Avien. O. M. 267, Punicorum lingua consetpum locum Gaddir vocabat.

§ 10. Partiens curas. Cf. xxii. 7. 10, tot in curas dispersiti eorum animi erant.

P. 23, § 11. Ab Sicilia. ‘From the side of Sicily.’ See the instructions of Sempronius, 17. 6. On the form of the mutui pigneri bus. This has been ever the military policy of empires doubtful of the loyalty of their various nationalities. Pignus connected with pangere, pacit, pacisei, pax.

stipendia facere for mereri. Stipendia passed from the sense of 'pay' to that of 'service,' somewhat as 'campaign' was transferred from the 'open field' to 'service in the field.'

§ 12. caetratos. Nearly equivalent to the πελασται of Greek writers. The cautra was a leathern buckler used by the Spaniards. Verg. Æn. xii. 732, levas castra tegit.

funditores. The Roman funda was probably borrowed from Greece with the name itself (ἀσφενδώνη), thus against these Balircar slingers they used Sicilian xxviii. 29. 4. They seem to have been most useful in sieges, and the glandes which they hurled are now found on the scenes of memorable sieges. They are leaden globes pointed, and sometimes inscribed with contemptuous words. C. I. L. i. p. 188.

Ballares. Polyb. iii. 33 says the islands and the inhabitants received their name from their skill as slingers. Diod. v. 17, Balliariæis apò τοῦ βάλλεν ταῖς σφενδόναις λίθοις μεγάλους. But the name is more likely to be Phœnician than Greek.

§ 13. conquistitoribus. 'Recruiting officers.' Cf. 11. 13, xxv. 22. 4, conquisitio volonum.

civitates. These were very numerous near Carthage, 300 being mentioned in Zeugitana alone. But Polybius, while agreeing with the numerical data in the text, refers these civitates to τῶν Μεσαγγικῶν καλομένων. He gives his authority for these muster-rolls in a bronze tablet which he had seen in the temple at Lacinium, near Croton, set up there by order of H. himself, on a promontory which is still called Capo delle Colonne, from the remains of the great temple. Livy's account is probably taken from an annalist, not from a monument, which he would certainly not have gone far to inspect.

eosdem, taken with millia by constr. ad synesin, as xxvii. 16. 4, millia triginta servilium capitum dicuntur capit.

c. xxii. § 1. atque id eo. Döring's correction for atque ideo from the adque hau d ideo of all MSS. Cf. Cas. B. G. v. 1. 2, atque id eo magis.

§ 2. viro impigro. Diodorus speaks of Hasdrubal as, without dispute, the best general of his time, after Hannibal.
Liguribus. They had been several centuries before enlisted in the armies of Carthage, Herod. i. 165, and joined H. in force on his arrival in Cisalpine Gaul. The Roman writers speak of them as hardy peasants assueti malo, cf. Vergil Æn. xi. 700, and they held out stoutly long after the rest of Italy had been subdued.

quingentis, like the quinquaginta in the next section, is supplied from the parallel account of Polybius.

§ 3. Libyphænices. The Phoenician settlers who had many centuries before settled in the interior of Africa, were supposed to have come through Sidon, and to be agricultural tribes dispossessed perhaps by Joshua from Palestine. As such they betook themselves not to trade but husbandry in their new homes, and by their mixture with the natives gave rise to a new race, whose name implies this fusion, like the Celtiberi, or the mixed race in the South of Spain, where the Carthaginians continued the system of colonies near the coast. Diod. xx. 55.

ad mille octingenti. Ad has come to be used adverbially =feres, without affecting the case of the numeral, as iv. 59. 9, quorum ad duo millia et quingenti vivi capiuntur, or viii. 18. 6, ad viginti matronis accitis.

Ilergetum ex Hisp. This seemed suspicious to Schweighæuser, who noted (ap. Polyb. iii. 33) that they are the only force here ascribed to Spain, which must have furnished a larger contingent, and that there is no such addition as ex Hispania in the corresponding passage of Polyb., where the MSS. have Λεργητῶν. He believed therefore that in both texts the name of some unknown African tribe must have been changed by mistake for that of a known Spanish one.

§ 4. qua parte belli. A phrase used by Livy (cf. 17. 8) for qua parte copiarum of 41. 4 and 53. 1. Contrast the petty naval forces here specified with the immense fleets which fought in the 1st war. There is an ellipse of tantum before triginta, somewhat as in ita producto, 5. 9.

aptæ remigio. Cf. caelum stellis aptum, Verg. Æn. iv. 482.

P. 24, § 5. Onusam. A very uncertain reading taken from xxii. 20. 4. The MSS. have omissa. Gronovius proposed to read Etorissa, which Ptolemy ii. 6 mentions as an inland city of the Edetani.

maritima ora. The MSS. commonly have the acc. Heerwagen compares the use of the abl. in xxii. 18. 6, Fabius... agmen...jugis ducebat.
§ 6. duce in It. Polyb. iii. 47 protests at the folly of the writers who introduce such marvellous incidents into the story of the war. Some spoke of a God, or Hero, actually guiding H. through the mountains. The account of the vision in the text is probably derived from Caeshus Antipater. Cf. the like account in Cic. de divin. i. 24. 49. For ominous dreams, cf. Tac. Ann. i. 55, ii. 14.

proinde seq. Cf. 30. 11. Proinde is almost always used by Livy, either with the imperative in oratio dir., or the corresponding subj. in orat. obl. Yet in iii. 57. 4 it is used with an infinitive, proinde...se judicem illi ferre.

§ 7. cura ingenii h. 'From the curiosity natural to man.' Fabri compares XLII. 39. 1, inerat cura insita mortalibus videndi congregientes regem et legatos.

§ 8. serpentina. The serpent plays a great part in the marvellous machinery of ancient poetry, as well as in the old religions of the world.

cum fragore. Equivalent to an adjective, 'thunder-storm.'

§ 9. pergeret porro ire. Cf. i. 37. 6, pergit porro (exercitum) in agrum Sabinum inducere.

c. xxi. § 1. præmissis. These precautions were taken, according to Polybius, before Hannibal's plans were formed, and he was probably determined in his route by the envoys from Gaul.

transitus. Used by Livy both for the passes or roads (cf. xxxviii. 2. 10, transitus insedere) and for the passage over them, xxxvii. 7. 13, via ubi transitus difficiles. Fabri.

nonaginta. Polyb. agrees with this estimate, and makes him leave 11,000 with Hanno, and dismiss as many more. His losses on the way further reduced his numbers to 59,000 when he crossed the Rhone, and to 20,000 foot and 6,000 horse after the passage over the Alps.

§ 2. Ilergetes. Livy had spoken of them in the last chapter, as if already subject to Carthage. Pliny mentions them as on the coast about Subur, and the river Rubricatus, the present Llobregat. Their town (Atanagrum, 61. 6) was probably destroyed and disappeared.

Ausetani. Whose town Ausa mentioned by Ptolemy sunk to a mere vicus, and so became Vich de Osona in Upper Catalonia.
NOTES.

184

XXI.

c.

xxm.

§

2— c.

xxiv. §

3.

Lacetania. Tbe MSS. have Aquitania, but as tbis lay nortb of tbe Pyrenees, Sigonius corrected it to Lacetania, tbe Beat of a devia et silvestris gens, mentioned in xxvm. 24. 4, and in 3 places of xxxiv. 20, as also in Pliny m. 22 and Strabo speaking seemingly of tbe same Sallust Hist. ii. 5.
tribe as yvwpifiibTaTov, m. 4. 10, on tbe slope of tbe Pyrenees towards Osca and Ilerda, calls tbem 'laKK-qTavol, as also does Ptolcmy, n. 6. 72. Mommsen suggests tbat tbe name began witb a consonant wbicb was between I and L, sometbing bke tbe Spanisb ll=lj, and tbat tbe Eomans took one part and tbe Greeks anotber of tbe composite sound. We sbould probably distinguisb from tbis tribe tbe one referred to in 60. 3.
Cf.

Hubner in Hermes

Tbe

orse.

i.

337.

strip of coast

tbrougb wbicb tbe roads must run.

As if tbe Spaniards were likely inexsuperabili Alp.
Tbrougbof tbe Alps, or of HannibaPs plans.
out Livy assumes tbat all was patent beforeband.
§ 4.

to know mucb

P. 25 § 5.
siunmou tbem
detain tbem.'

revocare aut...
to return, as be
On tbis use of aut

It would be bazardous to migbt bave to use force to
'

cf.

xxn. 39.

8.

In sending so many bome H. sbowed bis remisit.
§ 6.
reliance on moral forces as distinct from numbers, like Gideon
at tbe well of Harod.
Altered by Madvig and otbers from tbe et ipse of Fabri bowever defends tbe MSS. reading by a niunber of passages from Livy in wbicb et ipse is used to mark a coutrast uot expressed but implied, as bere it migbt refer to tbe Carpetaui, wbose impatience H. bad not noticed.
et ipsos.

all

MSS.

Tbe modern Elne, so called from Iliberri.
c. xxiv. § 1.
Helena, tbe motber of Constantine. It is bere indeclinable, tbougb tbe form Hiberrim is used below, as if from Ibberris, and otber Spanisb towns bave like ending, as Iliturgis, Cissis, Bacasis.
Strabo speaks of river and town botb 'IXt^ippis.
Tbere was also a towu of tbe same name in tbe South of Spain, near tbe site of Granada, wbence probably tbe Sierra d' Elvira.

§ 2.

Euscinonem.

La

tour de Eoussillon.

misit, colloqui.
Tbe oratio obl. often follows directly on mittere oratores, literas, &c. Cf. vm. 19. 10, literis Bomam missis, in ojic.io Fundanos esse.
Fabri.
§ 3.


NOTES. XXI. c. xxiv. § 3—c. xxv. § 2. 185

[et]. 'And therefore he proposed,' W. Madvig regards it as out of place, as the orat. dir. would run colloqui vobiscum volo; vel vos propius accedite, vel...

§ 4. hospitem...non hostem. Livy much affects the paronomasia, i. 58. 10, hostis pro hospite, vi. 26. 1, hospitaliter magis quam hostiliter.

§ 5. hæc. For omission of verb cf. 42. 1, hæc apud Romanos consul.

gravanter. Livy more often uses gravate, also gravatim.

cum bona pace. 'Quite unmolested.' In 32. 6 the phrase is coupled with a gen. Gallorum.

c. xxv. § 1. In Italian. These words if taken with transmiserunt may seem too remote an object for the safe-conduct of the Gallic chieftains. They should probably be taken with perlatum erat, and are further defined by the repetition of Romam.

§ 2. quum...defecerunt. Quum is used with the historical perfect to imply simultaneous occurrence. Livy even employs the historical infinitive, though rarely, in this sense with quum.

perinde ac st. Polyb. iii. 34 explains that the Cisalpine Gauls had already sent to Hannibal, and encouraged him to cross the Alps by promises to guide him thither, and rise against Rome. The late war had left rankling memories behind it.

The Boii are represented by Livy v. 35 as making their way across the Alps with the Lingones, and finding the North already occupied with Gallic settlers. They crossed the Po therefore, and spread south of the Æmilian way under the Apennines, towards the Hadriatic. So restless were they to the last that the Romans found it needful to remove them to the borders of Pannonia, where they perished utterly in wars with the neighbouring Dacæ. Strabo v. 1. 6.

The Insubres were the most numerous and powerful tribe of the Cisalpine Gauls, Polyb. ii. 17. They were formed of a number of distinct tribes, described by Livy v. 34 as crossing the Alps in early times, and founding Mediolanum (Milan), after the name of a city of the Ædui in Gaul.

P. 26. colonias. These illustrate the Roman system of colonization which did so much to consolidate their empire, and which marked from time to time each successive wave of conquest. They were of two classes, the Roman strictly so called, consisting entirely of citizens, and planted especially upon the coast, or on the great roads, to bar the way of an invader; and the Latin, in which the peoples of Latium, and of other allied races, were invited to take part, which were settled on ground lately won, and served as garrisons on a disputed frontier. These were therefore doubly useful, as holding in check dangerous enemies, and as pledges for the fidelity of old allies, who could look only to Rome for help in their distant homes.

§ 3. triumviri. Commissioners were commonly appointed to direct the work of the agrimensores, which was carried out with serupulous nicety on traditional principles, and to assign the allotments, the size of which was determined by the senate or commons. Polyb. iii. 40 says that there were 6000 colonists in each, and that they were directed to be on the spot within 30 days. Note the anomaly of the form triumviri, duumviri, which grew probably out of the use of the singular triumvir, as one of a board of three.

Mutina was itself a Roman colony, Polyb. iii. 40, though Livy states that it was colonized with Parma in 184 B.C. (L. xxxix. 55). That the Romans chose well the sites of their colonies is illustrated by the importance of the towns of Modena, Piacenza and Cremona.

§ 5. Id quoque dubium. As the walls were already built, there seems reason to doubt whether the commission was not sent for some other purpose than to assign the allotments.

§ 6. ad artes rudis. Cf. xxii. 2. 4, mollis ad talia gens, i. 9. 6, ad multis ingenium efficaces peces, Cic. Fam. 10. 17. 2, ad omnia pericula princeps, and other cases where the gerundive, such as subeunda in the last example, is constantly omitted. Cf. Nügelsbach, p. 329.

pigerrima... The Latin writers usually describe the Gauls as formidable in the first onset, but as incapable of sustained effort. Cf. x. 27. 3, G. primo impetu feroces esse.. Gallo-rum corpora intolerantissima laboris atque aestus fluere.

§ 7. obsides. These hostages had been given at the close of the late war with the Gauls.

§ 8. esset. The singular verb used for the compound subject Mutina præsidiumque ad Mutinam, ad=to the neighbourhood of, cf. above § 3 Mutinam confugerint, i.e. inside of.

L. Manlius. Cf. 17. 7.

effusum. 'In loose order,' opposed to quadratum of 5. 16. Cf. 46. 9, effuse cedendo.
NOTES. XXI. c. xxv. § 9—c. xxvi. § 5. 187

§ 9. inexplorato. This absolute use of neut. participle is common in Livy, as edicto x. 36. 7, sublato xxii. 20. 6, explora to xxiii. 42. 9, comperto, cognito, audito, palam facto, &c.

præcipitat. Some read the pres. pass. instead of the neut. which is most usual as Cic. p. P. Sulla, præcipitante repub lica, and Verg. Æn. ii. 8, nox humida calo præcipitat. The MSS. have præcipitatus, omitting the est.

demer sit. For the use of this verb to express the passage from darkness to light, or difficulty to safety, Heerwagen quotes ix. 10. 1, emersisse civitatem ex obnoxia pace, xxv. 38. 10, ex omni sævitia fortuna emersuram.

P. 27, § 13. Gallis territandi et p. R. Note the chiasmus which is so common in Livy.

Tannetum. Somewhat loosely described as propinquum Pado. It was a few miles from Parma, on a little tributary of the Po.

contendere. Probably the perfect, though its form in ere made it liable to confusion with the hist. inf.

§ 14. Brixia (Brescia) was the capital of the Ceno mani (Livy xxxii. 30), which was the only Gallic tribe which sided with Rome in this war. Cf. 55. 4.

c. xxvi. § 1. tumultus. Cf. tumultuatum, 16. 4.

§ 2. una leg. The scanty forces scarcely bear out Livy’s account of the alarm at Rome, and the delay of Scipio in marching to meet Hannibal shows how little the Romans realized their danger, and with what neglect they moved in the early stages of the war.

§ 3. Salyum. These occupied the coast between Antipolis and Massilia, and were a Ligurian tribe, Strabo iv. 1.

pervenit. More definitely ἧκε πεμπτάιος, on 5th day, Polybius iii. 41.

§ 4. ad proximum. το Μασσαλιωτικόν, Polyb. iii. 41.

pluribus. Strabo iv. 1. 8 counts five months as given by Timæus, two by Polybius, seven by others.

§ 5. neendum satis, i.e. as his soldiers had hardly yet recovered from the sea-sickness caused by the tossing on the sea. There seems to have been much neglect on Scipio’s part, for his first care should have been to prevent the passage of the Rhone, and bar the road to Italy, or by hanging on his rear to cripple H. before he arrived upon the scene of his intended operations.

auxiliaribus G. These served as mercenaries with the Massilians. Polyb.

§ 6. Volcarum. Strabo (iv. 1. 12) distinguishes the Volcae Tectosages, whose centre was Tolosa (Toulouse), from the V. Areeomici, round Nemausus (Nismes). The route of H. is here left indefinite, but probably he made for Nemausus, from Ruscino. Polyb. iii. 42 marks the point of the crossing the Rhone as four days' march from the mouth, where the channel was not broken by islands. This was probably Roquemaure.

P. 28, § 7. eorum ipsorum. The gen. governed by quos, i.e. such even of the same tribe, as had not been able to tear themselves from home. Cf. iv. 33. 7, Fidenatium qui supersunt ad urbeam Fidenas tendunt.

sedes sue. Used like the oìkos φιλιος of the G. This is more characteristic than to assume an inversion of constr. for qui sedes suas. For the use of tenere Heerwagen compares v. 54. 1, adeo nihil tenet solum patrice.

§ 8. lintriumque. More definitely put in Polybius, who refers to the carrying trade from the ports on the lower Rhone, in which these tribes took an active part. Corssen connects linter with πλυστήρ, like lans with πλάξ, latus with πλάτυς, later with πλίνθος.

§ 9. nihil dummodo. For this equivalent for nihil nisi ut Fabri compares i. 34. 6, obita ingenitæ erga patriam caritatis, dummodo virum honoratum videret.

c. xxvii. § 1. Iamque. Polyb. says 'in two days.'

viri. Foot-soldiers. Usually opposed to equi, not equites, but Silius It. ix. 569 has magna voce trahens equitemque virosque.

vigilia prima. The first three hours of the night, which was divided into four such watches.

§ 4. Ad id. 'The Gallic guides provided for the purpose informed him that about five and twenty miles higher up, the river, as it flowed round a little island, offered a crossing-place which was broader where the stream parted, and for that reason shallower.'

ostendere is used somewhat boldly with amnem as subject, but the reasons specified serve to justify the tense.

§ 5. Hispani. This detail is peculiar to Livy, who in other respects agrees closely with Polybius iii. 42.

cætris incubantes. 'On their bucklers.' Here as often the Latin participle takes the place of the English preposition, as manu tenens perducit, phalangis subjectis admovent, which Nägelsbach compares with it, p. 329.

§ 6. alius, for reliquus. Cf. i. 12. 10, alia Romana acies audacia regis accensa fundit Sabinos.

P. 29, § 7. tempori deesset. So occasioni, fortunæ, libertati, legi deesse, in the sense of 'neglect,' or 'fail in duty.'

§ 8. Iam. In Polyb. more definitely 'on the 5th night.'

naves. Madvig's suggestion for the nantes of all MSS. which was hard to translate; they answer to the λείμμου, while lintres corresponds to the μονόευλα of Polyb. whose description is here clear and definite; the fere implies that all the naves were not appropriated to their use.

Navium agmen. 'A line of vessels crossed higher up the stream to break the force of the current, and secured still water for the punts which crossed below.'

transmittens is used intrans. as 20. 9.

§ 9. pars magna nantes. The close connexion of singular and plural for the same subject is an awkward constr. ad synesim, though not unfrequent in Livy. Cf. rv. 33. 7, Veiintium maxima pars Tiberim effusi petunt.

c. xxvii. § 2. nautarum militarque. The copula here is often omitted in the MSS., and some editors think that the hurry of the scene is reflected in the phrase.

et qui...et qui. Referring to the two sets naut. mil.
§ 3. adverso...repeats the ex adverso of § 2, which is here balanced by ab tergo.

§ 4. utroque vim facere. 'To offer battle on both sides.'

§ 5. variata. Madvig's correction of variata of MSS., as precipitatus for precipitatus, 25. 9. Cf. fama variata, xxvii. 27. 13. 'Some say that the elephants were crowded together on the bank, and that the most spirited of them being provoked by its driver, followed him as he retreated into the water (and at last took to swimming) and drew the whole herd after it, and that as each grew frightened at the depth and lost its foothold, the force of the current swept it to the opposite bank.' The construction and the thought seem equally confused, there is no MSS. authority for the inde inserted before nantem by W., yet without it nantem is very harsh, and is therefore considered as a gloss by Madvig and Ruperti, the abl. also seems out of place for the clause which states the final result. Why the current should carry them across and not down the stream is unexplained.

§ 6. ad fidem pronius, 'more credible.'

§ 7. secunda aqua, 'down the stream.'

§ 8. The reading of the MSS. ut cum before 'elephanti' is hopeless: Madvig regards it as a corruption which grew out of est tum. Others less probably read et for ut and expunge ubi; Usener suggests tuto jam. 'The elephants were driven, females in front, along the stationary raft as if it were a highway, and when they crossed into the smaller raft which was moored to it, the hawser with which this was temporarily fastened were suddenly untied, and it was towed to the opposite bank by a number of light craft.' A like expedient is said to have been tried at Messana in the 1st Punic war.

§ 9. actuariis so called from their speed—thus the 'Actuary' was the quick writer.

§ 10. donec...agerentur. This use of the subjunctive for a simple fact occurs chiefly in later writers as Tac. Hist. rv. 35, pugnatum...donec praelium nox dirimeret. But it may possibly be here explained as giving the reason of the nihil trepidabant.

ceteris, 'all its surroundings.' Polyb. says that there were several such rafts, but Livy probably does not imply this.
in altum, often used for the sea, but seldom of a river.

§ 12. detectis rect. Polyb. iii. 46 says that the Indian drivers of these were drowned. He gives a lively picture of them making their way across, each with its proboscis raised aloft above the surface of the water: the rest of his narrative agrees with that of Livy, but he is clearer in the details, and he reserves the passage of the elephants till H. continues his march.

c. xxix. § 1. traliciuntur ... miserat. The sequence of tenses is harsh. Fabri compares ix. 32. 1, dum hæc geruntur in Samnio, jam omnes Etruriae popoli ad arma ierant.

P. 31, § 2. atrocius quam pro numero. A form often used by Livy, cf. 59. 9, major quam pro numero jactura, xxxvi. 10. 12, latius quam pro copiis, where pro has the meaning of 'in proportion to.'

§ 3. amplius ducenti. The omission of quam between amplius, minus, plus and the numeral in the nominative is a common feature of Livy's style.

§ 4. anc. cert. vict. is a bold construction formed on the analogy of magni certaminis res erat which Livy uses.

§ 5. suus is not unfrequently used with reference to a casus obliquus, cf. 43. 17, cui...sua decora, 44. 8, quos sua terra suus ager acceperat.

nec Scipioni. 'S could not' decide on any plan, save that of, &c. 'and H. was,' &c. Cf. 30. 1, Hannibal, postquam ipsi sententia stetit. Polyb. makes him start at once in pursuit of H. after his cavalry return from reconnoitring the camp of H.

§ 6. cum eo qui...exercitus. Note the attraction of subject to the relative clause as Hor. Sat. i. 4. 2, alii quorum Comœdia prisca virorum.

avertit ... In Polyb. there is a graphic picture of the appearance of the Gauls at the camp of H., but their arguments seem addressed rather to the soldiers than their general, whose mind was long made up to push on with all speed for Italy, especially as the season was advanced. He sends his cavalry down the river to hold the Romans in check while his elephants crossed, and the infantry pushed on. Great as might be the risk of the passage through the Alps, and Hannibal could scarcely have foreseen it all, yet Cisalpine Gaul was the only side from which Italy was vulnerable, now that Rome was mistress of the sea. There was a population akin in race to the Spanish Celts in his own army, and bitterly opposed to Rome who was fastening on them the grip of her frontier garrisons.

reguli. MagaLi. Polyb. iii. 44 speaks of τὸς βασιλιάκους τῶν περὶ Μάγιλον; a and i are often interchanged in foreign names like Masinissa, Mithridates, Massilia.

integro bello aggr. ‘To open the war with the attack on I.’ The words n. a. libatis, &c., further explain integro b. with which cf. res integra, ii. 5. 1, spes integra, iv. 24. 2, and fontibus integris, Hor. Od. i. 26. 6.

§ 7. iter Alpesque. Hendiadys for ‘march across the Alps,’ to which rem refers. Cf. i. 11. 1, per occasionem ac solitudinem.

utique is frequently used by Livy. The -que gives indefiniteness to the meaning of uti, and the compound=‘anyhow,’ ‘at all events,’ and hence ‘especially,’ ‘certainly,’ cf. 38. 8, 48. 5, 54. 9.

c. xxx. § 1. ipsi sent. stetit corresponds to Scip. stare sent. of 29. 5.

versat an. Cf. i. 58. 3, versare in omnes partes muliebrem an.

§ 2. Mirari. The infinitives in this speech are differently introduced, most of them only as oratio obl., some indignantis as subsistere § 6, and cepisse § 11, some interrog. as § 9 and § 10.

§ 3. quicumque. There had been no such demand except in the case of Hannibal, but it is a rhetorical exaggeration.

velut ob noxam, ‘as criminals.’

P. 32, § 5. tanto maiorem. According to Polybius they had marched from the strait 8800 stadia, and had 2600 before them; but this as much of the speech only applies to the Africans in the army. H., or rather Livy, identifies all the nationalities with Carthaginians in the feeling which he assumes in the army. Notice in our author the absence of such definite details as to distance and time as occur frequently in Polybius.

emensam. One of the deponent partic. in pass. sense which Livy uses.

Italīae. The partitive gen. ‘belonged to Italy.’ Cf. xxii. 20. 11, dicionis imperiique R. facti sint.

§ 6. quid credentes. The constr. of the inter. part. here
NOTES. XXI. c. xxx. §6—c. xxxi. §4. 193 is more Greek than Latin, = 'and what else could they suppose the Alps to be' &c. Fabri compares xxiv. 26. 7, conjugem ac liberos de vita dimicaret quid obstantes libertati.

§ 7. FINGERENT. The equivalent in orat. obl. for the imper. in or. dir.

fauces. A suggestion of Heerwagen for the paucis of the MSS.

§ 8. Ne mai. q. eorum. Livy v. 34 gives at some length an account of the passage of the Gallic tribes across the Alps in the reign of Tarquiniius Priscus, and of the various settlements about the Po.

§ 9. quid...esse. The constr. implies that a negative idea, nihil...esse, is wrapped up in the interr. form.

§ 10. caput o. t. is an anachronism of the writer or prolepsis rhetorically, and is somewhat out of place in the mouth of Hannibal.

cederent...sperent. The difference in tense probably points to the confidence of Hannibal that the latter alternative would be realized.

c. xxxi. § 1. adversa ripa. Formed on the analogy of adverso flumine 'up the stream.' 27. 3.

P. 33, § 2. non quia rectior. The shortest round by the coast must have brought H. at once into conflict with the Romans. There can be little doubt that his route had been planned before with the envoys from Gaul, and that the longer road was partly chosen to bring him into friendly country as he issued from the mountain pass.

§ 3. minus obviam. The tanto to answer to the quantum is here as often omitted.

§ 4. Quartis castris. After 4 days' march, at the 4th time of encamping.

Insulam. This was of course the Insula Allobrogum, but various attempts have been made to fix it elsewhere, and all the rivers near have been pressed into the service by the advocates of the various routes.

Ibi Isara. Most MSS. read Arar, and as Fabri and others note, Silius Italicus seems to have had this reading before him iii. 452. Yet H. could not have reached it in 4 days' march. Two MSS. have bisarar and ibisarar, which suggests the reading of the text. It is curious that the corresponding passage in Polyb. iii. 49 has Σκάρας as the reading of most MSS., for which Casaubon proposed "Αραρ and Schweighaeuser Ισάρας. The description of the insula in the latter is that of an eyewitness who was struck by its fertility and population, and compared it with the Delta of the Nile.

diversis ex Alp. The Rhone from the Saint Gothard, the Isère from Mont Iseran.

§ 5. Incolunt prope. In itself a strange expression as applied to the ins. Allob., but Livy probably is thinking of the point on the Rhone at which H. had arrived, and the prope refers to the neighbouring country. Efforts have been made however to prove that the Allobroges were then south of the Isère, and not until later in the insula. The term 'prope' does not go far to prove this, and it has little evidence to rest on. Incolunt is used absolutely as i. 1. 3, qui inter mare Alpesque incolebant.

gens iam inde. The Allobroges were already a powerful tribe, though their relations with Rome began at a much later date. The account of Pol. iii. 49 seems to distinguish between them and the subjects of Brancus, but perhaps does not really do so.

§ 6. ambigebant. More commonly used with de, as 10. 9, xl. 15. 3.

poterat. The subject to this is the compound notion, frater et catus juniorum. Cf. 25. 8, Mutina præsidiumque in periculo esset.

§ 7. Huius sed. 'As this civil feud was very opportunely referred to H. for arbitration.'

peropportuna. Used adverbially. Rem rejicere is a phrase often used by Livy in like cases, like the causam ad senatum remittere of Tac. Ann. iii. 10.

§ 8. adiutus. Not only so, but according to Polybius, escorted by the chieftain to the foot of the pass.

§ 9. From this point onwards it is hopeless to reconcile the accounts of the march in Polybius and Livy, who while agreeing in much of the description, especially in the details which admit of rhetorical treatment, yet widely diverge in local data. The former traces the route almost certainly over the little St Bernard, the latter probably over Mont Genèvre. Ammianus Marcellinus xv. 10 closely follows Livy, as also does Silius Italicus in the lines iii. 466:

Jam Tricastinis intendit finibus agmen,
Jam faciles campos, jam rura Vocontia carpit;
Turbidus hic truncis saxisque Druentia laeatum
Ductoris vastavit iter.

Cf. The Appendix 'on the Route of Hannibal.'

recta regione. 'In direct course.' Cf. Lu. c. 11. 2. 49, and Cic. Verr. v. 176, si quis tantulum de recta regione deflexerit.

ad lâvam. These words have given much trouble to the interpreters. They have been explained as 'the left hand of Livy sitting in his study,' or 'the left of an army in retreat, which would be equivalent to the ordinary right,' or 'the left bank of the Isère,' or they have been regarded as a mistake for the right hand. They seem to imply Livy's belief that after the proceedings in the island, H. marched down the stream a little way, hearing possibly of Scipio's withdrawal, and then turned off to what was later Augusta Tricastinorum (Aoste).

Vocontiorum. They are localized by Strabo, iv. 6. 4, in the mountain woodland between the Allobroges and Salyes. The Tricorii are placed by Strabo to the east of the Vocontii, or between the Drac and the Durance.

haud usquam impedita. A most unfitting description for the tangled country between the Isère and the Durance.

Druentia. Attempts have been made to identify this with the Arve, the Dranse, or the Drac. It is of course the Druentius of Strabo who calls it ἐνταῦθα χαραδρώδης, the modern Durance. It is true that it would have been out of the natural course from the Insula, nor would H. in that case have come across the Allobroges. Also Livy's description may suit the lower, but not the upper stream along which the army must have travelled, if at all. He probably took it from some topographer's account, and Lavallée calls it 'la rivière la plus desordonnée de la France,' Geogr. Phys. 186.

§ 11. vada...gurgites. These acc. may depend on praebet, but more probably on volvens, which by zeugma is used in a somewhat different sense with them and with saxa.

glareosa is an awkward epithet for saxa, unless we take it to mean that the bed was full of rocks and gravel mixed.
NOTES. XXI. c. xxxii. §§ 1—7.

P. 34, c. xxxii. § 1. triduo. The crossing-place was four days' march from the mouth, we are not told how far from Scipio's camp.

movit, as often, absolutely for se movit, or castra.

quadr. agmine. Cf. 5. 16, where the words are transposed.

§ 2. videt. Here, as 33. 3, two distinct uses of the verb are combined, physical and mental vision.

tutius ita. Because his own troops would be fresh, and those of H. exhausted or thinned by the long march. Ita carries a good deal of meaning by implication.

§ 3. nuda auxiliis. This policy was aimed at the real base of H's operations, and the source to which he looked for reinforcements. Arnold says, "Had Scipio, at this critical juncture, not sent his army to Spain..., his son would in all probability never have won the battle of Zama." Yet had Scipio been ready with a larger army to attack the wearied troops of H. as they issued from the mountain-pass—and there was nothing to prevent him,—it might have fared ill with the invaders.

§ 4. ad pell. Hasd. Scipio can hardly have known as yet the arrangement made by Hannibal before he left Spain.

§ 5. Genua. Nothing is known of Genua before this time. It was destroyed by Mago, Livy xxviii. 46. 8, and rebuilt as a municipium by Rome, xxx. 1. 10.

eoo...exercitus. Cf. on 29. 6.

§ 6. ab Druentia. His course would be rather 'along' than 'from' the river, and would certainly not have been 'campestri it.', for though the route of Polyb. admits for a time of this description, it is out of place in Livy's.

pace incoletium. For the gen. cf. the expression Lucr. v. 1229, Divem pacem votis adit.

§ 7. The following description is somewhat absurd as applied to the lower Alpine valleys, and is a bit of fine writing in which Livy gives full scope to his rhetorical taste, working upon the description of some traveller, who exaggerated the horrors of journey. Note the absence of any sense of the grandeur of mountain scenery, which was possibly, as Macaulay suggests, overpowered by the sense of danger. In general the sense of the picturesque is of modern growth. Polybius, who had himself travelled over the ground, is much more guarded in his language, and guilty of no such exaggerations as Livy.
NOTES. XXI. c. xxxii. § 7—c. xxxiii. § 2. 197

prius is a pleonasm with praecpta, like praoccupatos ante in 20. 8.

torrida frigore. Cf. 40. 9, prausti artus...torrida gelu, xl. 45. 1, arbores deusserat hiems.

§ 8. Erigentibus. "As the vanguard was climbing the lower heights." This incident, like most others on the march, occurs also in Polybius, though the localities are quite distinct.

P. 35. stragem dedissent. Cf. use of dare in such phrases as Verg. Æn. xii. 575, dant cuneum, vi. 76, finem dedit ore loquendi, and in Lucr. dare pausam, dare motus. "One is tempted to look at it as a half-conscious reminiscence of the do which survives in credo, abdo, condo, &c., and has the same origin as τίθημι and S. dadhāmi." Munro, Lucr. iv. 41.

§ 9. inter confragosa omn. is a bold construction of which Livy is fond. Cf. ix. 13. 5, per omnia pacata, xxiii. 2. 1, inter corrupta omnia, xxii. 6. 11, super cetera extrema.

§ 10. Tum per eosdem. "But when the friendly Gauls had managed to engage the mountaineers in friendly talk, as there was but little difference in their patois, or in manners, they informed him," &c. Strictly we must understand a montanis with abhorrentes.

dilabi. Often used of soldiers deserting. Cf. xxii. 2. 1, Gallos si tædio laboris...dilaberentur.

ex aperto. 'Openly.' For the form cf. § 7, ex propinquuo, xxii. 7. 4, ex vano, ex aquo, ex publico, ex antiquo, ex composito, ex improviso. So also with in and pro.

§ 12. laxatas. 'Vigilance relaxed,' or more probably the outposts thinned. laxare is a favourite word with Livy in metaphorical uses, as ii. 34, laxare annonam, 59. 6, laxare pugnam, ix. 16. 10, laxare aliquid laboris, laxior locus, laxamentum.

§ 13. angustias evadit. Polyb. δεύνε τὰς δυσχωρίας, iii. 51.

tumulis. Livy prefers the abl. without a preposition, with consedit, and like verbs.

c. xxxiii. § 2. arce. Often used for a natural stronghold as well as a fortified post.

via transire. This use of a modal or local abl. without a preposition is frequent in Livy, but the expression is bald in its brevity.

§ 3. immobiles defixit. A strong phrase in frequent use. Cf. xxii. 53. 6, quam stupore ac miraculo torpidos defixisset, where also the adjective has a proleptic sense. We need not accept the fanciful explanation proposed, that it is a figure suggested by the magical use of little images pierced to represent the persons on whom the charms were to be tried.

suo ipsum tumultu agmen. This construction of ipse agreeing with the subject, or the object of the sentence, is nearly always preferred to the gen. ipsius following suus, where the form of the period allows it. Fabri.

§ 4. quicquid adi. 'Thinking that any panic occasioned by themselves would be enough to rout them utterly.'

transversis rupibus. The MSS. commonly read perversis rupibus juxta invia, &c. This is rejected by Madvig on the ground that perversae rupes is obscure, and invia decurrere an unusual construction. He thinks that per has slipped out of its place, and dislodged the trans of transversis. Some editors read diversis after a late MS.

§ 5. simul...simul. 'Were hard pressed not merely owing to the onset of the enemy, but also to the roughness of the ground.' Ab is unusual with a modal abl. like iniquitate, especially in Livy.

sibi quoque tendente. 'As each man struggled selfishly to get sooner out of danger.' For the constr. of sibi compare Cic. in Verr. ii. 8. 22, Veneri absolvit, sibi condennat, Tac. Ann. i. 65, sibi quisque properus.

evaderet. Note the different constr. with this verb here and in 32. 13.

repercussae. 'Re-echoing.' Properly an epithet of clamores, not of valles.

§ 7. turba. 'The crowding.'

in immensum altitudinis. This use of the neut. sing. with a genitive is less common than the neut. plur., except in later writers, but Livy has, x. 32. 6, multum diei, v. 37. 5, immensum loci, vii. 8. 5, serum diei, xlv. 9. 2, plerumque Europae.

deiecit. Constr. prægn. 'caused to fall.'
maxime modo is a favourite phrase with our author. Cf. 38. 1, hoc maxime modo, xxxv. 34. 10, itineris maxime modo.

§ 8. suos continuit. 'Kept his men from going to the rescue.'

§ 9. interrumpi. 'A break in the line.'

exutum. 'If the baggage-train were lost.' Used proleptically.

§ 11. cibo is supplied without MS. authority, but captivus is often used with inanimate objects, as with arma, navigia, pecunia, solum, by Livy, and with vestis by Vergil, and it cannot here make sense without a subst.

C. xxxiv. § 1. frequentem. 'Densely peopled.' Cf. xxxi. 23. 5, frequentia ædificiis loca, and xxxv. 1. 6, acies frequentes armatis. More commonly the abl. is omitted, as forum frequentes.

populum—canton, or district. Ut, qualifies frequentem, which should naturally come nearer to it. Cf. xxxii. 33. 9, Alexander, ut inter Ætolos, facundus.

suis artibus. Also used of Hannibal, xxii. 16. 5.

§ 2. oratores veniunt. The account of Polybius iii. 52 is more graphic in its details of the garlands and olive branches which they bore. τοῦτο γὰρ σχεδὸν πασὶ τοῖς βαιβάροις σύνθημα φιλίας καθάπερ τὸ κηρύκειον τοῦ Ἐλλησι.

§ 3. ad fidem. 'As a guarantee.' Cf. on 19. 5.

P. 37, § 4. composito agmine. Drakenborch explains this passage 'not at all as if they were marching through a friendly country, but in fighting order,' as if sed were omitted. Fabri reads incomposito after one MS. It is more probably 'in line of march not at all arranged for passage through friendly country.'

§ 5. robore. 'The main body.'

circumsp. sollicitus. 'Anxiously reconnoitring,' or omnia may be taken with soll. as cetera in virum cetera egregium 1. 35. 3. Fabri however notes that in Livy we only find vicem coupled with soll., as in passages like xxviii. 19. 17, ab sollicitis vicem imperatoris militibus.

§ 7 In eos versa. 'The line of infantry faced towards them, and clearly proved (i.e. by its losses or hard fighting) that if the rear-guard had not been strengthened they must have met with a terrible disaster in that pass.' The use of fecit after acies is awkward: it connects two distinct statements, of the manœuvre of the infantry, and the experience of danger.

acciipenda fuerit. Cf. the use of the participle in -urus with fuerit, as iv. 38. 2, nec dubium fuit quin si...terga daturi hostes fuerint.

§ 8. ad extremum periculi. Cf. ad ultimum dimicationis, ad inopice ultimum, ad extremum spei, and like phrases common in Livy.

demittere. 'Risk sending.' Cf. iii. 35. 1, demissa jam in discrimin dignitas.

c. xxxv. § 1. latrocinii. Often contrasted with bellum, or justum bellum, as xxix. 6. 2, latrocinis magis quam iusto bello gerebatur res. Latro, like laverna, from the root λα (λης) λάτρης, became naturalized on Italian soil, and gained an unfavourable meaning, Curtius, 326.

§ 2. novissimum ag. = rear = extrema agminis.

progressi morative. 'Stragglers in front or rear.'

§ 3. sicut...ita = 'indeed'... 'but.' Cf. § 11, sicut breviora ita arrect.

P. 38, § 4. Nono die. So Polyb. iii. 53, who however fixes the point from which he reckons, and gives intermediate dates, while Livy does neither. In fact, all his incidents and particulars of time are taken from another route, and do not suit his own; his reference to errores is probably to explain the length of time which did not seem needful for the shorter pass which he had chosen.

per invia pleraque. Cf. 32. 9, confragosa omnia.

ducentium. 'Absolutely for 'guides.' Ducentium fraus is hardly consistent with the promise of the friends from Cisalpine Gaul to be duces itinerum, 29. 6.

initae valles. Cf. 1. 5, Sicilia S. amissae.

§ 5. stativa, sc. castra.

§ 6. occid. sidere Verg. 'As the constellation of the Pleiads was near its setting,' i.e. towards October. Polyb. iii. 54, διὰ τὸ συνάπτειν τὴν τῆς Πλειάδος δῶν. Pliny ii. 47. 125, post id (autumnit) aequinoctium diebus fere xliv. Vergiliarum occasus hiemem inchoat, quod tempus in iii. Idus Novembres incidere consuevit.
§ 7. nive oppleta. The climate was probably even more severe than at present, owing to the thick forests which then covered great part of Germany.

§ 8. prospectus. A fanciful picture, which is hardly borne out by facts, as no such view can be obtained near the summit of the Mont Genêvre, nor indeed of any other of the passes. The description of Polybius does not imply any such actual view of the plains of Lombardy, for his word ένάργεια may mean ‘evidence’ or ‘proof’ addressed to the reason, and not to the sight. Many unsuccessful attempts have been made to find a likely scene for this speech.

transcendere. Infin. after a verb like dicit, implied in ostentat.

summum. ‘At most.’ Adverbially as xxxiii. 5, 8, duo aut summum tres juvenes.

§ 10. furta. ‘Stealthy ambuscades,’ as Polyb. ibid. πλην τῶν λαθρα κακοποιοῦντων. Fabri compares ix. 31. 10, hostem ultimam spem furto insidiarum temptantem.

sicut breviora. This generalization is not found in Polyb., and indicates increased knowledge of the Alps since the conquest of Gaul.

euc, qui paulum... The reading of the MSS. is here affici, which is harder. With it the passage would mean ‘and if they stumbled but a little, down they fell and could not help slipping further’ (lit. ‘could not cling to the place where they were dashed to the ground,’ cf. Cæs. B. G. vi. 27, neque si quo affictae casu conciderint, erigere sese possunt). But as their effort would be chiefly to save themselves from falling, Madvig reads affixi (as suggested by Drakenborch, cf. iii. 68. 8, hæcete affixi contionibus) as a strong term to express the attempt to keep their footing. Affigere and affigere are elsewhere confused in the MSS.

vestigium. Perhaps from ve-, στιχ-, στειχω, στοιχος, Curtius, 178.

succiderent is a more questionable change for occiderent.

c. xxxvi. § 1. angustiorem. ‘A narrower pass, with walls of rock so steep that.’
ut ægere... This would be absurdly exaggerated if it referred to the ordinary state of the pass. If however we understand it as caused by a recent landslip or avalanche, it would be consistent with experience. There is one spot especially on the Little St Bernard exposed to such casualties, and to this the description of Polybius well applies. He speaks however of the road being carried away, σχέδου ετί τρια ἡμιτονία, but Livy mistaking this, or the language of their common authority, converts it into a precipice of a 1000 feet in depth (if we accept, that is, Valla's almost certain corrections of the meaningless readings of the MSS.). 'This,' says Niebuhr, 'is nonsense, as all must see."

expeditus. Cf. vii. 34. 3, collem aditu arduum impedito agmini, expeditis haud difficilem. So expediti equites 'light troops.' Expedita classis, agmen, venatores, &c. in Livy.

P. 39, § 2. admodum = maxime, fere, μάλιστα.

§ 3. miranti = cum admiratione querenti by pregnant use. Cf. i. 41. 1, mirantium quid rei esset, iii. 35. 5. Nägelsbach, p. 279, illustrates this by such cases as dodrantem completere = complementi causa adiicere, triarii postremos claudebant for claudentes postremi ibant.

§ 4. circa. On use of the adverb cf. note on 7. 5.

circumducet = must take round. On this use of the subj. for circumducere debere, v. Madvig, De Finibus ii. 35, who quotes various passages from Cicero and Livy, xl. 37. 3, non triumphum impedire debuit...sed postero die...nomen deferret. Cf. also Verg. Æn. ix. 643, at tu dicitis Albane maneres. Ovid, Tristia iv. 3. 34, Tristis es: indignor, quod sim tibi causa doloris; non es; at amisso conjugé digna fores.

§ 5. super veterem... 'Over the snow of the last season, which had not melted.' A mass of snow often falls into a ravine or valley, where it is sheltered from the sun's heat, and remains through a whole summer, forming sometimes a great natural bridge, through which a river tunnels for itself a channel. Probably the early historians referred to some such mass which blocked up the spot where H. tried to force a passage. Livy's account would be more natural in the case of a glacier, which was not likely to be met with in their way.

§ 6. fluentem... 'The liquid mud formed by the melting snow.'

tabem is the correction of Gronovius for the labem of the MSS. It is especially used of any melting substance.
NOTES. XXI. c. xxxvi. § 7—c. xxxvii. § 4. 203

§ 7. [ut a] lub. The MSS. read ut a lubrica, where the preposition would seem out of place. Sauppe and W. change this to via. ‘On the slippery track where the ice gave no foothold, but let the feet slide over it all the easier, as it was a steep incline.’ Madv. needlessly quarrels with via on the ground that there was no road, cf. § 5, but it seems better to omit it as an awkward addition.

adminiculum. Formed from ad and manus on the analogy of cubiculum, sediculum. Corssen ii. 416.

in levi tantum. ‘Rolled in what was only smooth ice or slush of snow.’ ‘Only,’ because no virgulta, &c.

§ 8. connitendo. T. Faber’s correction for the continendo of the MSS.

alte concr. ‘Frozen to a great depth.’

c. xxxvii. § 2. ad rupem m. ‘To cut a way through the rock.’ Cf. ix. 29. 5, viam munivit, of making the Appian way. Polyb. ἔξουσιομείν τῶν κρημνῶν. Munitores are the sappers and miners.

arboribus circa. Whence these came it is hard to say, cf. 36. 7, as also the vinegar, unless it was the soldiers’ drink or posca, Pliny, xxiii. 1. 57, says acetum saxa rumpit infusum, quae non ruperit ignis antecedens, cf. Juv. x. 153, Diducit scopulos et montem rumpit aceto. The details in this section do not occur in Polyb.

P. 40, § 3. mollunt anfr. ‘Relieve the steep gradients by winding tracks of gradual descent.’ Cf. Verg. Georg. iii. 293, clivus mollis. Caes. B. G. vii. 46, quidquid circuitus ad molliemundo clivum accesserat, also locis mollioribus below.

anfractus, from ambi and frag (frango). To the objection to this derivation made by Zeyss, that anfractus means a ‘bend’ rather than a ‘break,’ Corssen, i. 397, quotes Cic. Nat. D. ii. 18, of the sphere, ea figura...qua...habere...potest nihil incisum angulis, nihil anfractibus, nihil eminens, nihil lacunosum.

§ 4. prope fame abs. They might have been quite starved according to Livy’s account. Polyb. makes the horses get over after one day’s delay, the other three being spent in making a broader path for the elephants.

si quid est... ‘All the herbage, such as it is ..’ Cf. Cic. in Cæc. 15, ipse Allienus ex ea facultate, si quam habet, ali-quantum detracturus est. Cf. Lucr. ii. 16, hoc ævi quodcumque.
obruunt nives. This might easily be the case so late in the season.

§ 5. apricosque etiam. The MSS. have apricos quosdam, but the asyndeton is harsh. W. reads apricosque quosdam, which is ugly and unusual.

et prope silvas = and almost forests. Madv. inserts the et as rivos p. s. seems to him unnatural.

§ 6. locis mollior. This is an abl. absol., and the compar. stands for a partic.

c. xxxviii. § 1. quinto mense a. Cf. xxii. 19. 5, altero ab Tarraco die, an elliptical expression; the 5th month only is qualified by the 'ut quidam,' the 15th day is accepted by Livy, as by Polyb. But it is not easy to make their detailed statements agree with this number, as both reckon 9 days to the ascent, 2 at the top, 4 by the landslip, and 3 in the descent. Probably however Polybius meant the last 3 to be counted as part of the 4 just mentioned, in which the cavalry reached the lower valleys while the road was being widened for the elephants, and then we should get only 15 for the whole. There is no hint of this however in Livy, who is hopelessly inconsistent.

§ 2. qui minimum, e.g. Polybius iii. 56, on the authority of the tablet at Lacinium. We may note that with the exception of a few Ligurians there were no mercenaries in this army, only Spaniards and Libyans, not like the motley aggregates of earlier days.

§ 3. Cincius, v. Introduction on the authorities.

maxime... 'Would be a most weighty authority.'

§ 4. adducta. 'Brought with him through the Alps,' most unlikely when there was a promise of more faithful allies on the other side, who had more to gain from the Punic cause.

magis, take with veri simile; adducta and audisse after scribit, to be understood after additis.

auctores sunt, so xxiii. 16. 15, quod quidam auctores sunt, ii. 58. 1, Piso auctor est, xxx. 3. 6, ita pars major auctores sunt.

§ 5. Taurini Semigalli. This is a very bold correction by Madvig of the corrupt readings of the MSS.: Taurinisnegalli, Taurinis que Galliae, Taurinisne Gallis, &c., on the ground that Strabo connects the Taurini with the Ligures, and yet distinguishes them as if they were half Celts. The conjecture of W. Taurini Galliae seems preferable.
degresso (Haunibali), cf. i. 8. 4, locus qui nunc septus descendentibus inter duos lucos est.

§ 6. Id quum, &c. 'This is difficult, for Polyb. asserts that H. descended among the Insubres, as indeed it was likely that he would do, since they and their allies had invited him to cross into Italy. It may be that Livy only meant that the annalists all spoke of his attack on the Taurini as his first movement in Italy, and as the Taurini were, strictly speaking, a Ligurian not a Gallic tribe (Strabo rv. 6), possibly the passage, whose reading is so doubtful, brought out the close neighbourhood of the hostile T. to the friendly Insubres.

ambigi, quanam. No official account was likely to reach Rome from the time when H. disappeared from Scipio's sight, till he was heard of near the Po. The Alps were till long after a terra incognita, and few like Polybius cared to travel so far to gather up the local traditions.

P. 41. credere, the transition from the passive ambigi to an active is marked, but not unusual in Livy. In orat. directa he would naturally say vulgo credunt (sc. homines).

Pœnino. This was the pass of the Great St Bernard. Its name is thought to be derived from the Celtic deity Penn (Zeuss, die Deutschen, p. 5). Jupiter Pœninus was worshipped on the summit, and the name has been found on 30 ex voto tablets which have been discovered near the top. It was also called Mons Jovis, which survives in the names Mont-Joux, Plan-de-Joux which are still localized on the height. It was by this pass that Livy, v. 35, brought the Boi and Lingones into Italy in the 5th century B.C. The fanciful derivation of the name referred to in the text was an argument likely to be urged in early times.

Cremonis iug. It is tempting to identify this with the Crament, between la Thuile and Entrèves, beside the little St Bernard, but the attempt rests on grounds of etymology as insecure as the case just specified. It is probable that only one route was then known across the Alpes Graiae, that of which Strabo speaks, rv. 67, 'the road from the Salassi parts into two branches, the one rough and inaccessible for beasts of burden over the Pœninus, the other more westerly through the Centrones.'

§ 7. per alios. Madvig's conjecture for per saltus mont, which is obviously corrupt. Lipsius and others whom W. follows read per Salassos, which is inviting, but the addition of montanos would be needless, as Madvig points out. The Salassi of the common reading were the tribe on the Doria Baltea, better known in the days of Augustus for their resolute though hopeless stand for independence against Terentius Varro, who sold 42,000 of them into slavery, Strabo iv. 6. 7.

Libuons, otherwise called Lai, Lebecii, Libici, Lævi; probably petty tribes between the Orgus and Ticinus under the supremacy of the Insubres. Their chief city was Vercellæ, (Libicorum ex Salluiis ortae, Pliny iii. 16).

§ 8. Semigermanis. This objection might apply to the great St Bernard, but could have little force after the description of the resistance which H. met with on his way from the mountaineers, whoever they were. The form Semigermanis probably suggested Madvig's reading Semigalli above.

The answer to the etymological theory serves to show that no local traditions of H. lingered on the great St Bernard, but proves nothing as to the little St B.

§ 9. Seduni Veragri. Tribes about Martigny on the lake of Geneva. They are coupled together by Cæsar, B. G. iii. 1, in Veragros Sedunosque—qui a finibus Allobrogum, et lacu Lemano et flumine Rhodano ad summas Alpes pertinent, as also by Pliny, iii. 20. Strabo, iv. 6. 6, speaks of the Οὖδαπαγγοι near the Leman Lake, whose town Octodurus was near the site of Martigny. The names were restored in the text by Lipsius and Gronovius from the corrupt sed uno vel acri of the best MSS.

c. xxxix. § 1. ad principia r., 'for the opening of the war.'

armare, 'prepare for action.' Napoleon passed the great St Bernard in 5 days, but waited 20 more before his army was ready to fight.

§ 2. tabe. Fabri compares n. 32. 11, totum corpus ad extremam tabem venisse.

§ 3. a Manlio, v. 25. 8. Atilioque, 26. 2.

tirone et..., 'disheartened as the raw levies were.' tiro connected with—tar, répy, terenus, nux terentina (quæ mollis est, Macrob.), trio. Corssen, i. 511.

novis ignominiiis, i.e. the rout by the Gauls, 25. 9.

§ 4. caput. Possibly, but not certainly, on the site of Turin, or what was afterwards Taurasia and Augusta Taurinorum.

volentes, i.e. the citizens by constr. ad synesim.
§ 5. oppressisset, 'surprised,' used with the additional sense of arresting the movement.

§ 6. quæ pars. Fabri gives other examples of the frequent use of quis or qui for uter.

P. 42, § 8. eo ipso, quod... This is an afterthought of history. Livy forgets that H. had no great name as yet, and that the consuls were not specially elected for military skill, except in times of crisis.

§ 9. inter se opinionem, 'their estimate of each other,' as inter se is often used for reciprocal action, as also alii alios, &c. Sallust combines both. Cat. 22. 2, quo inter se magis fidi forent alii tanti facinoris conscii. Later writers, like Tacitus, use invicem.

quod, relictus in Gallia. Polyb., m. 60, says πρότερον δόλγαις ἡμέραις, and makes Hannibal marvel at the promptitude of Scipio, though at least a month must have elapsed, and the Roman forces might have been brought round to meet H. at the foot of the Alps before he had recruited his strength. It is probable that in these phrases we may trace the influence of the Scipionic circle in giving a favourable colour to what was really questionable generalship.

§ 10. Occupavit, 'took the initiative by.' Cf. i. 14. 6, occupabant bellum facere; Hor. Carm. i. 14. 2, interdum rapere occupat; still stronger iv. 30. 4, ipsi praoccupaverunt ferre.

educeret, sc. exercitum. Often used absolutely by Livy in this connexion.

c. xl. § 1. supersedisset 1. 'I should have thought it needless to harangue you.' The speech of the general to his soldiers is a characteristic of Greek and Roman warfare, and of citizen soldiers.

§ 2. vicissent. Note the sudden change from the subj. which expresses the speaker's thought to the ind. habui which states only a matter of fact.

confessionem... 'I regarded as a victory the admission of (inferiority) implied in the enemy's flight and refusal to engage.' This is, of course, a mere rhetorical boast.

§ 3. meis auspiciis. In the technical system of Rome the auspicia were taken by the legati or deputy commanders in the name of the general in chief. Cf. Tac. Ann. i. 41, ductu Germanici auspiciis Tiberii. Monum. Ancyr. res aut a me aut per legatos meis auspiciis gestas. Horace says, Carm. i. 7. 27, with less propriety, Teucro duce et auspice Teucro.
populus Romanus. The commons only indirectly influenced the choice of a commander by giving consular rank; the choice of the province rested partly with the senate, partly with the lot.

voluit agrees with the unity implied in sen. pop. R.

§ 5. stipendium. At first it was arranged that the indemnity of 3200 talents should be paid off in 20 years; the term was afterwards reduced to 10.

Sardiniam. It was hardly ingenuous to speak of S. as bellum præmiun, since it was taken by Rome some time after.

P. 43, § 7. audent, i.e. pugnare or absolutely as often in Livy.

duabus partibus. Scipio is supposed to know the numbers and losses in Hannibal's army. The fractions \( \frac{2}{3}, \frac{3}{4}, \frac{1}{2} \) are expressed by duæ, tres, quattuor partes respectively. Cf. viii. 1. 1.

§ 8. At enim. An idiomatic ellipse as 18. 9.

§ 9. præusti artus, 'frost-bitten limbs.'

§ 11. qui secundum... 'Who next to the Gods have been sinned against.' Cf. 45. 8.

commissum... For this use of the three verbs, cf. Florus ii. 15, Si quis trium temporum momenta consideret, primo commissum bellum, profligatum secundo, tertio vero confectum est, also Livy iii. 50. 6.

c. xli. § 1. vestri adhort. So Cicero uses sui conservanai causa. Ovid. Heroid. xx. 74, copia placandi sit modo parva tui, neuter forms of the possessive being in both cases used.

§ 3. ad famam. But 26. 4, he is said to have landed by the Rhone, thinking Hannibal far away across the Pyrenees.

§ 4. qua parte. Constr. ad synesim, equitibus being understood in equestri.

P. 44. regressus. The MSS. reading of this passage with neque before regr. makes no sense, and is corrected by Madvig. Weiss. marks it as hopeless.

§ 5. improvisus. Madvig retains this reading of the MSS., though improvidus seems more in accordance with Livy's usage.

decernendum, sc. armis or ferro.
NOTES. XXI. c. xli. §§ 6—17 209

§ 6. aestimatos. The sum paid for each prisoner at the capitulation of Eryx, but which is not mentioned elsewhere.

estimare is lit. ‘to reckon in bronze’ from as and tima, τιμὴ, the earliest coin being in as. Corssen, ii. 424.

§ 7. Herculii. Referring to the fancy which connected the name of the Graian Alps (or little St Bernard) with the Hercules Graius, who was fabled to have crossed them after his victory over Geryon, cf. v. 34. 7. Nep. Hann. iii. 4, Alpes...nulladum via... nisi de Hercule fabulis credere licet... superatas.

ut ipse fert. Ferre is here as often in Livy for prae se ferre.

vectigalii. Strictly speaking, Carthage was only stipendiaria, since she paid a definite sum by way of indemnity, cf. stipendia Carthaginis impiae, Hor. The stipend. civitates of later days were those whose contributions to the imperial treasury were of fixed amount, or proceeded from a tax of fixed percentage. The vectigalia paid by the greater part of the empire were tithes or other imposts varying with the productiveness of the soil.

§ 8. Quem nisi. ‘If he were not maddened by the sense of guilt.’ Cf. Cic. Rosc. Am. 24, suum quemque scelus agitat.

§ 9. consule. Lutatius.

§ 11. ultimo, ‘extreme,’ as 44. 4, ultimi cruciatus, iii. 58. 11, ultima paxa.

sineullo cert. This is all extravagant rhetoric, though the danger was a real one to the Carthaginian army at Eryx. But the Romans gladly offered terms of peace, for their losses had been even more severe than those of the enemy, 700 ships as against 500, according to Polyb. i. 61.

§ 12. tutela, gen. of quality after duximus, ‘regarded as under our protection,’ cf. 44. 5, sui arbitrii fecit, vii. 18. 3, fidci sua non solum virtutis ducebant esse.

The Romans had little to be proud of in the memory of their conduct to Carthage in the great crisis of the mercenary war.

§ 13. Pro his impert. ‘In return for these boons.’

P. 45, § 15. obsistat... obstandum, ‘bar the way.’ Döderlein remarks upon this verb as a prouder phrase than resistat.

§ 16. non, ‘not only.’

§ 17. illius urbis, ‘our city yonder,’ as contrasted with vis nostra, ‘our valour here.’

C. L. 14
c. xlii. § 1. ad spectaculum. A phrase often used by Livy. Cf. xxiii. 43. 1, ad spectaculum pugnae frequentes eixierant.

si vinculis. 'On condition of being set free from his bonds, and receiving if victorious, &c.'

§ 2. deiecta in id, 'thrown for that purpose,' i.e. into the helmet or urn, so conjicere sortem in urnam, sitellam, or cistulam.

§ 3. et, ut cuiusque. The MSS. have no ut, but it seems to be required, and may have been omitted after the et, from the similarity of the words. W. notes that only one pair of combatants is mentioned by Polyb., and thinks that therefore the et cuius of some MSS. is better, but the vincentium of the last line points to several pairs fighting together.

exciderat. So ὁ κλῆρος ἐκπίπτει. Cf. xxiii. 3. 7, nominibus in urnam conjicere sortem in urnam, sitellam, or cistulam.

sui moris. Cf. x. 26. 8, ovantes moris sui carmine.

tripudiis. This word is explained by the Latin writers as strictly applied to the action of the sacred chickens, cernitur in auspiciis tripudiantium pullorum dictum a terra pavienda. Festus. So too Cicero, div. ii. 34. The root pu is traced by Corssen, i. 359, in repudium, and possibly pudet, as well as in pavire (strike), pavimentum, παίειν. tri is not for terra, which is unchanged in composition, but as in trifolium, triclinium, trianum, from the threefold beat. The word is also used of the ceremonial dances of the Romans, as of the Salii, cum tripudiis solemnique cantu, i. 20. 3, and of the Fratres Arvales in the inscriptions.

§ 4. is habitus animorum. Cf. 2. 6, eo fuit habitu oris.
eiusdem cond., i.e. prisoners.
spectantes, i.e. the army.

P. 46, c. xliii. § 2. vicimus. The past put for the future to express the certainty of the result, and give life to the sentence.

§ 4. habentes. The MSS. have habentibus, and W. retains it, but it seems equally awkward to regard it with Fabri as an abl. abs., or as dative agreeing with vobis while understanding 'fugam' with claudunt as W. suggests.

§ 6. possident. 'The port' which corresponds to πόρος. πόρος appears in various forms in possideo, pollingo, porricio, pono (po. sino). Corssen, Beiträge 87.
§ 7. agite dum, plural form of interj.agedum: for dum the MSS. read 'cum.'

§ 10. emeritis stip. Lit. 'when you have earned your pay.' So applied to the veteran whose term of service has expired and who looks for pension or land as in later days at Rome. So iii. 57. 10, non juniores modo, sed emeritis etiam stipendiiis, pars magna voluntariorum.

P. 47, § 11. momento. Here in original sense 'impulse' (movere). Cf. xxiv. 34. 2, quicquid hostes ingenti mole aegerent, ipse perlevi momento ludificaretur.

§ 12. Nam refers to nec tam difficilem of § 11.

§ 13. Ut viginti. 'To say nothing of the 20 years of service when you fought with your well-known valour and success,' i.e. during the conquest of Spain, rhetorically for 18 years.

illa...illa. Cf. ix. 17. 4, cessisset Papirius Cursor illo corpore robore illo animi.

Herculis columnis, i.e. Calpe and Abyla at Gibraltar.

§ 14. caeso, &c. Cf. c. 25. Livy often uses the asyndeton in rhetorical passages, cf. 44. 4, dolor injuria indignitas.

§ 15. semestri. Scipio had taken office in March. H. touches here on the weak point of the military system of Rome, the constant change of generals, yet Livy's age had seen the danger to civil liberties of a long tenure of command.

§ 17. notata, &c. 'Recall to mind your several distinctions with the appropriate date and scene of each.'

§ 18. laudatis donatisque. A phrase frequently repeated by L. Cf. xxv. 18. 15.

c. xliv. § 1. infrenatos, i.e. the Numidians, who are often specified as using no bridle. Cf. 46. 2.

§ 2. socios. Used of all the various nationalities to the exclusion of the citizens of Carthage.

§ 4. indignitas, perhaps 'a sense of the heinousness.'

P. 48, § 5. se modum, &c. 'Thinks it her right to dictate to us the nations with whom we may be at peace or war.' neque, for 'but not.' Cf. iv. 30. 14, missi tamen feciales, nec corum...verba sunt audita.

§ 6. The MSS. read ad contrary to the fact, Madvig inserts the non, but W. prefers cis 'on our side of,' which seems a better retort, though less near the MSS. Krauss suggests at liberum est Saguntum, referring to the treaty with Hasdrubal, 2. 7, which provided Sag. mediis inter imperia duorum popolorum libertas servaretur. This was followed, however, by a compact between Rome and Saguntum, Pol. iii. 30, which Carthage ignored when Hannibal accused Rome of meddling with the autonomy of S., and when just above he says neque eos quos statuit terminos observat. (Rhein. Mus. 1875.)

§ 7. meas. As if Carthage were speaking by prosopopoeia.

Etiam (in) Hisp. There is much doubt as to the reading of the whole sentence. Madv. inserts the in, and separates the clause from the foregoing, because he thinks that Spain which the Romans had not yet attacked should be coupled with Africa. W. inserts adimis again before etiam and does not accept in.

The common reading, transcendes autem dico, is rejected by M., on the ground that either autem or dico would be superfluous, and he therefore inserts transcendisse, which W. objects to with some reason as weak, when followed by duos consules, &c.

unum in Afr. H. naturally omits to note that this was a measure of defence though offensive in form.

vindicarimus, is Madvig's correction for the vindicaremus of the MSS., which Heerwagen supports by like passages as xxiii. 5. 6, nihil ne quod suppleremus quidem nobis reliquit fortuna.

§ 8. qui respectum habent, 'who have something to fall back on.'

respectus, used elsewhere by Livy in this sense of 'chance of safety or retreat.' Cf. iii. 23. 5, nos omnium rerum respectum, praeerquam victoria, nobis abscindamus. So Cic. Phil. v. 18, quum respectum ad senatum et bonos non haberet.

omnibus inter, &c. 'Assured that you must tear out of your hearts all hopes of any alternative save victory or death.'

dubitabit, is euphemistic for adversa erit.

§ 9. destinatum. W. inserts si before this. Madv. would expunge it as a needless repetition, and because dest. in an. is less natural than fixum in an.; yet we find the phrase, vi. 6. 6, sibi destinatum in animo esse, and possibly destinatum consilio, 54. 6.
P. 49, c. xlv. § 1. ponte Ticinum. They had already crossed the Po from Placentia, 39. 10, and were marching along the left bank. The pons over the Ticianus, probably near Pavia, was a fixed one, with a castellum or tête du pont, distinguished from the bridge of boats (rates) over the Po.

§ 3. sollicitari. Used absolutely 25. 2, without in defect.

Ictumulis. The text points to a place near the month of the Ticianus, about the modern Carbonara, which agrees also with the situation of the place of like name referred to 57. 9. But Pliny, 32. 21, and Strabo, v. 1. 12, speak of the gold mines of Victumulus or Ictumuli in the district of Vercellæ, and there are still traces of them near Biella to the north of Vercellæ, while there were none near the mouth of the Ticianus. In later times the Romans found a pretext for a war with the Salassi, and despoiled them of the mines in question, and it is probable that the contractors who farmed them afterwards and employed some 5000 workmen in them brought the produce to Ictumuli, which served as the chief emporium for the whole neighbourhood until the colony of Eporedia was planted in the centre of the mining district. C. I. L. v. 2, p. 715.

§ 4. pronuntiat, 'offers,' like proponit below; so declarare munera, indicere præmia.

in quorum spem. The use of the prepos. is singular, as spes is not the object, but the cause of the action, which is however confounded with it. Heerwagen compares v. 30. 4, vellent in eam spem liberos tollere.

§ 5. immunem, i.e. free of all payments to the state.

§ 6. potestatem fact. H. here claims a power which Roman generals at times exercised, of bestowing the civitas or franchise.

§ 7. mancipium, the 'taking by the hand,' was a symbol of purchase, and thus the term was used alike for the right of ownership (e.g. vitaque mancipio nulli datur), as also for the slave as the property of his master.

§ 8. silicem retinens. The knife of flint was used for sacrificial purposes till late in the days of the Empire, as we see from the Acta fratrūm Arvalium. It was probably a custom of immemorial antiquity, retained from the ages which had little use of metals, by a religious conservatism which feared to change its forms, cf. the proverb inter sacrum saxum-que, Plaut. Capt. iii. 4, like our 'between hammer and anvil.'

falleret, 'forswear himself.' Cf. Hor. Carm. ii. 8. 10, expedit matris cineres opertos | fallere.
Iovem, named by Livy with characteristic carelessness for the Baal of Carthage.

The MSS. have et before secundum prec. Madvig rejects this on the ground that the omission of est after precatus would be indefensible, as in the reading precipitatus, 25. 8.

§ 9. velut diis auct. 'As if each were assured that the gods sanctioned his hopes.' The quisque is not merely used distributively with the collective ratī, but is made an integral part of the abl. abs. in which it is introduced as a subject. Livy does this elsewhere with quisque as xxxii. 24. 4, relictis suis quisque stationibus in...locum concurrunt, and with ipse as iv. 44. 10, causa ipse pro se dicta damnatur, xxxviii. 47. 7, causam apud vos accusantibus meis ipse legatis dico, and with plerique, as xxxiii. 9. 11, deinde omissis plerique arnis capessunt fugam. He docs the like in constructions with a gerund as xxv. 23. 11, estimando ipse secum. ii. 38. 6, instigando suos quisque populos effecere. ix. 29. 8, gerendo solus censuram obtinuit. xlii. 53. 3, ad pecuniam pro facultatibus quaeque suis pollicendum. On this peculiarity of Livy's style see Madvig Kleine Philol. Schr. p. 367.

id moræ, quod. Cf. 5. 12, id morari quod.

P. 50, c. xlv. § 1. territoros p. The portents, as seen of old, commonly reflected the prevailing temper whether sanguine or foreboding. Cf. what Bagehot says of such forms of superstition as a source of national weakness. "In historical times, as we know, the panic terror at eclipses has been the ruin of the armies which have felt it; or has made them delay to do something necessary, or rush to do something destructive......A religion full of omens is a military misfortune." Physics and Politics, p. 132.

§ 2. examen, for exagimen, as ala for axilla, mala for maxilla.

§ 3. procuratis. The technical term for the religious ceremonies adopted to propitiate the powers whose displeasure had been shown by natural signs.

obvius fit. Polyb. who gives the clearest account of these operations describes Scipio as crossing first over the Po (probably near Placentia), and then across the Ticinum (probably near Pavia) over the bridge specially built for him, iii.
NOTES. XXI. c. XLVI. §§ 3—10. 215

65. He then, c. 65, describes the two armies marching along the river (which was doubtless the Po), along the bank which faced the Alps (i. e. the left), the Romans having the river on their left, the Carthaginians on the right.

The account of Livy, though less definite, can be harmonized with this. Some have supposed the river of Polyb. along which both armies marched to be the Teyinus, but the Romans could only have had this on their left if they had first marched up one bank, crossed it higher up, and then marched down the other bank—a most improbable manoeuvre. It is strange however that no notice should be taken of the other rivers in the way of the two armies.

§ 4. expediebant, constr. ad synesim, the plural referring to the soldiers of the agmen.

§ 5. sociorumq. r. 'The regular cavalry of the allies,' like our 'heavy dragoons.' Cf. 34. 5, cum robore peditum.

in subsidiis, 'in reserve,' but not used in the technical sense of the triarii who formed properly the reserves.

frenatos. Cf. 44. 2.

§ 6. labentibus, 'falling from their horses' or 'thrown,' probably from the horses taking fright at the skirmishers.

§ 7. intercursu, a word peculiar to Livy. Cf. ii. 29. 7, xxx. 11. 9.

pubescentis, in his 17th year, according to Polyb. 10. 3.

§ 8. Africanus. Cf. Livy xxx. 45. 7, primus certe hic imperator nomine victae a se gentis est nobilitatus. Hor. Carm. iv. 8.18, Ejus qui domita nomen ab Africa | Lucratus redit, and early traditions ascribed a like origin to names such as Coriolanus, but they may have been derived from the origo of the gens, or from later relations of patrocinium.

P. 51, § 9. alius, used almost as ceteri 'the remaining force' which was cavalry. Cf. ii. 17. 6, principes securi percussi, sub corona venierunt coloni alii. xxiv. 44. 8, Et alia ludibria oculorum......credita pro veris.

§ 10. malim eq. Livy prefers to attribute the credit to the son, not as being best attested, but as most creditable to Africanus. Polyb. refers to the evidence of C. Lælius the friend of Scipio.

et fama. We may take fama in the abl. as a modal, which is however hazardous, or if we understand fama as the nom., as is much more in accordance with Livy's usage, we may suppose a break in the construction, or cujus supplied from quod, i.e. ‘as to which the report holds its ground.’ Cf. 1. 4. 5, tenet fama lupam cursum flexisse.

c. xlvi. § 10—c. xlvii. § 8.

castra ab T. Livy does not explicitly notice the crossing the Ticinus, but that is implied in the withdrawal to the rates over the Po, and in the advantage of falling back upon Placentia.

§ 3. Prius...quam...sciret H. Polyb. explains the delay of H. as due to a belief that the Roman infantry would attack him.

sexcentos mor. Polyb. makes H. march up to the bridge on the Ticinus (ἐς τὸν πρωτον ποταμον) and capture the 600 who were left behind to break the bridge by taking up the planks (σανίδες) which stretched from pier to pier. H. then retires εἰς τάναντα παρά τὸν ποταμον, that is higher up the Po to find a suitable spot for crossing. Livy clearly implies that H. crossed the Ticinus, and found the 600 engaged in loosing the bridge of boats over the Po, which floated down the stream (in secundam aquam) when its end was untied.

in citeriore ripa. ‘The left bank,’ Hannibal’s position being the main idea.

§ 5. Ea peritis. The scruples of Livy seem well founded, and all probability is against such a mode of crossing. Polybius does not notice it.

fidem fecerint. ‘Inspire confidence.’ Cf. r. 16. 8, facta fide immortalitatis. Cæsar Bell. Gall. vi. 41. 2, ut...Volusenus... fidem non faceret adesse Cæsarem.

ut iam. ‘Even allowing that.’ Cf. Hor. Epod. r. 21, non ut adsit auxili | latura plus præsentibus.

P. 52, § 8. sex millia a Placentia. Nothing is here said of either army crossing the Trebia on its way to Placentia, and the language of both Livy and Polybius is general enough for any position in the neighbourhood. Niebuhr and others have assumed that Scipio retreated to the east of Trebia, and that Hannibal following him thither cut him off from his communications with Rome. This view seems quite untenable for the following reasons:

(1) We hear afterwards of Scipio crossing the Trebia and taking up his position on hilly ground near it. If this new position had been on the left bank, he would have been isolated from his allies the Cenomani to the North, from the Road to Rome on the East, and from Placentia, which was his natural base, and a fortified town with a garrison of 6000 colonists.

(2) The union between Sempronius and himself would have been endangered, yet we hear of no conflict as if H. stood between the two armies.

(3) The Trebia was between H. and Scipio, and the attempt made to gain possession of Clastidium which lay on the West naturally though not necessarily points to H. being also to the West.

It would seem therefore on the whole most probable that Scipio's camp was at first to the West of the Trebia, and that he crossed at last to get nearer his base and put the river between himself and H. It is doubtful however whether Livy intended this, and had he been careful of geography he might have expressed himself more clearly.

The language of Polybius is also vague, περὶ πόλιν Ἡλλακέντην, but may point to the conclusion adopted, which is opposed however to the view of Niebuhr, Arnold, Liddell and Weissenborn, but has been adopted by Mommsen.

c. xlviii. § 3. signum defectionis. Scipio therefore fell back nearer to the road to Rome and to Ariminum, without quite giving up his communications with Placentia. But he removed as far as possible from the country of the Gauls.

contactos. 'Tainted, implicated.' This word is often used by Livy in derivative senses as contactos rabie, societate belli, violatione templi, regia prada, funebribus diris and then extended to things, as unlucky days, and auspicia.

adhc. Here and often by Livy used for etiam tum, strictly it should mean 'up to now.' Cicero seldom uses it except of the present.

§ 6. citra, as 47. 3, 'on their side' of the agent, not the writer.

P. 53, § 7. iactati, 'irritated,' so we read of jactationem cicatricis, xxix. 32. 12, and vulneris, xxx. 19. 5. Some MSS. have jactanti agreeing with via, with which less probable reading cf. jactatio maritima, 26. 5.

ratus exspectandum. It would have been a strange way of waiting for reinforcements to allow the enemy to occupy the road by which they must come. See above, on 47. 8.

§ 8. anxius inopia. This is not very likely as many of the Gauls behind were friends and the country was very rich.
Polyb. ii. 15 in another part of his history dwells in emphatic terms on the fertility of Cisalpine Gaul, which evidently surprised him by its contrast to the poor and exhausted soil of Greece. The innkeeper, he says, does not care to enter the details of his guest's food, but boards him for the whole day for half an as.

excipiebat. For this secondary sense cf. v. 42. 3, nec tranquillior nox diem tam fade actum exceptit.

Clastidium was the scene of the victory of M. Claudius Marcellus over the Gallic chief Virdumarus in the late war (Pol. ii. 34), and a play of Naevius was called after its name. It was a principal station on the road between Genua and Cremona, though afterwards only a vicus dependent on Placentia. On its site at Casteggio, an inscription has been found in which a guild of cobblers of Placentia who were living at Clastidium were made trustees of a sum to be spent in honour of the dead rosa et amarantho et epulis perpetue collendam.

numerus, often used for quantity. Cf. Cic. Phil. ii. 27. 66, maximus vini numerus.

§ 9. nummis aureis. There was as yet no gold coinage in Italy, Spain, or Africa. Mommsen, R. Münzwesen, 671. For Spain and Italy there is only negative evidence, for Rome Pliny 33. 8. 47 tells us that gold was coined 51 years (or 62 in most MSS.) after silver, and that was begun b.c. 267, Liv. Epit. 15. Livy therefore as usual adopts the terms of a later age.

praefecto. This term is always used to refer to the delegate of a higher official, whether civil or military: not to the elect of an assembly. It was one of frequent use under the empire, and passed into modern language as préfet.

Id horreum. Convenient enough if H. was on the W. of the Trebia: less so if all the supplies had to cross the river.

§ 10. sævitum. A bold example of the pass. form of neut. verbs, which Livy often uses.

c. xliv. § 1. constitisset. 'Was at a standstill.'

imminentes. 'Close to.' Cf. xli. 1. 2, imminet mari is lacus.

et ante adventum. 'As well as before.' These words are inserted as an afterthought, without reference to the interim, which they are not consistent with.
§ 2. novem L. '9 reached L.' It seems better to understand some verb such as attigerunt, rather than assume a different construction in two clauses with tenuerunt (cursum) with and without ad, though both constructions are freely used by Livy, as i. 1. 3, xxii. 22. 2. Strabo, iv. 2. 10, speaks of the seven Liparean islands, of which the greatest was Lipara. The plural may be used for the town as W. suggests, or be used for the islands generally. Cf. v. 28. 2.

insulae Vulc. Its name was Thermessa, Ἦν νῦν λεπάν 'Πολύστρο ν καλοῦσι. Strabo gives a long account of volcanic action visible on the island, which lay between Sicily and the Lipare group.

§ 3. Hierone. Like Hanno at Carthage, Hiero of Syracuse lived to remember the 1st Punic war, in which he had borne an important part. At first an ally of Carthage he transferred himself soon to the winning side, to which he was uniformly faithful.

nullo repugnante. 'Without resistance.'

§ 4. veteres socios. A great part of Sicily once belonged to Carthage, but they were gradually driven to the Western Coast, and held only Motye Solois and Panormus. In the rivalries of the Greek republics they found frequent occasions of interference, as the weaker party in the struggle turned to them for help. The 1st war however put an end to that, and secured the island to Rome.

P. 54, § 6. Sicilia prov. It was strictly speaking assigned to Sempronius, but as he was possibly to cross into Africa, the Praetor Æmilius was also appointed to it.

§ 7. legati. Besides the envoys so called, who were sent on extraordinary missions, there were regular officers, attached to the consular army, or the legion, as lieutenant-generals.

tribuni. Attached to each legion, six in number.

§ 8. The whole passage is very corrupt in the MSS., but the corrections of Madvig have been generally received. His earlier suggestion of strepere for teneri has not been admitted into the text. The change of form from missi (sunt) to teneri is in itself awkward, the MSS. read et ubi... ne quis moram, to which Madvig objects that the terms of the edict would be general, and not addressed to the sailors individually, and he therefore corrects it to ne quid, which would explain the object of the foregoing direction. The et he changes to ut, but this seems questionable. Ut ne is a pleonasm used by Cicero, but rarely by later writers, and Drakenborch doubts whether Livy wrote it in the three passages in which the MSS.
have it, xxxiv. 17. 8, xliii. 41. 10, and xlvi. 23. 4, in all of which moreover the ut ne are found close together. It seems better to omit the et or ut. For the unmeaning word simili of the MSS. he reads missis, as an abl. abs. like edicto prop. W. prefers missi, with the sunt omitted, like the missi legati above. Hasenmüller suggests missi milites, which includes many of the letters found in the simili of the best MS. (Rhein. Mus. 1863.)

socii navales. In early days the Roman fleet was of little importance, and service in the navy ranked far lower than in the army. The ships were partly manned from the allies, and the coast towns were especially required to furnish their contingents of marines and rowers. Hence the term socii navales, though Romans of narrow means and libertini were also called upon to serve. This lower status lasted on even under the empire, as may be proved from the official careers indicated in the Inscriptions.

§ 13. memoria... There had been much hard fighting about Lilybœum in the 1st war. It was the scene of an obstinate siege, conducted by the Romans with great pertinacity, as well as of a disastrous storm which wrecked their fleet.

c. l. § 1. conserere p. ‘To come to close quarters.’

§ 2. eludere, ‘manœuvre,’ ‘avoid the shock.’ Cf. ii. 48. 7 and xxii. 18. 3, hostem...statarium pugnae genere facile elusit. The Carthaginians had been much the more skilful in the 1st war, and the great victories of Rome were mainly gained by devices which paralysed the pilot’s skill, and reduced matters to a trial of strength, as by the machine of Duilius, which locked the vessels together and enabled the Romans to board the enemy’s ships.

§ 3. affatim = ad fatim, ‘to weariness,’ or ‘satiety.’ Usque ad fatim, Plaut. Poen. iii. 1. 31. Cf. fattiscere, fatigare, which Corssen i. 430 connects with the root of fames, hiscere, haustum, χαυρυ. In form the adverb is like obviam, illico, perviam, extemplo, propemodum, &c., as combination of prepos. and case.
NOTES. XXI. c. l. § 3—c. li. § 2. 221

P. 55. sicubi conserta. 'Whenever a ship was laid alongside of an enemy.'

§ 4. sua is used with reference to R., which though not a nominative is the real subject of the thought. 'The R. were encouraged by their numbers.'

§ 5. tres nobilis. Note the small number of Carthaginians of good family who were serving on board; the size of the fleet too was quite inadequate to its work, and indicates a growing neglect of the navy at Carthage.

§ 6. perforata. 'Stove in.'

§ 7. classem ornare is to fit out with tackle, sails, oars, &c. Cf. ix. 30. 2, duumviro naules classis ornanda reficiendaque causa.

instructam. Some epithet must have dropped out here, and this one supplied by Madvig is as likely as any.

§ 8. prætoriam. Note the use of the adj. as in prætorium for general's tent, and prætor. cohors, though the consul was higher in military rank. But 'consul' was later in Italian usage, and pointed in its form to the dual office, rather than to the high rank.

§ 10. quibusdam volentibus. Livy here seems to copy a familiar Greek idiom, and to make volentibus a sort of dativus comm. with fore. 'Some would be well pleased with a revolution.' Cf. Sall. Jug. 84. 3, neque plebei militia volenti putabatur, Tac. Ann. r. 59, ut quibusque bellum invitis aut cupientibus erat. Yet the constr. is not found elsewhere in Livy, and it is possible to take volentibus as an abl. abs., and the position of the words agrees best with this view.

c. li. § 1. Melitam. Malta, 88 miles from the Sicilian Pachynus. Strabo speaks only of the Maltese dogs in connection with it. It was an early Phœnician settlement, and the little island Gaulus close by has some remarkable remains of Phœnician art. On the question whether it was the same as the Melita of Acts xxviii. see J. Smith on the Voyage and Shipwreck of St Paul, p. 160.

P. 56, § 2. sub corona venierunt. 'Were sold by auction.' Aul. Gell. vii. 4 explains the phrase as derived from the garland put on the head of the slave offered for sale, or from the circle of soldiers or bystanders (vulgi stante corona) gathered round the captives. He prefers the former explanation. A like phrase is 'sub hasta ven.' from the spear, as a symbol of the force on which the slavery rested. This has lasted on in the Subasta = auction in modern Italian.
NOTES. XXI. c. li. § 3—c. lii. § 2.

§ 3. insulas Vulcanni. Here used as a general expression for the whole group of the Liparae, of which Thermessa was specially ins. Vulc.

§ 4. nam forte is a probable correction of Madvig for jam forte, which is abrupt and unusual.

Viboniensi agro. In the west of Bruttium. The Locrian colony of Hipponium was taken by Rome and called Vibo Valentia. Strabo vi. 1. 5.

§ 6. mari supero. The terms superum and inferum are commonly used of the Adriatic and Tyrrhenian seas respectively. Polybius says, iii. 61, that the legionaries were told to make their way as they could to Ariminum at a fixed date, probably because the transports were not sufficient for so large a force. It will be seen that the R. generals did not spare the marching powers of the soldiers, if, as Polyb. states, they reached Ariminum in 40 days from Lilybæum, iii. 68.

§ 7. oram legens. So litora legens, xxxv. 27. 6. The shorter road across the Apennines from Genoa was avoided, as the Ligurians could not be depended on to allow the army a safe passage, while on the great road, which was afterwards the Via Æmilia, they were nearer to the colonies and magazines on the Po.

profectus ad Trebiam. Nothing is said of the route of Sempronius, or of any attempt of Hannibal to prevent a junction of the two consular armies, yet we should expect to hear of this, if H. had been between the two, as most critics have believed.

c. lii. § 1. The subject to declarabat is the sentence ambo cons. et q., which in English we should make an independent clause, 'as both consuls, &c....it was clear.'.... This is a feature of Livy's involved style, as is also the use of the past part.

oppositum, for an abstract subst. oppositio.

spem nullam al. This is absurd, for Italy could raise many armies, as was proved by the muster-rolls given by Polyb. just before in the Gallic war.

§ 2. The et minutus of the MSS. is no doubt corrupt; even if some word has dropped out minutus, though not impossible, is harsh for 'dispirited,' for the Homeric ὀμνὸς ὑμῶν quoted in illustration does little to support the reading. Madv. doubtfully suggests admonitus instead.

trahei rem. Used also 11. 61. 5, like the colloquial 'drag along,' so trahere bellum, comitia, &c., and extrahere, pro-trahere.
NOTES. XXI. C. LII. §§ 2—11. 223

recentis animi. A common form in Livy. Cf. iii. 38. 8, praerocis animi, xxii. 29. 8, insimi ingenii.

§ 3. inter Treblam. These were most likely to the east of the Trebia, for on the west lay the Ligures, and the Gallic allies of H., as the Insubres. § 9 implies that some at least were to the west, if the R. were on the east of the T.

per ambiguum, i.e. maintaining friendly attitude to both sides, and so doubtless intending to gain the good will of the conqueror.

P. 57, § 4. modo ne quid. 'Provided only that they did not.' Cf. tantum ne, 19. 5.

§ 6. ad id dubios. 'Up to that time undecided.'

ab auct. To be taken with declinant. 'Turn from the authors of the outrage to those who they hoped would avenge it.'

§ 7. infida...perfidia. The Romans used these epithets very freely of any races who made a bold stand for their independence.

ut alia v. 'If other memories of the past could be forgotten.' Cf. ii. 38. 2, ut omnia obliviscamini alia, hanc contumeliam quo tandem animo fertis.

§ 8. 'S. urged that the best ties to strengthen the loyalty of their allies (dat. of the aim of the action) would be found in the defence of the first who claimed their help.' The use of defensos for an abstract substantive is a bold construction, like oppositum in § 1.

§ 9. Coll. cunctante is Madvig's correction for the reading cum collegam cunctantem, with no verb to complete it. Corssen derives collega, not from legere, but from the same root as lex, legatus, ligare, privilegium, in the sense of 'bound together with,' like conjuges.

§ 10. ad hoc. Often used by Livy like Greek πρὸς τοὺτος. Cf. 54. 8, 55. 6.

inopinato. Madvig's correction for inopinatos, which is not used for inopinantes.

§ 11. The MSS. gave sequentesque cunque, which was probably corrected by Gronovius to the present text. The words caedes penes in italics are a suggestion of Madvig to complete what would be else a hopeless passage. W. has done well to withdraw his earlier conjecture of Romano, understanding fama vict. with hostium.
NOTES. XXI. c. liii. § 1—c. liv. § 1.

c. liii. § 1. major, i.e. victoria, from the last line.

P. 58, § 3. senescendum. This is a favourite metaphor with Livy. 'Dotage,' cf. i. 22. 3, senescere civitatem otio ratus, v. 21. 7, senescit pugna.

Quid. 'To what purpose.'

ant. 'Or rather.' Cf. v. 52. 6, quid alia...cui oblivioni aut negligentiae damus.

§ 4. Siciliam S. Referring probably to the Carthaginian fleet sent to ravage the coast of Sicily, &c., c. 51.

§ 5. ingemiscant. The pres. subj. implies that the shades of their ancestors were actually conscious of the disgrace.

bellare soliti. A rhetorical extravagance in generalizing from the campaign of Regulus, itself disastrous.

§ 6. contionabundus. 'As if haranguing the soldiery.' The form in -bundus is a favourite one with Livy. Cf. iii. 47. 2, hae prope contionabundus circumibat homines, ii. 38. 2, ibi in contionis modum orationem exorsus.

comitiorum. Here put for 'elections,' though the Comitia met for legislative as well as elective ends.

ne in novos cons. 'To another year.' For the common idiom of putting the consuls for the year, cf. xli. 8, legati ad novos magistratus dilati. They took office on the Ides of March, and it was now winter. This jealousy of successors in office had often a sinister influence on Roman policy. Campaigns were rashly undertaken to gain speedy victories, and important measures neglected because they would not produce their results until a rival's turn came to profit by them.

§ 8. haud diffidebat. Livy's use of haud instead of non is commonly confined to those verbs which imply some sort of negative meaning like dubito, penitet, aspernor, disPLICet, abnuo, &c. Cf. Fabri.

P. 59, § 11. facere, si cess. 'To force an engagement, if hesitation were shown.'

c. liv. § 1. rivus. An unknown streamlet, W. of the Trebia, possibly one that flows by Casaleggio.

obsitus. Cf. i. 15. 8, partem militum locis circa densa obsita virgulta obscuris subsidere in insidiis jussit.

tegendo. The earlier editors all read ad equites tegendos, a more usual constr. than the dative gerund which most MSS.
have. Madvig remarks, nullum prose orationis certum exemplum novi ubi dutirus gerundii accusativum regat. He thinks that perhaps we ought to read equiti which is found in an inferior MS.

§ 2. centenos. The distributive is used because there were the same number both of horse and foot.

corpora curare. Frequent in Livy. Cf. cutem curare. In English we do not particularize, but say 'refresh themselves.'

§ 3. praetorium. The staff, or council of war, consisting of legati, tribuni, centuriones primi pili, and praefecti, so called from meeting in the general's tent. On the use of missum for 'dismissed,' cf. the origin of the term mass, from the last words of the service missa est.

turmis. Troops of 30 horsemen, ten of which formed the cavalry of each legion. Varro, Ling. Lat. v. 91, explains the word turma terima (e in u abiit) quod ter deni equites ex tribus tribubus fiebant.

manipulis. Each legion had 30 maniples of 100 infantry each. Afterwards each manipulus was divided into two centuriae. They were called from the bundle of hay, which in rude days was the sign of each, perticas manipulis feni varie formatis in summo junetas. Aur. Vict. Orig. R. 22. 4.

§ 4. mille eq. mille ped. Livy is fond of this sort of repetition without a conjunction. Cf. 1. 25. 12, fessum vulnere fessum cursu.

Magone. The MSS. have Magoni and no cum, which, or some equivalent, seems required.

inieccre cert. Cf. xxxiv. 4. 15, inieere certamen uxoribus.

§ 6. The MSS. have destinatum.... consilio, 'to the struggle which he had long been planning,' possibly understanding certamen or id quod, but the constr. is harsh, and is therefore corrected by Madvig. Sempronius neglected in this battle the most elementary rules of war. He fought with a river in his rear, where defeat was ruin. He exposed his army to attack while crossing in full view of the enemy, and he ignored the most obvious precautions as to food and cold. On the other hand, Hannibal's confidence in his own genius is shown in letting the Roman army cross the river and form upon the bank without taking advantage of their confusion. His policy was not to defeat merely, but to annihilate the enemy, and to prove to the world that he was more than a match for the Romans on a fair field.
P. 60, § 8. quicquid. 'The nearer they came to the currents of air about the river, the more piercing was the frosty breeze.' Cf. vii. 32. 4, quicquid ab urbe longius proferrent arma, viii. 39. 3, quicquid progredebatur, where quicquid is used adverbially for quanto magis.

§ 9. pectoribus tenus aucta. 'Swollen so as to be breast high.' Proleptically.

utique egressis. 'The more so as they stepped out of the water.'

c. lv. § 2. octo f. millia. This number is too large for the B. only, and Madvig therefore inserts ac before levem. Polyb. iii. 72 says tous λογχοφόρους καὶ Βαλκαρίης.

virium...roboris. Cf. the same combination xxii. 1. 2. Robur emphasizes the power of endurance. Cf. Tac. Hist. ii. 4. 6, quantum illis roboris discrimina et labor, tantum his vigoris addiderat integra quies.

§ 3. receptui. The dative is one of a class of verbal substantives and gerundival expressions, which may be explained as the dative of the contemplated end, as deceunviri legibus scribendis, oleas usui optime condi, &c. The signum receptui becomes a compound subject in the nomin., as iii. 22. 10, si receptui cecinisset. Cf. Roby Lat. Gr. ii. xxxii.

§ 4. Duodeviginti, i.e. five legions, after deducting losses in Gaul and garrisons in Sicily. But Polyb. reckons only 16,000, and specifies that as the strength of the four legions which both consuls combined on great occasions. He repeatedly says that the socii furnished about as many infantry, and three times as many cavalry as the Romans. The musters rolls contained 325,000 R. with 443,000 socii in Italy fit for service at this time. The auxilia were now Italian; Cisalpine Gaul was not yet considered as Italy.

nominis Lat. This term originally applied to the towns in Latium only, who stood in definite relation to the Roman state. Gradually however some of these were drawn closer to the mistress city, and their inhabitants admitted to the full franchise, while their place was taken by fresh colonies that were sent out, and by communities of central Italy, which were raised to the same status. In course of time therefore the nomen Latinum became more political and less ethnic in its associations. It now included a few towns in Latium, the Latin colonies, and most of the tribes in the centre.

Genomanorum. These, with the Veneti, had been the only Gauls faithful to Rome in the recent Gallic war, and even their fidelity had been mistrusted, cf. Polyb. ii. 23. They held the country between the Adda and the Adige, where they had settled after their migration from Gaul (Livy v. 34). Brixia (Brescia) was their capital.

§ 5. diducta is a correction of Drakenb. for deducta; for the leves armaturee sunt of the MSS. Madvig replaces levis armatura, as the plural is quite unnecessary.

P. 61, § 8. quas recentes... We require in English a less involved constr. 'for the Earth. had come in the freshness of their strength.'

Restitissent... 'Their courage would have held out.'

§ 10. Tamen. For the position and context of t. Fabri compares i. 24. 1, tamen in re tam clara nominum error manet.

§ 11. velites. Livy uses this term proleptically, for xxvi. 4. 5 he describes the formation of a class of light troops so called, to be carried behind the horsemen, and to dismount when it came to close quarters. They were incorporated with the legions (institutum ut velites in legionibus essent) as they were better armed with parma and gladius than the rorarii ferentarii accensi velati of early times, who now disappear from sight. The velites themselves were abolished by Marius. For their use against elephants, cf. Vegetius iii. 24, praecipue velites antiqui adversum electantos ordinant.

ad id ipsum. The MSS. omit the id, as they do eos in v. 43. 4, per ipsos dies, contrary to the ordinary usage. On the need of supplying the demonstrative, cf. Madvig on Cic. de fin. iii. 27.

verutis. Livy had mentioned this dart as one of the weapons of the 4th class of the Servian centuries, i. 43. 6.

c. lvi. § 1. adversus G. The Gauls had less experience of elephants than the Romans, who had learnt their habits in the 1st war.

Hannibal. The position of the subject at the end of the sentence is characteristic of the difference between the order of ancient and modern languages, which is here pushed to an extreme.

§ 2. in orbem pugn. The form implies two ideas, the being forced in orbem, and the fighting in that order. Sallust Jug. 97 thus explains it, Romani veteres et ob id scientes belli, si quos locus aut casus conjunxerat, orbes facere, atque ita ab omnibus partibus simul tecti et instructi simul vim sustentabant. It thus resembles our 'forming square.' Cf. ii. 50. 5, orbem colligere, iv. 28. 3, orbem volventes suos, Caesar B. G. v. 33. 3, in orbem consisterent.
qua Gallicis is a correction of Madvig for que G. of the MSS. The centre was formed of all the infantry, not of Gauls and Africans alone.

P. 62, § 3. Placentiam recto it. Livy and Polyb. both mention the retreat of this body to P. without adding that they crossed over a bridge. If we hold to the view that the battle was fought on the west of the Trebia, we must assume that they crossed by a permanent bridge held by the garrison of P., or in boats which they may have found, as in § 8.

§ 5. audaciam ingr. Perhaps to balance the cunctatio ingrediendi just above. In itself it is an unusual expression, audacia being commonly used by itself.

§ 8. sauciorum is added to make sense of the passage which is very harsh without some such epithet, even if magna ex parte be taken, as Fabri suggests, with trajicieron. Beside m. ex parte Livy uses maxima parte, magna parte, and partem magnam much in the same sense of 'mainly.'

ratibus T. This seems decisive as to Livy's view that the battle was fought on the Eastern bank, while the camp was on the W. of the Trebia, improbable as it is on all accounts. Polyb. has no corresponding passage, and Livy's authority in matters of geography is very slight.

c. lvi. § 1. urbe Romanam. Heerwagen notes that L. uses this expression at times with a certain rhetorical emphasis, cf. iii. 7. 1.

§ 2. alterum. This is a correction of Madvig for the altero...resocato of the MSS., which mars the antithesis, and involves an awkward series of phrases.

quas alias leg. There were many legions yet to be called out, as subsequent events proved. Polyb. instead of such exaggerations speaks of the reinforcements sent to Sicily and elsewhere, and remarks that the Romans were most formidable in times of crisis, iii. 75.

§ 3. ingenti periculo. A very unnecessary exposure, as a dictator or interrex might have conducted the elections. Polyb. says that Sempr. concealed his losses in the despatches to Rome, and does not mention the journey. As he passed through Rome on his way to Trebia (Polyb. iii. 68) he might easily have held the elections there.

P. 63. fallendi. 'Of escaping notice,' cf for this absolute use 48. 5. xxii. 33. 1.
NOTES. XXI. C. LVII. § 4—C. LVIII. § 3. 229

§ 4. C. Flaminius. Fabri remarks that as Flam. was consul in B.C. 222, the word iterum must have slipped out, for Livy seldom omitted it after the 4th book. It is left out however in xxii. 15. 6, after M. Atilius Regulus.

§ 5. ut quæque. 'Where the ground was too rough for them,' i.e. marshes or hills.

Celtiberis L. Cf. xxii. 18. 3.

§ 6. Emporium. The Greek ἐμπορεῖον = trading place or magazine (cf. Cheap-side, Chipping Norton, Copenhagen) gave a name to many places, as to the Emporiae of 60. 2.

plurimum in cel. 'His hopes of success depended chiefly on keeping his plan secret.' ad effectum to be taken after spei.

Hannibal could bring no siege train with him over the Alps, and could not risk long delay in besieging the Roman fortresses, with their large garrisons of colonists, while the fickle Gauls were waiting for the issue.

§ 7. consul. Sempronius had gone to Rome, § 3, and Scipio to Cremona, 56. 9. Livy either forgot this statement, or neglected to mention the return of Scipio to Placentia.

§ 9. Victumvias. Like Victumulae or Ictumuli in form, and probably to be identified with it. Cf. note on 45. 3.

§ 10. finitimis pop. This may refer to the Ligures as well as the different tribes of Gauls.

§ 12. Magis agmina...‘more of a crowd than an army,' a phrase repeated in xxv. 34. 9 and elsewhere.

P. 64, § 14. scribentibus. Equivalent to scriptoribus = historians.

omnis...editum exemplum. An elliptical expression for 'acts were done...to stand out as a precedent for.' Cf. xxv. 31. 9, quum multa irae multa avaritiae foeda exempla e dentur.

hibernæ exped. None of these winter operations are mentioned by Polyb.

c. LVIII. § 2. Ligures. Cf. 59. 10. This may account for the roundabout journey of Sempronius from Sicily.

§ 3. Transseuntem Ap. This expedition into Etruria is not noticed by Polybios. The Etrurians had before combined with the Gauls against Rome, and there seemed hope that they might rise again, especially as they were so distinct in race from the other peoples of central Italy. H. wished doubtless to relieve the Gauls of the burden of maintaining his army, but it is most likely that he wanted to open communications with the Carthaginian fleet, which had orders to cruise off Pisæ (Pol. iii. 96). He probably moved by a shorter pass towards the coast, rather than that which he traversed later in the spring. This movement may account for the fact that Sempronius took up his winter quarters at Luca, to watch the outlets of the maritime Alps, and to protect the coast road to Rome.

vertice intorti affligebantur. 'Were dashed to the ground by the whirlwind.' The use of a participle in Latin for a prepos. as in ira, misericordia motus, &c. is very common: the use of intorti seems an extension of the same idiom, the distinctive meaning of the word being really part of the idea of the vertex, cf. Nägelsbach 330. Yet the phrase is used elsewhere as in XXVIII. 30. 13, navem videre vertex retro intortam. For the meaning of vertex see Quintil. VIII. 2. 7, vertex est con-torta in se aqua vel quicquid aliud similiter vertitur. For afligebantur, cf. the old reading in 35. 12.

§ 6. capti auribus. Cf. ii. 36. 11, captus omnibus membris, or 'having lost the use of,' so pedibus, animo captus.

§ 7. explicare, of the canvas, statuere, of the tent poles.

P. 65, § 9. extollere...levare. Most of the MSS. have attollere, for which Heerwagen compares Verg. Ἕν. iv. 690, ter sese attollens cubitoque annexa levavit. But extoll., a more graphic term, expressive of the effort to rise from the strages.

§ 10. movere is used after copere understood in est captus.

opem...inops. Cf. Hor. Carm. iii. 16. 28, magnas inter opes inops.

§ 11. elephanti. Polyb. says that only one survived the cold and storms at Trebia, but probably he is anticipating the result of the year's campaign.

c. LIX. § 1. There is something rather meaningless in the movements of H. towards Placentia and in general too much seems to be compressed into the short winter, as the battle of Trebia could not have been fought before December. Polyb. ignores all these operations.

§ 3. vincerent, i.e. Romani understood in res Romana.

§ 4. in media c. Into the centre of the camp, where they would be unseen by the enemy and be ready to issue in any direction.
§ 5. Romanus, for the R. general as Panus for H.

§ 6. laxatam p. Cl. lax. custodias, 32. 12.

P. 66, § 7. The MSS. reading is pugna raro magis ullam aut utriusque...for which W. suggests magis utta seva aut...which is a very awkward collocation. It is better to leave a blank as no adjectival would come in happily, and the passage is corrupt. Madvig thinks ‘magis dubia aut,’ probable.

§ 8. plus, with two constr., with abl. sexcentis and nom. dimidium. Eius ‘that number.’

§ 9. equestris ord. al. In early days at Rome the equites had been drawn exclusively from the nobler and wealthier classes, but after a time an increasing number of volunteers were allowed to serve on horseback, while the equites equo publico were relieved of the obligation of service. The latter were often sons of senators, or men of high position, but the cavalry did not long rank high in the army, and was drawn largely from the allies. Strictly the phrase equest. ordo is an anachronism, as no such distinction was made before the Gracchi.

The term ‘prefecti’ was especially used for the officers of the allied contingents, as well as of the navy, cf. 61. 4. In the Roman army it was little used till the time of the Empire.

§ 10. Luca was on the Ausar (Serchio) and made a colony B.C. 178, having been gained from the Ligures soon after the 1st Punic war. It was often made the head-quarters of J. Caesar. This movement of Sempronius is quite unexplained by Livy, and is ignored by Polybius. It was probably to guard the coast road to Rome, and passes of the mountains by which Hannibal might open his communications with the fleets of Carthage, see note on 58. 3. But it was hazardous to leave the road by Ariminum unguarded.

c. lx. § 2. Emporiae, now Ampurias on the coast of Catalonia, had been one of the early Phokæan colonies, most of which, with the exception of Massilia, fell before the Phœnicians. It is to be distinguished from the African Emporia round the Syrtis Minor.

§ 3. Læetanis. So read by Madvig instead of Lacetanis (cf. 23. 2), who were further inland. Strabo says, III. 47, that from the Pillars to Tarraco there was no good harbour except Nova Carthago εντεύθεν ὤ ἦ ηδ γα τα ἐξῆς εὐλίμενα καὶ χώρα ἀγαθή τῶν τε Λευτανίων καὶ.....μεχρὶ Εμπορίου. Pliny too while describing the populations on the coast mentions the Cessetani.
near Tarraco, the Ilergetes on the river Rubricatus, a quo Læctani et Indigetes. Ptolemy locates them near the Rubricatus and Barcino. Cf. Hübner, Hermes, i. 340.

§ 4. non ad maritimos. We may explain the ad either as taken with fama conciliata, like i. 26. 4, ingrati ad vulgus judicii, or more probably as the local extension of valuit, 'spread to.'

auxiliarum. Used of non-Italian allies, Fest. Epit. 17, auxiliares dicuntur in bello socii Romanorum exterarum nationum.

cohortes. The usual term for the divisions of the contingents of the Italian socii, as distinct from the legions. Each cohort had from 400 to 600 men, and there were 10 of them in an ala, which answered to the legion.

P. 67, § 7. Nec magni cert. 'Nor was the battle vigorously disputed,' a gen. of quality as praeda parvi pretii manc.

§ 8. parvi pret. and villium manc. both genitives of qual. after praeda, though the constr. is broken by supellex barb. which is in apposition with praeda.

c. lxi. § 1. accideret. Cf. 10. 12, nomen famaque ejus accideret.

mille equitum. An unusual constr., the genitive being put for the abl. owing to its close connection with peditum, which properly follows the substantival millibus. Cf. xxiii. 41. 10, mille passuum inter urbem erant castraque.

§ 2. Tarraco was planted on a high limestone rock, which overlooked the sea and the sunny plain, whose wines were praised by Martial as rivalling the Falernian. There are still remains of the walls, whose huge polygonal masonry points to the work of the Iberian tribes, before the fortress was chosen by the Romans as a convenient centre for their operations during the war with Hannibal. As such they strengthened it till it became their great stronghold. Scipionum opus sicut Carthago Paxorum, Pliny iii. 3. 21. Its bad roadstead however made it far inferior to its rival, which became the capital of the nearer Province, though in later days Strabo, iii. 4. 7, said that Tarraco was become as populous. See also note on Livy xxii. 22. 2.

classicos milites. 'Marines.' The allied towns on the coast often had to furnish a contingent of these. In later Latin classici stands absolutely without milites.

§ 4. animadvertisset. 'Inflicted punishment.'

P. 68, § 5. Hерgetum. Cf. 23. 2, as also for the Ausetani.

§ 8. Ausetanos. The description, prope IIiberum, is probably a mistake of Livy, as the geographers put them near Vich and Gerona, cf. 23. 2. Scipio most likely attacked the Ausetani first, and then the Lecreti, who lay along the coast as far as Barcelona, and finally the powerful Ilergetes, whom Ptolemy describes as reaching to Ilerda. If Livy is right, Scipio may have pushed on to attack first the chief tribe that had revolted, without waiting to chastise the rest till his return. Cf. Hübner, Hermes, i. 93.

§ 10. minus quattuor. For the omission of quam cf. Lucr. iv. 415, digitum non amplior unum, and Verg. Ecl. iii. 105, tres pateat cali spatium non amplius ulnas.

pluteos. The pl. was a sort of semicircular hurdle covered with skins, and moved on three castors, as a screen to the besieging engineers. Veget. iv. 15, plutei qui ad similitudinem absidis contexuntur et vimine et ciliciis vel coriis proteguntur, ternisque rotulis, quorum una in medio, duas in capitibus apponuntur,...admoventur.

тutamentum. A very rare word.

c. lxii. For general information on the subject of this chapter, and explanation of the technical terms, see the Ex cursus on the Roman Religion. The list of portents recounted here, and in the next book of Livy, are doubtless extracted directly, or through the Annalists from the records of the collegium pontificum. They may seem ludicrous to a modern reader, but it would be rash to assume, as has been lately suggested, that they were intended by Livy to stir any feeling of ridicule or disbelief. It was enough for his purpose to poutray the boding fears, and the readiness to listen to such stories; elsewhere he speaks of the negligetia qua nihil deos portendere nunc credunt, yet Dion Cassius, one of the devoutest of historians, inserts like lists centuries later.

§ 2. foro olitorio. The herb market was between the Capitoline hill and the Tiber; the temple of Spes just beyond the porta Carmentalis was twice burnt down and restored.

triumphum clam. The common cry was Io triumphhe, probably here referred to. Cf. xxiv. 10. 4, infantem in utero matris Io triumphhe clamasse. Hor. Carm. iv. 2. 50. Triumphus is a Latinized form of ὑπιαμβός.

P. 69, § 3. f. boario. Between the Circus Maximus and the Tiber, one of the most crowded thoroughfares in Rome.

§ 4. Lanuvii. Amiternino... Only those portents were regarded as of state concern, the scene of which was ager Romanus. The spaces specified in this chapter, and xxii. 1, ranked by this time as Roman territory.

in adem Iunonis, i.e. of Juno Sospita xxii. 1. 17, whose great temple is often mentioned, and was restored as late as the Antonines.

§ 5. hominum specie. A modal abl. with visos, though in sense it forms the subject, and visos is the predicate. We feel in sentences like these the want of a Latin partic. like the Greek ὅρτας to define the subject. Cf. iii. 57. 9, non juniores modo sed etiam (ol) emeritis stipendiiis (ὅρτας).

Cære, now Cervetri (Cære vetus), often mentioned as the scene of prodigies. Its religious associations with Rome were of early date, and are connected with the story of the Vestal Virgins taking refuge there from the Gauls. Festus' derivation of cæremonia from it, fanciful as it is, points in the same direction.

sortes extenuatas. The sortes which thus 'shrank' were slips of wood, on which proverbial phrases were written in archaic letters, and from which one or more were drawn at random when advice or guidance might be needed; cf. Cic. de divin. ii. 41. 69. The most famous were at Praeneste, in the temple of Fortuna, but in the 1st Punic war a consul, who wished to consult them, was sternly forbidden by the senate. In the Corpus Inscr. Lat. i. 267 are copies of a number which came probably from Patavium (Padua). They are oblong plates of bronze, with a little hook by which they were strung together, whence their derivation, sortes a serie et serendo, ut fors a ferendo, mons ab eminendo, fons a finendo, pons a petendo. Hence the portent unam excidisse, xxii. 1. 11. As to the shrinking, cf. the story in Pliny, 34. 38, of the 'lucky' farthing in the family of the Servilii, which grew larger and smaller to portend good and ill luck. Cf. also the story in Herodotus viii. 137 of the portentous loaves of the young Perdiccas which used to grow to double the natural size.

§ 6. decemviri, i.e. sacris faciundis. These since 367 B.C. had taken the place of the uviri who had special charge of the libri Sibyllini. In later days these books were under the care of the xviri. Cf. Hor. Carm. Sæc. 69, quindecim Diana preces virorum | curat. Vergil makes Æneas promise the Cumæan Sibyl to have her oracles thus cared for, Æn. vi. 72, Hic ego nunque tuas sortes arcanaque fata | dicta meæ genti ponam, lectosque sacrab | alma viros.

§ 7. quibus editum est. 'To whom they were enjoined (by the sacred books) to offer them.' Edere is the usual term for such oracular warnings.

§ 8. pondo. The old abl. was added to the amount specified as libra pondo, uncia pondo, a pound or ounce by weight, and afterwards used absolutely as here, the libris being omitted. By a further license aurí pondo becomes a nomin. for 'a quantity of gold.' Cf. xxvi. 14. 8, aurí pondo duo millia septuaginta fuit.

Junoni in Avent. The temple of Juno Regina of Veii was dedicated by Camillus, v. 22. When her t. was struck with lightning the matrons, as here, made a collection to present an offering, and virgins sang a processional hymn. xxvii. 37. 7.

§ 9. lectisternium iuventuti. The common reading is Inuentati, 'for the genius of youth,' but as Madvig points out the words deinde universo pop. imply that some charge on a special order has been already mentioned. Yet he doubtfully accepts the change, as a lectisternium was a priestly ceremony, though xxii. 1. 20 senatores straverunt. Lectisternia were first introduced B.C. 399, cf. Servius ad Verg. G. iii. 533, pulvinaria pro templis ponimus, cum sint propriæ lectuli, qui sterni in templis consuerunt. Hor. Carm. i. 37. 2, nunc Saliiaribus | ornare pulvinar deorum | tempus erat dapibus, Sodales.

ad ædem Herculis. This, with the Ara Maxima, was probably at the W. corner of the Circus Maximus and was connected with the story of Hercules and Cacus as given by Vergil. The statue of Herc. in bronze now in the Capitol was found there.

Genio, i.e. populi Romani, or the guardian Spirit of the city, mentioned here for the first time. It was however one of the oldest beliefs in Italy that every family or guild or social union had its divine patron, to whom honour must be paid. The Lares, Manes, Penates, belonging to the worship of ancestral spirits, correspond to various sides of the same thought. The first beginning of the Cæsar worship of the Empire may be traced to the time when Augustus placed the bust of his own Genius beside those of the Lares in the numerous chapels of the city.

§ 10. si. ‘In the event that.’ Cf. xxx. 27. 7, vooverat si per quinquennium res publica codem statu fuisset.

c. lxii. § 1, designatorum. So called between the elections and the ides of March when they formally took office.

legiones ..sorte. This was unusual. The senate usually disposed of the legions; the consuls drew lots for their provinciae.

edictum. The proper term for a proclamation formally put out by a magistrate on his own authority, as distinguished from a lex, or plebiscitum, of the Comitia, or a senatus consultum.

edictum et lit. is a hendiadys for edictum per litteras.

P. 70, § 2. quæ tribunus plebis. Specially referring to the agrarian law of 232 B.C. assigning land in Picenum to Roman colonists, which provoked the rising of the Gauls, and was called by Polyb., ii. 21, ‘the beginning of the decline of the Roman constitution,’ probably because of the high-handed way in which the sentiments of the senate were ignored. C Flamininus was consul 223, and led the legions across the Po to attack the Insubres. Polyb. ii. 32 accuses him of bad strategy, though the Gauls were routed. Meantime the senate mistrusting his rashness, or alarmed by omens, sent to recall him, on the ground of the sentence of the augurs consules vitiò creatos. Fl. would not open the despatches till the battle was over, and refused to abdicate. On his return the senate would not allow him a public triumph, but he entered the city in triumphal procession despite their refusal.

abrogabatur. Cf. note on xxii. 25. 10.

§ 3. novam 1. ‘Unprecedented.’
adverso sen. 'In the teeth of the senate;' though the sanction of the senate was not constitutionally necessary, it was scarcely ever ignored.

§ 4. ad fructus, i.e. for the stowage of the produce of their own estates as distinct from speculative ventures in foreign trade. Cf. Cic. Rosc. Am. § 88, quod stum nosset nullum, fructum autem cum solem, quem labore perisset.

indecorsi visus. Patribus to be taken with ind. not visus. This law may have been popular (r. favorem apud plebem) with the people generally, from the barbarous prejudice against trade which had been so largely shared by the old races of the West, and which made it seem discreditable to the governing classes. The immediate cause may have been to prevent the ruling families from abusing their power in the provinces to enrich themselves and their friends by commercial speculations, supported by all the powers of the government. The prohibition therefore extended to the sons of the senators, or to the class as a whole. But it was also popular with the middle class, which thus escaped the competition of the wealthiest families in speculation. The law was at once a cause, and an effect of the growing power of a moneyed aristocracy, which was afterwards known as the ordo equester. Cicero afterwards speaks of this regulation as obsolete, Verr. v. 18. 45, antiquae sunt istae leges et mortuæ quæ vetant (adificare navem senatorem).

§ 5. auspiciis eement. Cf. x. 40. 4, Pullarius auspicium mentiri ausus. The whole system of auspicia had been so grossly abused for political objects, that statesmen ceased to regard it as anything but an engine of statecraft.

Latin. feriarum. This ancient festival dated from the days when Rome was a member of the Latin league, and the highest magistrates of the various tenuus (ἀπασα ἣ σωμαξία, Strabo) went in solemn procession to the temple of Jupiter Latarius on the Alban mount. This was kept up for ages, and more days were added to commemorate the reconciliation of Plebs and Patres. The consuls were expected to offer the sacrifices, and one of their first duties was concepere fer. Lat., or to fix a time for the great festival.

consularibus impedim. 'Hindrances thrown in the consul's way,' like dictatoria invidia, xxii. 26. 4.

§ 7. inauspicato. It was held to be the duty of the general on the day of his leaving Rome for the wars to go up to the Capitol to take the auspices at daybreak. After the votorum nunucupatio he put on the short purple paludamentum (otherwise sagum or chlamys), and was escorted by his friends beyond the gates. Ad bellum cum exit imperator ac lictores mutarunt vestem et signa incinerunt paludatus dicitur proficisci, Varro, l. l. 7. 37.

cons. pretororum (sc. Deorum a. hom.). The reading of Gronovius for conscientias pretorum of MSS.

votorum nunc. One of the first ceremonies on the day of taking office (die initi mag.) was to go to the Capitol with kinsmen and friends, to sit upon the curule chair, and thank Jupiter opt. max. for the mercies of the past year, offering the victims promised by the out-going consuls, and vows others for the year to follow (vot. nuncupatio). They then presided over a meeting of the senate on the Capitol, treating chiefly de solenni religione. Polyb. says nothing of this conduct of Flamininus, nor does Appian. It reads like an after-thought, coloured by patrician prejudices, to account for the disaster which followed.

§ 9. clam furtim. A pleonasm, like forte temere, and other repetitions used by Livy.

§ 10. Romae mag. init. Though irregular, this was not invalid. Augustus, careful as he was of constitutional forms, did not observe the rule. Sueton. 26, nec omnes (consulatus) Romae sed quartum consulatum in Asia, quintum insula Samo, octavum et nonum Tarraconae inii.

§ 12. nihil magnis... The constitution gave the senate no power to dictate to the consuls, though the executive officials rarely ventured to set at nought the authority of so august a body. Flamininus was anticipating the policy of the Gracchi in trying to humble the senate, and depend on popular support.

moverunt...moverant. The Latin ear seems to have liked such repetitions of the same word, as they frequently occur.

§ 13. immolandi el, &c. A frequent omen of ill-luck. Cf. a like case of J. Cæsar, Sueton. 59, licet immolandi aufugisset hostia profectionem...non distulerit.

§ 14. in omen acc. For the use of the preposition, cf. Cic. ad Att. xv. 11, beneficium accipisse in contumeliam.
§ 15. Sempronio. He had wintered at Luca, c. 59. The legions had probably remained at Placentia, and were then in obedience to the edict, § 1, marched to Ariminum, to be immediately led through a little frequented pass of the Apennines (tramites) into Etruria. Had they been with Sempronius at Luca, it would have been a strangely roundabout course. But the whole is confused. Livy seems to have forgotten that Sempronius was not at Placentia.

C. Atilius was at Tannetum, 26. 2, and at Rome, 62. 10. He may have gone to the Po to take command of Scipio's legions. Appian, i. 8. 3, represents Servilius in command on the Po.

Exercitus is not the proper subject to which the abl. abs. acceptis refers. Probably the sentence points to a close, like exercitum ducere capit.
BOOK XXII.

c. i. § 2. pro eo, ut... A clumsy equivalent for the Greek ἀντὶ τοῦ...φέρειν. Fabri compares viii. 14. 2, cum eo, ut addes...lucusque...communis esset, iv. 56. 1, in eo ut, &c.

raperent agerentque. A common phrase for 'plundering,' to include furniture and cattle, otherwise expressed by ferre agere, portare agere, Greek φέρειν καὶ ἀγεῖν. Hence used metaphorically iii. 37. 6, ferre agere plebeum plebisque res.

§ 3. ipsorum inter se. 'Was saved by their mutual treachery, as they disclosed their conspiracy, &c.' On this use of inter se, cf. xxii. 39. 9, auxerant inter se opinionem.

tegumenta cap. Polyb. gives a more minute account of the false wigs which he wore to disguise his age and features. Hannibal may have remembered the death of his brother-in-law Hasdrubal, xxi. 2. 5, or have wished to explore the temper of his army.

errore. 'Uncertainty.' Cf. i. 24. 2, nominum error, ii. 21. 5, errores temporum.

§ 5. quod illi iustum imperium. This probably refers especially to the neglect of Flamininus to apply in person for the lex curiata, commonly called de imperio, by which the people as represented by the curies, or their lictors, bound themselves to obey the already elected magistrate. It was something like the oath of obedience (sacramentum) which the soldiers took to their general, or the form of 'doing homage' in later days. It conferred no new powers, but was thought constitutionally necessary, especially for military duties, holding the Comitia Centuriata, or for judicial functions. Cic. de leg. agr. ii. 12. 30, consulis, si legem curiatam non habet, attingere rem militarem non licet. It does not seem as if any other than the head of the executive concerned could bring forward the lex curiata, though in that case Camillus must have dispensed with it when Rome was occupied by the Gauls, like Flamininus in the present case. In later days it seems to have been argued that a law of Sulla allowed the consuls to dispense with the formality in certain cases, Cic. ad fam. i. 9. 25, legem curiatam consuli ferri opus esse, necesse non esse: se quoniam ex senatus consulto provi-ciam haberet, lege Cornelia imperium habiturum.

§ 6. id. i.e. auspiciurn, or sanction of heaven. The idea was that the will of the Gods should be consulted in every important detail of national life, and that it was declared by signs, ex caelo, ex avibus, ex tripudiis, ex animalibus, or ex diris.

P. 73, § 7. externo solo. For national auspices the place of observation, or templum, must be on national soil.

consipere. On this use cf. v. 17. 2, Latinas sacrumque in monte Albano non rite concepisse, hence the feriae con-ceptiae.

Of the prodigies mentioned here, and in xxi. 62, many were to note the contrast between the derivations of the Greek entirely the creations of a morbid imagination, others were names, with their associations of 'honour,' 'glory,' 'demus,'
only distorted versions of natural phenomena misunderstood, &c., and the humbler origin of the Roman family names, such as in the fall of meteoric stones, or in red water tinged by the Scipio (stick), Kæso (the hard hitter), Fabius (bean), Len-soil through which it flowed. Some were monstrosities of tulus (pulse), Naso (nose), Piso (pea), Cicero (vetch). In nature, as in the cases of strange births. Some like thunder-reference to the Scipiaides bellî fulmen used by Lucretius and storms, with the accompaniments of danger, were only noted Vergil, as also to the phrase duo fulmina applied by Cicero when men's minds were ill at rest.
(pro Balbo, 34), to the two Cn. and P. who met a disastrous § 8. scipionem. Connected with σκήπτρον. It is curious end in Spain, Mr Munro observes, 'When we think of Scipio,
to note the contrast between the derivations of the Greek scapus, shaft, σκιπων, σκήπτρον, and then σκηπτός, σκήπτω, we
names, with their associations of 'honour,' 'glory,' 'demus,' might be tempted to think that the Scipios loved to refer their &c., and the humbler origin of the Roman family names, such name to it rather than to the more homely staff.' (Note on as Scipio (stick), Kæso (the hard hitter), Fabius (bean), Len-Lucr. iii. 1034).
tulus (pulse), Naso (nose), Piso (pea), Cicero (vetch). In reference to the Scipiaides bellî fulmen used by Lucretius and Vergil, as also to the phrase duo fulmina applied by Cicero
(pro Balbo, 34), to the two Cn. and P. who met a disastrous § 10. interdiu. Plautus has the form interdius, as he end in Spain, Mr Munro observes, 'When we think of Scipio, has dius for diu in quam dius vivo. Corssen i. 290 connects scapus, shaft, σκιπων, σκήπτρον, and then σκηπτός, σκήπτω, we interdius and diurnus, like dies hodiernus with the Sanscr.
might be tempted to think that the Scipios loved to refer their divas, and regards interdiu, not as an ablative, but as a neuter name to it rather than to the more homely staff.' (Note on accusative form, the s having dropped off, in this respect Lucr. iii. 1034).
like postea, antea, interea, all of which he regards as acc.
cf. ii. 455.
forms. Cf. ii. 455.

C. L.
§ 11. Mavors. The Italian Mars was the god of Spring, which began in the month of March, and with it the hopes of husbandry. His name connected with marmor, mare, Mars, Marius, is thought to mean ‘bright,’ and the 12 Salii with their orb-shaped anelia to represent the months and moons. Only secondarily was this Mars connected with War, as in spring time the men mustered in the Campus Martius and sallied out on their campaigns, but under Hellenic influence the attributes of Ἄπης were transferred to Mars. Mavors seems to be a distinct name, more warlike in its sense, and Corssen connects the first syllable with μάχη μάχαιρα magnum, and the second with vortere, Vortumnus, &c., i. 410.

§ 12. signum Martis. The temple of Mars was, with the Clivus Martis, on the Appian way, just outside the Porta S. Sebastiano. The sacred spears of Mars were kept however in the Regia.

P. 74, § 18. Feroniae. The aedes or lucus Feroniae, in Agro Capenate, near Mount Soracte, is often spoken of by Livy, and was distinct from the temple of Feronia, which Horace passed on his way to Tarracina. It was famous for its great fair (i. 30. 4, mercatu frequenti, and slaves when freed took the cap of liberty at its altars. Servius ap. Verg. Æn. vii. 800, viii. 564. Dionysius iii. 32 says the Greeks translated the name by ἀνθριφόρος φιλοστέφανος. Feronia was a goddess of spring and flowers and love. Preller, Röm. Myth. 376.

§ 19. aedem Saturni. This was at the foot of the Clivus Capitolinus, and the hill above went in old days by the name of Saturnius, from the god of Italian husbandry. The temple was long used as the State treasury and record office. Cf. ii. 21. 2, Saturnalia institutus festus dies.

c. ii. § 1. dlectu. Note the form of the dative, as 11. 5, exercitu. Fabri compares vii. 2. 6, Fescennino versus similem, iv. 12. 8, quod usu menstruo supereset.

ex hibernis. In Liguria, xxii. 59. 10. The movements of the Roman troops since the battle of the Trebia are not clear. Some legions had wintered at Placentia, others with Sempronius at Luca, though we are not told why H. allowed them to divide their forces unmolested. The former division was ordered by Flaminius to meet at Ariminum, and he is also said to have taken the command at the same place, inde, xxii. 63. 15, of the force of Sempronius which had wintered at Luca, and with both to have marched into Etruria to cover Arretium. But when the campaign opens Cn. Servilius is posted near Ariminum, xxii. 9, and is not in time to join his colleague before the battle of Trasimene.
Arretium. A position of great importance as commanding the valley of the Arno and the passes of the Apennines, and thus covering Rome from attack on either side. But the scouts should have ascertained the route of H. in time for Servilius to have marched to join his colleague, and then the R. lines should have been extended from Cortona to Clusium.

§ 2. aliquid longius. Several other routes were possible and longer, but most of the passes across the Western mountains converged on Luna (the gulf of Spezzia), or on Luca, both of which had been probably fortified and garrisoned by Sempronius, and behind them on the coast road to Rome lay the strongly intrenched town of Pisa. H. seems therefore to have chosen the shorter pass by Pistoria and the valley of the Arno, by what was afterwards the Via Cassia from Florentia to Arretium. The easier course by the Æmilian and Flaminian ways was avoided from the proximity of the Roman armies, or from the wish to relieve at once the country of the Gauls. Possibly the marshes of the Arno were then more widely extended, or the inundations of the Arno greater, as the time spent seems strangely long; but the fall in the valley is very slight, and the inundations caused by the overflow of the Arno and its tributaries are still formidable.

§ 3. admixtis imped. H. was not concerned usually, says Polyb. iii. 79, about his baggage, except in so far as the commissariat of the army was concerned. He made war support war.

necubi, for ne-cubi (as in ubi-cubi, ali-cubi, nun-cubi, si-cubi) like necunde in 23. 10, for ne-cunde. The cu is from the pronominal root ka=quo. In other words nec=non, as in nec opinatus, neglegere, negotium (nec-otium).

cohibentem=cohibendi causa, an imitation of a Greck idiom, cf. use of circumspectans 23. 10.

§ 5. qua modo. 'Wherever'...to the modo answers the tamen, implying their readiness to go anywhere, if only the guides would lead the way. Cf. xxvii. 14. 10, pro se quisque miles, qui modo assequi...poterat.

profundas. 'Almost bottomless,' because they found only mud below.

immergentesque. 'Taking to swimming.'

P. 75, § 8. in sicco. For this local use of abl. neut. abs. cf. in aperto, in arto, in summo, in Hernico, ex propinquo, which with others are used by Livy.

The insertion of aut seems necessary to distinguish two distinct classes. (Madvig.)
§ 9. tantum, quod. ‘Furnished a bare resting-place for those who sought only some dry spot above the water.’

§ 10. primum. The apodosis comes in et quia.

§ 11. alt. oculo.

c. iii. § 1. circa Arretii mœnia. This position was excellently chosen to watch the movements of Hannibal whose easiest road to Rome lay through Umbria by the Via Flaminia, which had been made a few years before by C. Flaminius. If communications were kept up between the two consuls at Arretium and Ariminum they might hope to combine the forces when the route of the invaders was discovered. Precisely the same arrangements had been made to cover Rome in the Gallic war of 223 n.c. But like the Gauls, H. took a Western pass, and marched by the Roman forces at Arretium, which then followed in pursuit, and were routed before the other army could arrive upon the scene.

§ 2. in rem. ‘To his purpose.’ Cf. 29. 8.

§ 3. inter. Fabri remarks that it is in Tacitus that we find most examples of this position of inter between its two cases.

§ 4. non modo legum... Livy reproduces here without misgiving the patrician prejudices of his authorities, and Polyb., alien as he was, does the same, enlarging upon the duty of the general to ascertain the bias of his rival, as H. did in this case.

P. 76. metuens has the constr. of an adj. not of a partic. So metuens futuri, Hor., metuens virgae, Juv.

§ 6. læva is here inexplicable. If H. moved towards Fæsula, he must have had the N. at Arretium on his right. Hence it would be better to read a Fæsulis petens medios Etr. agros (W.). But it is quite possible that it was a blunder of Livy himself, and not of his editors. Hannibal was moving southwards, and swept round the Trasimene lake to entrap Flaminius, who was marching after him.

§ 7. Flaminius, qui... It is hazardous to impute misstatements to ancient writers in cases where we have no other evidence at hand, but it seems most probable that this part of the history is disfigured by the aristocratic prejudices of the Annalists who threw the blame of the disaster of Lake Trasimene on the rashness of Flaminius. Yet he must have heard some days before of the march of Hannibal, and sent news to his colleague who was hurrying up to bar the way to Rome. Had he wished to force a battle sooner, he could certainly have done so in the valley of the Arno. When H. marched towards Rome, he could hardly fail to follow, as the course of Servilius naturally lay through Umbria, and he was not strong enough to face the invader single-handed on the Flaminian way. The distance between Arretium and the Lake Trasimene is not great, and Flamininus may perhaps have moved first towards Clusium to strengthen the defences on the Via Cassia, and then pushed eastward in the track of H., to keep his communications open with his colleague. He naturally hoped to effect a speedy junction, and to crush H. with their united forces, as the Gauls had been in like case defeated a few years before at Telamon. No fault in strategy can be proved up to the eve of the battle, when he allowed himself to be ensnared. Cf. Append. on the Character of Flamininus.

§ 8. ceteris. The officers of the staff assembled in the council of war.

§ 9. signum. This was given with the tuba for the march. pugnæque only implies that the signal to march was taken as a determination to fight. The actual sign in the latter case was a red flag on the prætorium.

§ 10. Camillum ab Veis. Cf. v. 46. Rome was then in the hands of the Gauls.

§ 11. effudit. 'Threw.' So x. 11. 1, equo effusus.

§ 12. signum is the general term, including the vexillum, or small flag with a cross pole, as well as the image or insigne carried on a staff.

P. 77, § 13. Num litteras q. Referring not only to the legatio of xx. 63. 12, but to the experience of his former consulship.

§ 14. primoribus. An unusual term for officers. Here probably it refers more to civil than military eminence.

in vulgus. 'Commonly.'

c. iv. § 1. Trasumennus. Connected by Corssen i. 246 with trans, terminus, τέρμος, as 'that on the other side.' Polyb. calls it Ταραμένη Χιμή, and it is often spelt Trasumenus, as we read Porsena and Porsenna. The Etruscan names Vibenna, Sisenna, &c., support the double n of the best MSS., and Quintilian Inst. i. 5. 13 says Tharsomenum pro Trasumenno multi auctores...vindicaverunt.
NOTES. XXII. c. iv. §§ 2—6.

§ 2. nata insidiis. Cf. 44. 4, locis natis ad equestrem pugnam, ix. 2. 5, ita natus locus est.

maxime subit. 'Comes very close under.'

Via perangusta. The road from Cortona to Perugia, as it passes through the Northern side of the Trasimene lake, rises at the Western end over M. Gualandro, and then enters a pass from ½ to 1½ miles in breadth, bounded by mountains on the North, and the sea on the South, till it emerges after some miles at Passignano. About half way, the mountain ground presses forward to the lake, where the village at Tuoro stands (inde colles insurgunt), and here was the camp of Hannibal. Polybius, iii. 83, describes the scene more fully than Livy, but his account corresponds to the position of the Roman vanguard as it faced the enemy posted in front at Tuoro on kατὰ τὴν ἀντικροὺ λόφον ἐπικείμενον ἐρυμνὸν καὶ δύσβατον, and had the lake in its rear, while there was a continuous range of hills on either side, παρὰ τὰς ἑος μῆκος πλευρᾶς, like the two halves of a crescent divided in the middle by the projecting headland. Probably both historians consulted the same authority, which was based on the account of an eye-witness contemplating from a Roman point of view the central position of Hannibal, and seeing his cavalry charging on the left on the rearguard, and forcing the whole column forward into the pass.

industria. From indo, old form of in, and struere, so connected with instruere. Corssen, ii. 190.

§ 4. pridie. Seems a pleonasm with postero die in the next line.

inexplorato. Notice the many abl. constr. in this passage. They are especially frequent in Livy.

pandi. 'Deploy.'

deceptæ ins. 'The trap was closed,' so the MSS. read. But there is no authority for this use of the word, nor is there much for the suggestion of Lipsius, deceperæ, for decipere is not = λανθάνειν, to escape notice, though we may quote Hor. Sat. i. 3. 39, amatorem quod amicæ | turpia decipiunt cæcum vitia. Madvig suggests acceptæ, and the more probable receptæ, (= withdrawn), but does not venture to change the text. We may note here again, as xxii. 62. 5, the want in Latin of article, and partic. of subst. verb to connect ab tergo (aī...ovsai) with insidiæ.

§ 5. clausum habuit. Cf. xxi. 5. 3, fessum habebat, &c.

P. 78, § 6. conspecta. 'Visible.' The past partic. for a gerundive or verbal adj. Cf. ii. 55. 3, nihil contentius lictoribus, si sint qui contemnunt. Sall. Jug. 76. 1, rex nihiliam
NOTES. XXII. c. iv. § 6—c. vi. § 3. 247

infectum Metello credens. Livy xxix. 18. 8, saerilegas admovere manus intactis illis thesaurus. So inaccessus, incorruptus, &c., Nagelsbach 72. b.

c. v. § 1. satis, ut. A somewhat grudging recognition of the bravery of Flamininius.

in re trepida. 'A state of panic.' Cf. i. 27. 10, Tullus in re trepida duodecim votit Salios.

§ 4. strepetium pav. This use of the gen. plur. of the partic, where we should put abstract substantives 'triumph and panic,' is of frequent occurrence in Livy. Cf. 17. 5, flammas spirantum miraculo, xxix. 22. 7, fremitus indignantium. Nagelsbach § 29. 2.

§ 6. impetum capere is a frequent phrase in Livy. Cf. ii. 65. 8, viii. 30. 4.

P. 79, § 7. per principes. In the old form of organizing the legion the hastati formed the 1st line, the principes the 2nd, as Livy describes at length, viii. 8. The order is here confused, as Livy is here writing probably from memory, without documents, of a state of things which had passed away.

antesignani. Men of the front line, whose signa manipulorum were carried in the rear in battle, though in the van when on the march. Thus Livy viii. 11. 4, stragem et ante signa et post signa factam.

cohorte. This is an unusual expression. After the time of Marius probably the old formation of the legion was superseded by that into 10 cohorts, but at this time the term was only employed of the prætoria cohors, or body-guard of the general, and of the contingents of the allies. It is probably used by Livy carelessly.

§ 8. motum terræ. The authority of Cælius is specially referred to for this by Cicero, div. i. 35, and it was probably from him that Livy copied it.

c. vi. § 2. Eum et seems to require another sentence of like form to follow, but the constr. suddenly changes.

robora vir. Cf. xxxi. 54. 3.

§ 3. nescitans. One of the frequentatives often used by our author, though in this case seemingly less appropriate.

legiones. Livy commonly applies to other people the distinctive terms of the Roman civil and military systems. For the facts of the war referred to cf. Polyb. ii. 32, and note on Livy xxii. 62. 2.
§ 4. infesto venienti. These words are perhaps introduced, as Nägelsbach suggests, to avoid the dative form impetus which is scarcely to be found in use.

triarii. The 3rd line of the legion consisting of the stoutest veterans. Cf. Livy's explanation of res ad triarios redit, viii. 8. 11.

P. 80, § 7. immensa ac s. 'Objectless and hopeless.'

§ 8. eruptione i. f. The further end of the pass was only beset by the slingers and light-armed troops, 4. 3, and it was here easier for the head of the column to break out.

caligine. Connected with callim (the old form of clam. Festus) καλόπτω, supercilium, celare, occulto, from root kal 'cover.' Corssen i. 460.

§ 9. Inclinata d. r. 'When the battle was decided.'

§ 11. cetera extrema. Cf. confragosa omnia, xxi. 32. 9.

§ 12. Punica relig. Cf. xxi. 4. 9. H. decided that Maharbal had no authority to grant such terms, as the Romans had done in the case of Lutatius. Polyb. iii. 85.

omnes. Polyb. tells us that the Italian allies were treated with marked courtesy, in the hope that they would revolt from Rome. Cf. 7. 5.

c. vii. § 1. memorata. Probably in the sense of memoria-bilis, as xxi. 44. 4, pugnae memorabilis inter paucas, i.e. 'memorable as few have been.' Cf. note on 4. 6.

§ 2. Quindecim millia... The local names of Ossaia (ossa) and Sanguinetto have been thought to point to traditions of this slaughter, but they are most likely of later origin, and if derived from incidents of battle, date from the middle ages.

§ 3. Multiplex. 'Many times as large.' So often in Livy.

§ 4. auctum ex vano. 'Idle exaggeration.' The suggestion of Madvig makes better sense than the reading of the MSS. haustum ex v., which is not a natural expression, nor applicable to the evidence of earlier writers. For ex vano cf. xxvii. 26. 1, nec spem nec metum ex vano habet. So xxi. 32. 10, ex aperto, v. 33. 8, ex antiquo, i. 43. 10, ex publico.

Fabium. See Introduction on the Authorities of the 2nd P. war. Livy need not have consulted Fabius at first hand.
NOTES. XXII. c. vii. § 7—c. viii. § 3. 249

P. 81, § 7. repens qualifies allata, as in 8. 1 it does nun-tiatur. Cf. 12. 7, occultus subsistebat.

frequentis contionis. 'A crowded assembly,' such as could be convened only by a magistrate who had the jus agere cum populo.

comitium et c. i.e. they flocked to the Curia Hostilia where the senate was deliberating, calling for a magistrate to come out to address them from the comitium, where the higher officials usually harangued them.

M. Pomponius was Prætor peregrinus, for M. Æmilius was Prætor Urb. Cf. 33. 8. It is strange that the latter did not come forward as he was present. Cf. § 14.

§ 10. Quot casus. i.e. the alternatives just referred to.

P. 82, c. viii. § 1. quattuor millia eq. Polyb. iii. 86 describes more fully the despatch of the cavalry under Centenius, while Servilius was on the march with the legions. H. hearing of their approach sent Maharbal to attack them, and he first routed the body, and then after a hot pursuit captured the survivors. Probably the horses were exhausted by the forced march, and the light troops of the enemy had cut off their retreat by moving along the cross roads. Appian speaks of the disaster as happening εἰς τὸν Πλειστίνων λίμνην, which like some others in Italy has since wholly disappeared, but several traces of the name, such as Val di Pistia, may be found in the pass from Camerino to Ancona, and an old inscription testifies to a town called Plistia. Cf. Nissen in Rhein. Mus. 1865, p. 224. The large force under Centenius points to an increase of the cavalry, probably to compete with that of Hannibal.

C. Centenio proprætore. The full title was legatus proprætore, for the delegate of a consul was not called pro consule but p. p. Appian speaks of him as τινὰ τῶν ἐπιφανῶν ἰδιωτῶν, and as sent from Rome.

in Umbria. i.e. on their way from Ariminum, where Servilius had been watching the Gauls.

§ 3. causa. For this sense of 'malady' Fabri compares xxx. 44. 6, prævalida corpora ab externis causis tuta videntur.

magis...gravior. The repetition of the comparative is a pleonasm to be accounted for by the balance of levis and gravior, as well as affecto and valido.
§ 4. extenuatis. A substantive, like 'exhaustion,' is implied in this word to balance magnitudine. Cf. xx. i. 5, Sicilia S. amissae.

dictatorem dic. The dictator was appointed probably at first in times of urgent danger, when a general-in-chief was needed who would not be controlled by the rivalry of a colleague, or the veto of a tribune. To this we may refer the limit of the six months' tenure of office, the early name of magister populi, or leader of the army (cf. Herzog, populari,) with the subordinate magister equitum, and the fact that the appointment in times of civil struggle was regarded as a proclamation of state of siege, or martial law, though in later days dictators, no longer optima jure, were subject to the veto of the tribune. The comitia had commonly no power of election; the senate by virtue of their general authority commonly decided on the step, but the appointment (dicere) formally rested with a consul, who by lot or arrangement with his colleague rose at the dead of night, within the boundaries of Roman ager, and named the temporary head of the executive. The latter name was probably, as Mommsen thinks, borrowed by analogy from the dictators of the Latin towns, who had succeeded to the position of the King.

nec dict. populo (non consulto senatus). The Puteanus has populo only, other MSS. populis. An early critic changed this to prector, as inconsistent with what immediately follows. Madvig prefers to think that words have dropped out as in other places in this book, but the correction seems a bold one. There can be little doubt however that he is right in rejecting prodicatorem, which some editors read on the ground that Livy adopts the view that Fabius was only prodict. (31. 8), for (1) the form prodictatore would have been used, as the phrase was too uncommon to become a substantive like proconsul, (2) the later passage looks like an after-thought of criticism, quite consistent with a different view in this passage. It is probable that a prector must have presided at the Comitia, and declared the dictator elected, and J. Cesar acted on this precedent in B.c. 48, though it was regarded as irregular. Cf. C.e. ad. Att. 9. 15. 3, volat consules roget prector vel dictatorem dicit, quorum neutrum jus est, sed si Sulla potuit efficere ab interrege ut dictator dicetur, cur hic non possit. Mommsen arbitrarily decides to strike this clause out of the text. Cf. C. I. L. r. p. 288.

§ 6. quod numquam... Refers to the clause that follows.

Q. Fabium Maximum. Polyb. iii. 87 says that descendants of his house still bore the cognomen dia τὰς ἐκείουν τὰνδρός ἐπι-
NOTES. XXII. c. viii. § 6—c. ix. § 5. 251

τυχεῖς καὶ πρᾶξ&eupsilon;. But Perizonius suggested that this may only have meant that a later age connected the epithet with this Fabius, though it had been borne by his ancestors, as Polybius must have known. Livy ix. 46. 7 accounts for the origin of the name by the statesmanship of one who quod tot victorius non pepererat, haec ordinum temperatone pararet.

The Magister equitum was subordinate, both as magistrate and officer, to the dictator, who commonly appointed him, without any formal restriction on his choice. The office was anomalous, as there was no single commander of the cavalry, but a variety of praefecti, and in historical days the magister equitum served at the head of the legions under the dictator, or replaced him in his absence. But the name probably points to the early days when the two consuls led the foot and horse alternately, and the chief change in appointing a magister populi was to make him tower above the colleague whom he himself nominated.

P. 83, § 7. dimicandum esse. The infin. expresses the conviction which was the ground of the preceding measures.

c. ix. § 1. Spoletium. A Latin colony (B.C. 241, Vell. Paterc. i. 14) covering the Via Flaminia and Umbria, to which H. turned from the Trasimene lake. He is not likely to have thought of an attack on Rome itself, the population of which largely outnumbered his army, and Polybius says nothing of the attack upon Spoletium.

§ 2. cum magna cede repulsus. One of the gates of Spoleti still bears the name of Porta di Annibale, or Porta Fuga, in memory of this gallant resistance, and on it are the words Annibal Spoleti | Magna suorum cede repulsus | insigni fuga portae nomen fecit. These are of modern date, but in the Guildhall is a mutilated inscription, of which the following words remain. Populus signa vovit.....toribusque dedicavit ......quum Annibal L. Carsulio...

haud maximae minime p. Most editors read haud nimis prospere, for the h. minime p. of the MSS. Madvig rejects this as a frigid litotes, and suggests that maxime had dropped out, after which minime prospere will follow well enough.

moleis. Referring not merely to the size of the city, but to the effort of taking it. Cf. xxi. 22. 9. Verg. Æn. 1. 33, tantæ molis erat, &c.

§ 5. Prætutianum Ha. South of Picenum, and near the Roman colony of Adria, from which the Porto d' Atri takes its name. It is said that Prætutia was corrupted in the middle ages into Aprutium, and that into Abruzzo, the later name of the district. (Cramer's Anc. It. i. 289.) The Marsi, and other tribes mentioned, dwelt further South, and to the East of the Sabine territory; they belonged to the Osco-Sabellian population of Central Italy.

Arpi, in Apulia, was anciently named Argyripa, and connected with traditions of Diomede and Argos, Verg. Æn. xi. 243. Twelve miles to the W. was the R. colony of Luceria (b.c. 313), which was long an object of contention with the Samnites.

§ 6. ad urbem... This march was probably begun as soon as he heard of H. in Etruria, and the 4000 horse under Centenius was only the van of his army, but Livy had neglected to mention this at the right point of his narrative.

§ 7. dictator iterum. Valerius Max., 1. 1, says that Flamininus was his mag. equitum, and this must refer to a former dictatorship. There had been several dictators of late years comitia habendorum causa. The words of Livy, 8. 5, refer only to the dictator of earlier usage rei gerendae causa.

ab diis orsus. Matters of religion were the first discussed in the senate. Cf. Gell. xiv. 7, de rebus divinis prius quam humanis ad senatum referendum esse.

cærimonia is hardly to be derived from Cære ("the Delphi of Italy"). Corssen i. 376 refers it to the root of sīnerus (skir=sunder, or choose). The long æ is a difficulty in the way of Curtius’ derivation from -kar, kri, creare, and the inscriptions and best MSS. spell it cæremonia. For the termination, cf. parsimonia, sanctimonia, aegrimonia, and the men of specimen, or mentum of documentum. 11. 315.

inscitia. 'Bad generalship.'

piacula. Cf. Exeursus on Roman Religion.

§ 8. libros Sibyll. The Sibylline literature was brought to Rome, according to tradition, as early as the period of the Tarquins, and seems to have come from the Greek towns of Asia Minor through their connections in Campania at the time when Hellenic art first made its way to Rome to any great extent. As an early seat of this Sibylline influence was at Gergis in the Troad, we may thus account for the early spread of the legends which connected the Trojan story with the tradition of the foundation of Rome.

§ 11. For derivation of pontifex cf. note on 59. 3.

c. x. Livy seldom gives any specimens of antique style except in the formularies kept in the custody of the priestly colleges. This is almost the only form of monumental evidence which he cared to consult, or at any rate to copy. For the meaning of the ver sacrum and other terms, see the Excursus.

§ 2. duellis. An archaic form for bellis retained in perduellis, as bes stands for dues, and bonus for duonius. The Latum donum of the MSS. would be an awkward pleonasm, and is well corrected by Madvig to tum duit the old subj. Cf. x. 19. 12 the prayer si Hodie victoriam duas. Cf. also adduit, venum duit, from root du; another form of -da, like the forms, credusis, creduit in Plautus. Corssen, n. 402. The transposition of quod duellum, to make it follow immediately hise duellis is due to Lipsius, and makes good sense of what is hopelessly involved in the common reading of the MSS. retained by W.

§ 3. ver. Reckoned by the pontifices as lasting through the months of March and April.

profana. Fanum or (fasnum fr. fas) is the general term for any holy thing or place, and profanum is the contrasted term.

fieri. To be sacrificed to.

ex qua die. The vow though made was not to take effect until the time was specified, and this did not actually take place till the year 195 b.c.

ne fraus esto. The owner shall not be guilty.

clepsit. An old perf. subj. from clepo as faxit from facio.

§ 6. Si atro die f. The atri dies were those associated in memory with some great national disaster as that at Allia or on the Cremera or at Cannae. On them temples were all closed and no sacrifices could be offered, and land and business were at a standstill. Yet even here the pontiffs claimed dispensing power, and when Ti. Coruncanius fixed by an oversight a holiday upon a dies ater, the College ratified his act, collegium decrevit non habendum religioni quin eo die fercia essent (A. Gell. iv. 6. 10).

faxit. The characteristic vowel is dropped frequently in the perf. subj. and ii. fut. ind. of this word, especially in Plautus, Terence, and occasionally in later poets as Verg. Æn. ix. 151, xii. 316. In Livy we find in old formularies defexit f.
234. 9, faxitis vii. 41. 6; so occisit xii. tab., rapsit Cic. Leg. ii. 9. 22, vixet, for conj. plusqu., Verg. Æn. xi. 118, extinxem Æn. iv. 606, confluxet Lucr. i. 987, surrexet Hor. Sat. i. 9. 73, traxe Æn. v. 786. So also such forms as acclarassis Liv. i. 18. 7, habessit Cic. Leg. ii. 8. 19, and many like forms in Plautus. It seems probable that conj. and ii. fut. forms like faxim, faxo are derived from an old perfect form in -si rather than from a reduplicated form in -i.

faxitur is a still more curious form of 2nd. fut. passive for factum erit, like jussitur for jussum erit Cato R. R. 14, turbassitut for turbatus erit Cic. Leg iii. 4. 11, mercassitur for mercatus erit Lex Agrar. C. 200. 71. Cf. Corssen, ii. 565.

antidea, an old form for antea, like postidea for postea, antid being the early form of ante. Cf. the ablative forms marid, navalid, dictareted, &c. found in early inscriptions, as also med, ted, sed, red, found singly or in composition.

P. 85, § 7. ludi magni. This term was afterwards reserved for the extraordinary ludi in distinction to the regular which were called ludi Romani. The sums were voted by the senate, but as they were often inadequate, great expense was constantly incurred by the ediles on whom the arrangements fell, and at the end of the Republic the outlay was often ruinous.

æris. This was probably the æs grave or libral æs, which had been successively reduced in weight to that of a triens in the 1st Punic war, and to the uncia in this year (Q. Fabio dictatore asses unciales facti, Pliny 33. 3. 45), but in laws and state concerns the old monetary system was for a long time retained, and the nummus sestertius was employed as its equivalent in silver. Cf. Mommsen Miinzw. 292 and Weissenborn’s note.

trecentis t. It was a Roman fancy that the odd numbers found favour with the gods of the upper air, while the Manes or the powers of the lower world liked the even best. Thus the fixed holidays, ferice stativae, were nearly all on the odd days of the Calendar.

§ 10. Veneri Erycinae. This deity was probably the Phœnician Astarte, whose worship may be traced (under the name of Aphrodite) in many places where an earlier influence was adopted by the Greeks. Eryx, as we know, was one of the points of Sicily to which the Carthaginians clung most obstinately. Its traditions were in course of time worked into the legends of the Trojan war, its deity confused with the goddess mother of Æneas, whose wanderings are made by Vergil to include a visit to the spot, v. 759, and Rome recognized an appeal based on this supposed connection.

fatalibus. Prophetic of doom (fatum), i.e. Sibylline.

Mentiel. Fabri quotes Cic. Leg. 11, 8, colunto et ollos, quos endo calo merita locaverunt...ast olla propter quae datur ho-mini adscensus in calum, Mentem, Virtutem, Pietatem, Fidem.
Cf. Excursus.

c. xi. § 2. e re publica. 'For the interest of the state.'

§ 3. Is the dat. after edixit which also takes the acc.
diem of the obj. Tibur is the local acc. after ad conveniendum cdiecre. Cf. 22. 1, quo diem ad conveniendum edixerat noris millibus and xxviii. 5. 8, concilium Àitolis Heracleam indiciit.

§ 4. ut...uti. This repetition of ut when the conjunction does not follow closely on the principal verb is of frequent castella. Any strong places in the country, such as there are traces of on so many of the hill-tops in Central Italy. Cf.

the enumeration in the Lex Rubria xxv. quo oppido municipio colonia praefectura foro vico conciliabulo castello territoriove.

P. 86, § 5. The Via Flaminia, which led through Etruria and Umbria to Ariminum, is attributed by Strabo, v. 1. 1, to the Flaminius who was consul b.c. 197, but by Livy, Epit. xx., to his father who fell at Lake Trasimene, while the son constructed the road from Ariminum to Bononia (xxxix. 4).

exercitu. Cf. for this form of the dat. dilectu, 2. 1.

Ocriculum. The first city of Umbria which submitted to viator was a general term for the attendant or apparitor of a Roman magistrate, and the form of the word probably referrred to the duty of travelling through the ager round Rome to summon the senators or others to public meetings. The lictor was a more specialized name is qui ex collegio viatorum

1. Only dictators, consuls, and prætors commonly were thus attended, and the fasces borne by these lictors was a symbol of the jus vitae necisque.

§ 6. vetustate. Cf. 8. 5. It was 32 years since there had been a dict. rei gerenda.

Ostia. Otherwise declined in the 2nd decl. Cf. 37. 1 and mitte Ostia Caesar, Juv. viii. 171.

p. Cosanum. Now the porto d' Ercole. It was a Roman colony, and one of the chief naval stations on the lower sea.
§ 7. ad urbem R. Probably as W. suggests in the dockyards or in course of building.

§ 8. libertini. The slaves of a Roman, when freed, were called his liberti, and passed into the class of libertini. These were by Q. Fabius in 303 B.C. all enrolled in the urbae tribus, where their votes counted for little, but in later days repeated efforts were made by the popular leaders to spread them over the rusticae tribus where they might own land. They could not serve regularly in the legions, for military service was regarded at Rome as the privilege and duty of the free landowners, and it was not until the time of Marius that this sentiment disappeared.

quibus liber. This condition recurs in other cases, as in the privilege allowed to Latini to migrate to Rome and become R. citizens if they left children behind them, and in usages of precedence among magistrates.

aetas militaris. i.e. commonly from the 17th to the 46th year of age.

§ 9. urbano ex. Referring to the lower estimate of the urbae tribus who formed what was called contemptuously forensis factio.

c. xii. § 1. quo diem. Nearly all the MSS. read quodie, a mistake which probably grew out of a failure to see that quo follows conveniendum, as Tibur does in 11. 4.

§ 2. Præneste is explained by Corssen n. 216, as being an old superlative form, as magister or minister are comparatives like λαξιστερος, thus Præneste = 'that which stands forth most prominently,' for præ cf. note below on pristinus. Festus says it was so named quia montibus prestat, and in fact it commands a splendid view of the neighbourhood of Rome.

transversis lim. 'Cross-roads,' as in n. 39 transversis tramitibus and v. 16. 4 obliquis tramitibus in the same sense. It would seem as if trames (trans. meare) were nearly the same as transversus, while limes (for lic-mes, connected with limus, λεχνος, limen, a cross-beam for lintel) comes from the same root as obliquus. Corssen, i. 499.

egressus. W. aptly remarks that the viae were raised as causeways higher than the cross-roads.

exploratis. Corssen connects plorare with pluere pluvia as 'to make to flow' and hence explorare 'to cause to flow out' or 'bring to light,' i. 361.

P. 87, § 4. quos appears in most MSS., but it is obviously corrupt, W. suggests aliquando, Heerwagen antiquos. It seems better to strike it out.
§ 6. novi. This suggestion of Madvig for non vim commends itself as a very slight change with much better sense.

hauddum. Vocabulum hauddum non apud alium inveni scriptorem nisi aliquoties apud Livium, i.e. septem locis. Stürenberg ap. Fabri. It is formed like vixdum, neodum also found in our author.

§ 7. si posset. ‘In the hope that he might,’ ‘to see if he would,’ a sense in which Livy often uses si.

excipere. As of the hunter latitantem fruticeto excipere aprum, Hor. Carm. iii. 12. 11.

§ 9. statio. ‘pickets.’

universo. ‘Staked upon the hazard of a general engagement.’ Cf. casum universae dimicationis 32. 2.

§ 10. parva momenta...‘petty skirmishes of little moment which might be safely risked as there was shelter near at hand.’

pristinis. This word like priscus comes from a longer form of the pri or pra whence primus, privus, &c. Corssen, i. 780.

§ 11. Sed non H....the subordinate phrase sanis consiliis would as Nägelsbach suggests be naturally the subject in translation, ‘his sound judgment found an adversary,’ &c.

nihil...mora. Cf. for this idiom xxi. 45. 9.

premendo. Cf. 59. 10, nec premendo alium me extulisse velim.

pessima ars. ‘pernicious practice.’

c. xiii. § 1. The Hirpini (called Ἱόρνιοι in Strabo, though some Latin inscriptions and MSS. drop the aspirate) were a highland race in the east of Samnium, whose name was said to be derived from the Samnite word ἱρπός = wolf, Serv. Verg. Æn. xi. 785. Several of their towns revolted from Rome after the battle of Cannæ, Liv. xxiii. 1, and 37, and owing to the obstinate wars of the Samnites in old times Hannibal may have looked here for most support.

Beneventum. The old form of this was Maleventum Liv. ix. 27. 7, and the change was probably due to the superstitious feeling which may be traced in the history of names like the Eumenides, the Euxine, and ἑῳπή for night. Compare also the custom of the Romans to call first a citizen of auspicious name in the centuries and tribes.
NOTES. XXII. c. xiii. §§ 1—9.

Teleslam. This was a little north of Beneventum and should probably be read in Pol. iii. 90 instead of Venusia, which was quite off the line of march.

§ 3. res mai. q. a. Note the compression of this phrase 'the enterprise was greater than its authors,' i.e. 'too critical to be undertaken on their authority alone:' it qualifies dubium.

§ 4. etiam atque etiam. Connected by Madvig with monitos, though the MSS. put the ut between. It is possible however to take them with promissa elliptically. Lucretius uses the phrase still more independently as i. 296 Quare etiam atque etiam sunt venti corpora caeca.

aliquibus. Fabri remarks that aliquis is the more usual form of the abl. in Livy, though this form is here well attested.

§ 5. Agrum Casinatem. This is the point at which the via Latina issued from Latium into Campania, and the old name remains in the famous Benedictine cloister of the Monte Cassino. As the Appian Way was open to the Romans with the other roads Hannibal could not have barred their way to Capua except by forcing a battle.

§ 6. abhorrens. Cf. xxi. 32. 10.

Casilinum was on the Volturnus not far from Capua, and the Campus Stellatis lay along the right bank of the river to the sea. It was one of the last districts of the ager publicus to be divided.

Polyb. says nothing of this mistake of the guide, but makes H. move towards Campania in the hope of plunder in the rich Falernian plain, and of revolt among the towns; and there could be little meaning in a movement towards Casinum, if the plain of Capua was the real object of the march.

Corssen ii. 355 connects both Casinum and Casilinum with casa, casula as originally 'a place of huts' like the German termination -hausen as in Frankhausen.

§ 7. montibus. The Callicula and Massicus.

fluminibus. The Savo and Volturnus.

§ 8. mansurum. 'rest,' 'pass the night.' Cf. Hor. Carm. i. 1. 25, manet sub Jove frigido | venator, so also mansiones were 'night quarters' for travellers or soldiers, before they became 'mansions' in our sense.

P. 89, § 9. The ager Falernus, which was famous for the best wine in Italy, lay to the North of the Campus Stellatis, between Sinuessa and Casilinum.
NOTES. XXII. c. xiii. § 10—c. xiv. § 13. 259

§ 10. aquas Sin. now called Bagni. Cf. Tac. Ann. xii. 66, refoveudis viribus mollitia cali et salubritate aquarum Sinuessa-sam pergit.

§ 11. iusto et mod. The grievances which led to the outbreak of the Social War were hardly felt as yet, and the statement of the text is fairly justified.

c. xiv. § 1. prope seems to qualify, not seditio as Fabri thinks, but de integro, as explained by quieverant which follows.

§ 2. celerius s. The real object was to hold the passes into Latium, and so to enclose Hannibal.

§ 4. colonos. Sent in 297 B.C. when the Greek Sinope was changed to Sinuessa. Livy x. 21. 4.

§ 6. pro. This interjection is more frequently used with a vocative or accus., as pro sancte Jupiter, pro deum fidel, &c., but at times as here absolutely.

Punicas, &c. It was a popular fancy in later days that the Carthaginians were bound by treaty not to sail along Italy, and the Romans were also shut out from Sicily. Pol. iii. 26 disproves these errors by the terms of the old treaties.

P. 90. videamus. 'Look on calmly.' For this use Fabri compares vi. 14. 3, si civem...in vincula...duci videam, cf. use of περιπατεῖ.

§ 7. lenti. Cf. Hor. S. r. 9. 64, vellere cæpi | et pressare manu lentissima brachia.

§ 8. aestivos s. It was a regular custom to send the cattle from the lowlands to the highlands in the heat of summer; the early agrarian laws recognised this by leaving a wide margin along the highways for their transit and pasturage.

§ 9. M. Furius, sc. Camillus. As to the details cf. Livy v. 48, as also for the busta Gallica below.

§ 12. Furculas C. The valley, probably that of Arpaia, in which the Romans advancing from Calatia were surrounded by the Samnites under C. Pontius and forced to ignominious submission. Livy ix. 5.

perlustrando. Lustrare, from the processional ceremonies of the lustrum, akin to the 'beating the bounds' of modern usage. Lustrum is the purifying offering from the root lu, lav, whence luere, illuvies, Lautulae, and the like. Corssen i. 361.

C. Lutatio. Referring to the great victory at the Ægates, which ended the 1st Punic war.

§ 14. Arma capias...descendas. The elegant correction of Madvig for the MSS. reading armari copias...deducendas...

P. 91, § 15. h. dubie f. 'They declared unmistakeably.' For ferebant cf. xxi. 41. 7.

c. xv. § 1. pariter...h. minus. This seems so pleonastic that we may be tempted to translate pariter 'at the same time,' but pariter qualifies intentus, and inter suos h. m. q. in hostes is epexegetic, i.e. 'watching both sides alike, his own men no less than the enemy.'

ab illis invictum. 'A resolution unshaken by the former.'

§ 2. summa ope. Often used by Livy in the sense of the familiar summopere.

arbusta, &c. These nomin. are in appos. with regio, though we should expect a dependent clause explanatory of the præs. copiæ.

§ 4. Casilinum was strongly placed on both banks of the river (co dividitur amni, Liv. xxxiii. 17. 10). One part of it was stoutly defended by the garrison after the battle of Cannaæ.

dirempta expresses strongly the separation of the two parts of the town.

dividit. It would be more natural to say that the river parted the two districts, not the town.

Campanum is here used in its most restricted sense of the neighbourhood of Capua, as distinct from the Falernus and Calenus ager. Cf. 25. 7.

P. 92, § 8. ad con. telli. As we say 'a stone's throw.' So also 29. 4.

§ 9. in prælium rediviit. 'Turned and offered battle.' Used elsewhere in Livy in the same sense.

§ 10. Cales. Still within the great wine district. Prælo domitam Caleno | tu bibes uvam, Hor. Od. 1. 20. 9.

§ 11. saltum, q. s. T. The pass of Lautulæ on the Appian road which ran along the coast was often mentioned in the early campaigns of Rome as an important strategic point. As the Latin road by Teanum and Venafrum lay open, it is hard to see the importance of this step.
NOTES. XXII. c. xv. § 11—c. xvii. § 4. 261

The ager R. was the district immediately round Rome, including also the lands of many of the towns of Latium which had received the full civitas.

§ 12. in viam. Through the range of Callicula. Cf. § 3.

c. xvi. § 1. bina castra. As in xxi. 59. 2 the distributive is used with the plural castra, as the word bears a different sense in the singular.

§ 2. æquore probably refers to a plateau on higher ground, but the secondary sense of 'favourable,' as opposed to iniquus, is also suggested.

P. 93, § 4. Inclusus. The account in Polybius contains no such plan of seizing all the outlets through which H. might have marched. It represents only an attempt to surprise him by an ambuscade as he was passing through the mountains. It speaks also of three passes through the Eastern highlands, besides the coast roads. It seems indeed most improbable that the Romans should have ventured to divide their forces, and attempt so bold a policy against an enemy whom they dared not meet in open country. Livy's description is ill suited to the actual scene, and to the formidable strength of the invader.

via ad Cas. 'As his way (southward) was intercepted by the garrison at Cas.'

tant. soc. A bold phrase for tot socii.

Liternum was afterwards famous as the place of the voluntary exile of Scipio Africanus. Its stagna were formed by the river Clanius near its entry into the sea, now known as Lago di Patria.

§ 6. ludibrium oculorum. 'An ocular delusion.'

§ 7. quos ..multos. Not quorum, as there is no relation here of part to whole. Cf. i. 55. 3, sacella quæ aliquot ibi a Tatio rege consecrata fuerant.

c. xvii. § 3. repente. To be taken with disc., circa with virgulta, as omnem deinceps agrum xxi. 52. 5, and often elsewhere adverbs are used as adj. by L.

visa is inserted by Madvig after Perizonius, on the ground that it would be absurd to say h. s. q.... accensis if the underwood was actually on fire.

§ 4. Qui ad transitum. Polybius clearly describes the whole scene. 4000 men were placed in ambush at the outlet of a defile, while the main body were drawn up by Fabius on a hill commanding the approach. But at the sight of the lights upon the mountain-sides the Romans in the pass, thinking that the enemy was escaping along the higher ground, left their station in pursuit, and the main body of H. passed through unmolested. Livy's account is vague in the extreme.

P. 94. Qua minime... 'They made for the top of the mountain-ridges, thinking that their safest course lay in the direction where the lights were flashing least.'

§ 6. in fugam. According to Polyb., after collision with the light troops of H., they remained upon the heights waiting for the dawn.

armaturœ incurre re. A rare constr. Livy commonly says incurre re in aliquid.

neutros... This const. is awkwardly involved; though neutros is governed by tenuit, the negative which it contains belongs properly to a distinct sentence which states a further result that neither side was ready to begin fighting.

c. xviii. § 1. abhorrens. 'Shrinking.'

§ 2. intercl. ab suis. 'Cut off from the main body.' Livy uses suis freely, as § 7 and 17. 4, without reference to the principal subject of the sentence.

§ 3. assuetior. We notice here the want of a Latin partic., like ὁδός, the place of which might be supplied by utpote or quippe.

campestrem. 'Lowlander.'

statarius. Cf. ix. 19. 5, when speaking of the soldiers to the phalanx and the legion he says statarius uterque miles ordinis servans.

§ 5. super Allifas. To be taken with consedit, not transgressus. Cf. 17. 7.

§ 6. Pelignos. This was a Sabine tribe N.E. of Lake Fucinus, whose chief city, Corfinium, was chosen as the seat of empire by the Italians in the Social War. Its country was too rugged to offer much plunder to H.

P. 95, § 7. Gereonium (castellum Apulicæ inops, 39. 16) was 25 miles from Luceria (Pol. iii. 100), and selected by H. for his winter quarters, 23. 9.

imperio...consilio are less properly connected with agens than precibus, but the same construction is repeated xxiv. 32. 5.

§ 9. It might perhaps be better to put a comma after hostis, and to assume an ellipse of ‘he should remember’ before mediecos. Cf. Cic. Tusc. i. 17. 41, horum igitur aliquid animus est, ne tam vegeta mens aut in corde cerebrove...jaceat.

quiete. ‘By doing nothing.’ Cf. xxi. 10. 3, nec unquam quietura Romana foedera.

§ 10. haec n. præm. These words sum up the foregoing advice of Fabius, and link together the earlier clauses with the final profectus.

c. xix. § 3. Carthag. Nova C. or Cartagena.

naves. The reading of Madvig makes the construct. simpler than the navibus of the MSS., which is awkward if taken with prof., and would require ducebat to bear the meaning ‘had the...marched.’ Polyb. has ταῖς μὲν ναυσὶ παρὰ τὴν χέρσον ἐποιεῖτο τὸν πλοῦν, τοῖς δὲ πεζοῖς τὴν πορείαν παρὰ τὸν αἰγιαλῶν, iii. 95. Navibus probably grew out of navis (naves), as in xxi. 43. 4 habentibus from habentis.

§ 4. idem consilii, i.e. confligere as above.

ingentem... Taken by hypallage with f., not with *auxiliorum.

§ 5. Massiliensium. Polyb. notes the general zealousness of Massilia in the Roman cause throughout the war.

speculatoriae. Non sunt triremes sed naves minores sine rostris ut constat ex Liv. xxxvi. 42, Drakenb. ap. Fabri.

P. 96, § 6. universo terrore. ‘General panic.’

effuso. Livy more often uses offusus with terror. Cf. xxviii. 29. 7.

§ 7. nondum...aperientibus. A bold constr., in which the negative sense is transferred from the verb to the adverb= ‘still hiding.’ Cf. also xxii. 6. 9, quum...dispulsa nebula ape- risset diem. There is nothing in Polyb. to answer to this rhetorical description of the confusion, though the accounts otherwise agree.

§ 8. *classem esse...*follows a verb ‘announce,’ understood in jubet.

nihil minus quam...exspect. A very favourite phrase of Livy which often occurs.
NOTES. XXII. c. xix. § 10—c. xx. § 10.

§ 10. resolutis o... 'Unfasten the cables (which bound the stern of the ship to the shore), and drift towards the anchors' (which were let down from the prow facing the sea by ancoralia). The MSS. read evenerentur, which is ill balanced by incidunt. W. reads evicii tenentur, which has little to recommend it, but is suggested by the teneat which follows.

P. 97, c. xx. The [in] probably, as Madvig suggests, was a copyist's error which grew out of the m in pretentam.

§ 2. quae non aut... The one set was not seaworthy, the other had run aground and could not be towed away.

§ 4. Onusam. V. xxi. 22. 5.

§ 5. iniuncta m. 'Which abutted on the walls.' In fortified towns a clear space was commonly left. For use of iniunctae cf. v. 7. 1, quum vineæ tantum non iam iniunctae manibus essent.

§ 6. Longuntica must have been near Nova C., according to a passage from Pliny 19. 2. 30, aéstimare quanto sit in usu (spartum)...navium armamentis machinis aedificationum.....ad hos omnes usus quæ sufficient minus triginta millia passuum in latitudinem a litore Carthaginis novæ minusque C in longitudinem esse reperientur.

sparti. Sp. esparto. A natural grass which Pliny calls iuncus proprie aridi soli...hinc strata rusticis eorum, hinc ignes facesque, hinc calceamina, et pastorum vestes. It was especially used for cordage on shipboard, in sicco præferunt e cannabi funes. Hence the name Spartarius Campus for the neighbourhood of Carthago Nova.

§ 7. prælecta est ora. The MSS. reading is certainly corrupt, præiectas oras or periectas. W. corrects it to prævecta est oram (classis), but the change to the nent. pass. transmissum is much more awkward after a verb like prævecta used actively, and therefore Madvig's reading is to be preferred.

Ebusum. The largest of the Pityusæ islands which lie between the Baleares and the coast of Spain, now Iviza. Ibusim = 'pine islands,' Schröder, p. 99.

§ 10. provinciæ. Spain was not yet regarded as a provincia, though steps had been taken in that direction by the commission given to Scipio, but as W. remarks Livy is thinking of the later distinction of Hisp. citerior et ulterior.
accolunt, a correction of the incolunt of the MSS. which seems too bold with Hiberum, yet Fabri compares Polyb. i. i., 42, τοῦ κατοικοῦντας τῶν ποταμῶν and Eurip. Phœn. 126, Αἰγναία ὁ οἰκεῖ νάμαθ' ἤπειρομέδων ἄναξ.

§ 11. popull. As in Gaul tribal names appear chiefly in Spain in early times, and the towns known are few. The permanence of these tribal names in Gaul is shown by their out-living the Roman designations of the towns, and lasting on in so many of the present names.

P. 98, § 12. Castulonensem. This was afterwards the boundary between Tarraconensis and Bœtica. Its city Castulo, now Cazlona, which Livy calls urbe validam ac nobilem, gained its importance from its silver mines, and was so Carthaginian in its sympathies that Hannibal took from it a wife,
xxv. 41. 6. Castulo in Phœnician—'god’s bow,' Schröder,
p. 127.

c. xxi. § 1. fuisset per. ‘So far as.’ ‘If the C. only had been concerned.’ Cf. Cic. Fin. ii. 28, consequatur summas voluptates non modo parvo sed per me nihilo.

§ 2. præterquam... The Sp. were stirred to war not only by their natural restlessness but by the influence of their chieftains.

Mandonius was the brother-in-law of Indibilis, Liv. xxvi.
49. 9.

Hargetum. Cf. xxi. 22. 3, reduced by Cn. Scipio xxi. 61, hence antea.

1. tribuni. W. follows the MSS. in the reading tribunus, in which case missi would be a constr. ad synesim, agreeing with the plural of trib. cum aux. Cf. note on xxi. 60. 7.

§ 5. cis Hib. ‘To his own side of,’ from the point of view of agent not writer.

According to Ukert ii. 1, p. 418, some coins have Ilercavonia.
It is otherwise unknown.

Novam cl. Supposed to be a local name, possibly to be identified with Ad Novas mentioned in the Itinerar. Anton. between Ilerda and Tarraco.

c. xxii. § 1. prorogato. The tenure of office was strictly limited to fixed periods at Rome, and it was contrary to constitutional usage to extend it in ordinary cases. But in the year 326 B.C. Q. Publilius Philo the consul was allowed by a vote of the commons ut pro consule rem gereret quoad debellatum cum Græcis esset, Liv. viii. 23. 7. But to mark the distinctive character of this prorogatio in this and other cases the official was always spoken of not as magistratus but pro magistratu, and for a long time a vote of the people as well as a resolution of the senate was needed. It was at first resorted to only in the case of imperium militiae, or the highest command away from Rome, and never to the imp. domi, in which a prefectus iuri dicundo or an interrex stepped into the place of an absent or deceased official. It was, however, sparingly adopted in case of lower offices at Rome. With the institution of provincia the prorogation became a regular procedure, and a proconsul or praetor was appointed for each, but towards the end of the Republic an interval of at least 5 years was required between the office of consul and proconsul, praetor and praetor.

P. 99, § 2. portum T. Hübner remarks that Strabo calls T. ἀναμένειν iii. 4. 7, and that it is still one of the worst roads on the Spanish coast, though Eratosthenes spoke of a ναύσταθμον there. Yet 8 years later C. Claudius Nero sailed direct from Puteoli to Tarraco, xxvi. 17. 2, though the troops more commonly disembarked at Emporion and marched to T., until the fall of Carthago Nova changed the centre of operations.

§ 4. nec ullo viso, for et nullo, as the negative belongs not to the main sentence, but to the secondary clause. This confusion is of frequent occurrence in Livy, cf. vii. 9. 1, quum... exercitum duxissent neque inventis in agro hostibus Ferentinum ...cepisset.

traditos, i.e. to the governor of the garrison. They were left there, says Polybius, because of the strength of the place and the supposed fidelity of the guard, iii. 98.

§ 5. liberum. The contracted form of this gen. plur. is very usual in Livy as in duum and socium.

§ 7. unum, 'a single,' as § 8, eam unam rem 'that single exploit.'

id agebat, 'his object was.'

emolumentum. The abstract for the concrete, as semina discordiarum tribuni iii. 19. 6, uno equo per urbem verum triumphum vehi xxviii. 9. 8, ludibrium verius quam comes i. 56. 9. The object of Abelux was not merely that the 'gain might be as great as possible' taking emolumentum as the subject, but that he might 'himself profit his new allies.' For this the natural construction would be emolumento esset, though in Cic. de fin. ii. 18 the best MSS. have cuius mors tibi emolumentum futura sit.
NOTES.  XXII.  c. xxii.  § 9—c. xxiii.  § 5.  267

§ 9. Bostaris. The meaning of the name is 'servant of Astarte,' Schröder, p. 93.

P. 100, § 12. subitum is used for the results of donum, 'what gift there could be which would speedily work such marvels.'

§ 13. momentum, a change of Madvig for 'nomen' 'reputation,' which is however quite a natural reading though less forcible. Cf. xxv. 39. 16, apud omnes magnum nomen Marcii ducis est.

§ 15. ad cetera, 'up to the level of.'...Fabri compares ad sic (ut comparationem significet) poni non solet nisi in significatione dissimilitudine et differentia. Madvig, Cic. Fin. iii. 16.

§ 16. fide accepta d. Like the Greek δεξιὰν δόναρι καὶ λαξείν.

§ 18. per eundem ordinem is an unusual expression in Livy, who prefers the abl. Polyb. tells us that Abelux himself took the hostages to their homes, and there is therefore some slight probability in the suggested reading of Heerwagen, per eundem codem ordine, awkward as it reads and mirificum as Madvig calls it.

§ 19. Illos. As Fabri remarks, the Carthaginians though the last mentioned are the more remote object in the mind of the writer, and hence illos.

P. 101, § 21. spectare, 'prepare for,' but xxiii. 6. 4, plebes ad defectionem spectare.

c. xxiii. § 1. quoque, though not expunged in the text, seems out of place, but it may be explained to refer to a more general comparison in the writer's mind between the war in Spain and Italy.

§ 3. ita balances the ut in 3. 2.

armatos...togatosque. Fabri quotes Cic. in Pis. 30, Non dixi hanc togam...sed quod pacis utique est insigne et otii toga, contra autem arma tumultus atque belli, poetarum morę locutus.

utique. This clause anticipates the contents of c. 24.

§ 4. ager dict. Cf. in like case the action of Pericles who made over to the state his lands which he thought might be spared on personal grounds by the enemy. Thuc. ii. 13.

§ 5. quia non exp. He had not waited for the sanction of the senate, which was regarded as constitutionally needful in all financial questions.
NOTES. XXII. c. xxiii. § 6—c. xxiv. § 10.

§ 7. sæpe iactata, 'after frequent debate.'

§ 8. quoniam, &c., explains the following tardius er.

erogaretur. The technical term for a vote of the supplies.

P. 102, § 10. præsidio. A participle like futurus is here needed to balance circumspectans.

necunde, cf. note on 2. 3.

c. xxiv. § 4. quod, minime... Polybius explains more fully the policy of H. who was anxious to winter at Gereonium, and to gather in supplies from all the country round before the Romans could interfere. This accounts for the large numbers (duas exercitus partes 23. 10) sent out to forage. He recalled indeed part of them at first, when the two camps were pitched so near each other, but ventured at last to send them out again, as he was anxious to gain large reserves of fodder for the horses, in which his strength lay. The scene and the details are much better described by the Greek writer.

§ 7. paucitate, i.e. 2000 Polyb.

§ 8. [Tum ut]. If these are expunged, the rest makes good sense. W. reads tum utique, which is harsh, though it may be supported by tum utique immodice of 27. 2.

P. 103. per aversa a castris... Madvig’s correction for per av. castra e castris of the MSS. W. suggests per a. c. ne conspici posset e castris H., but all this is already implied in the text, which is much simpler, and aversa castra is an unnatural expression for the ‘side of the camp which was remote from,’ and those who issued from the camp would not go per castra. The phrases per aversa urbis, v. 29. 1, or aversis collibus, xxvii. 41. 6, do not seem to justify the use of aversa castra in this sense.

§ 9. This section has been rearranged by Madvig, as the MSS. seem here, as often in this book, to have lost some words out of their text.

§ 10. receperat suos. Polyb. mentions that Hasdrubal had covered the retreat of many of the foragers to the camp at Gereonium, to which H. afterwards retired.
NOTES. XXII. c. xxiv. § 11—c. xxv. § 3. 269

§ 11. Iusta acite ac coll. sig. Common expressions for a regular engagement, as distinct from skirmishes.

§ 12. Bovianum was the chief town of the Samnites Pentri, xx. 31. 4, so important in early times that the Romans made repeated attempts to secure it as a step towards the conquest of Samnium.

Iussu dict. The details of the levies had been left to the discretion of the dictator. The regular dillectus was resorted to for the legions. The socii were required to furnish contingenta of a certain strength under their native officers, over whom Roman præfecti were commonly appointed.

Quingentos. The MSS. have et equites adducentem without a numeral. This may have grown out of equites D ducentem. Alschefski read mille, supposing that et was a mistake for the sign co.

§ 14. Vanam, though not in the MSS., seems needed to explain the vanioribus which follows. For this use of the word Heerwagen compares Verg. Æn. ii. 79, Nec si miserum Fortuna Simonem finxit, vanum etiam mendacemque improba finger.

c. xxv. § 1. contione. Referring to the speech of the tribune below.

§ 2. Ut. 'Assuming that.'

§ 3. Trib. plebis. The tribunes of an earlier age had been the spokesmen and leaders of the plebs in its civil struggles with the privileged order of the patres, and in their speeches, as reported in the annalists, it was a common topic of complaint that their rulers engaged in constant wars to distract the attention of the people from their grievances at home. The legal inequalities had been long swept away, but the tribunate lasted on, though it had lost its original value and importance. The tribunes still headed the opposition against the senatorian government, which they rudely shook in the period of the Gracchi, and helped in a later age to overthrow. It is a feature of Livy's rhetorical style to introduce their harangues into his text. The same names and argument recur in different periods.

Enimvero. The MSS. have only enim, which is used in other places of Livy, as vii. 32. 13, elliptically, to reply to supposed objections, but not, according to Madvig, to express indignation, as enimvero is employed Cic. Verr. i. 26, Hic tum alius ex alia parte: enimvero ferendum hoc non est.
NOTES. XXII. c. xxv. §§ 5—17.

P. 104, § 5. specie classis... Cf. 11. 7.

§ 6. duos pratores. Cf. 31. 6 for T. Otacilius, and xxiii. 21. 4 for A. Cornelius Mammula.

§ 7. Campanum... Cf. 15. 4.

'§ 9. ut...ut. 'As soon as'...'as if.' The repetition in a different sense is awkward.

§ 10. abrogando. A Roman magistrate could not be constitutionally deposed except by a legislative act, or vote of the comitia. Early tradition cited such a case at the beginning of the republic, Brutus...colegae suo imperium abrogavit Cic. Brut. 14. 53, but in the best days of Rome there was scarcely any example known, for C. Flaminius would probably not have been deposed, as Livy xx. 63. 2 implies, but declared illegally elected, vitio creatus. Cinna was deposed, but only by a vote of the senate according to Appian, and he regarded the act as null and void. But though there was no regular precedent of a consul, we hear of abrogation in the case of pro-consuls (Liv. Epit. 67) and tribunes as in the famous case of M. Octavius, 132 B.C.

§ 12. in actione...populari. 'In a course of action which would have found little favour with the people,' i.e. in opposing the bill of the tribune. The MSS. commonly read popularis agreeing with dictator, in the sense 'as he would have conciliated them little by his bearing towards them.' Actio is often used by Livy of the resolution proposed to the assembly, or the speech in support of it. Cf. ii. 56. 3, huic actioni gratissimae plebi quam summa vi resisterent patres, and iii. 1. 3, tribunicis se iactare actionibus. Here it is used more generally for 'political action.'

§ 13. acceptas referret. 'Set them down to the account of,' literally 'to the credit side.' So v. 22. 2, nec duci...nec senatui, sed Liciniae familiae...acceptum referabant.

dictum 'order,' as ii. 18. 6, ad dicto parendum.

P. 105, § 14. bono imperatore. We see the need of a particip. of the subst. verb with this abl. abs., as in lata civitate in § 1.

§ 17. concilium is technically distinguished from the comitia, the general assemblies of the whole people convened for legislative or elective purposes. It is therefore applied to the meetings of foreign peoples, or of Roman corporations, and especially to the assemblies of the plebs, considered as a part only of the Roman unity, because exclusive of the patricians. These concilia plebis could only be convened by a tribune, or ædile, and the auspices were not taken before they met, as in the case of the comitia. The resolutions passed in them, called plebiscita, were long regarded as informal declarations of the will of a single order of the state, and as such were never sanctioned by the patrum auctoritas, though the Hortensian law of B.C. 238 gave them binding force, and thus raised them to the level of the leges passed in the comitia. Cf. Mommsen, Römische Forsch. 177.

magis...quam. The two sentences are awkwardly balanced from the compression of the language. ‘There was more... shown...than open courage on the part of’...

auctoritas = the sanction of men of mark coming forward as suasores.

§ 19. ipsum inst. ‘Who sold his own goods retail.’ The Romans markedly distinguished between the capitalist who speculated wholesale and the retail chandler, who was usually slave-born (servilia ministeria), or a foreigner. Cf. Cic. de Off. i. 42, illiberales et sordidi questus mercenariorum, quorum opera non artes emuntur: est enim illa merces auctoramentum servitutis. Sordidi etiam putandi qui mercantur a mercatoribus quod statim vendant. Opificesque omnes sordida arte versantur. Plautus reflects the old Roman contempt for retail trade in the lines, Trinummus i. 11. 178: nihil est profecto stultius, neque stolidius | neque mendaciloquius, neque argutum magis | neque confidensiloquius neque perfurius | quam urbani adsidui civeis. Thus Horace speaks of the Tusci turbi impia viei. Much of this feeling was probably due to the military bias given to the Roman mind in early days, (cf. the charge against the government of the Tarquins opifices ac lapicidas pro bellatoribus factos, Liv. i. 59. 11,) which threw the handicrafts and retail trades into the hands of aliens, and the slave-born, who could not serve in the armies, but in later days the stigma of slavery degraded all industrial labour, except in agriculture.

c. xxvi. § 1. ut primum...fect. The MSS. have utrum... adjecit. The first correction by Perizonius is necessary to make sense, the second is justified by the frequent usage of Livy, as r. 34. 5, cum divitiae jam animos facerent. The phrase pecunia ex eo generae q. is abrupt from the want of an article or participle as in Greek.

§ 2. toga. The dress of the middle class, distinguished from the tunicatus popellus of Horace.
proclamando. A contemptuous term instead of orando. Cf. Cic. de Orat. i. 46, non enim causidicum nescio quem neque proclamatorem aut rabulam hoc sermone nostro conquirimus.

in notitiam...honores. 'Attained to notoriety, and then to public office.' These honours were the lower offices afterwards included in the comprehensive term vigintiviratus, comprising several boards, the lowest rank in a political career.

§ 3. duabus ædil. Only three cases are known of men who held both ædileships, but one or other was a necessary step in an official career, and was heavily weighted with the expenses of the public shows.

§ 4. dictatoria invidia. For this use of an adjective, to express the object of the substantive, cf. Cic. Cluent. 28. 77, ex invidia senatoria crescere, Liv. iii. 42. 6, posito decemvirali odio, xxxix. 18. 10, divino humanoque scelere liberari.

§ 5. æqui atque in. 'Friends and foes,' as elsewhere in Livy.

P. 106, § 7. æquato imp. Polyb. says δύο Δικτάτορες ἐγενέσθαιναι, δ' πρότερον οὐδέποτε συνεβεβήκει, iii. 103. That there was no constitutional impossibility in this is shown by the appointment of M. Junia Pera and M. Fabius Puteo at the same time, and though the latter is made to say neque duos dictatores tempore uno, quod nuncquam antea factum esset, probare se, Liv. xxiii. 23. 2, yet he accepted office notwithstanding. The fasti do not recognize Minucius as dictator, but an inscription gives him the title, C. I. L. i. 556. Such a rogatio as that de æquando imperio is quite unknown to constitutional procedure.

c. xxvii. § 3. maiorem minori. In technical language the magistratus maiores were those who had the imperium, together with the censors, while all the rest were minores; but the terms are often used relatively, thus the dictator had a maior potestas as compared with all other officers, and the consul relatively to the prætor.

virgas ac secures...tremere. Referring probably to the like case of Q. Fabius, who as magister equitum disobeyed the instructions of the dictator Papirius Cursor, and though he gained a victory, nearly suffered for his want of discipline, n. o. 322. Cf. Livy viii. 32. 6, tunc Papirius redintegrata iu ra spoliari magistrum equitum ac virgas et secures expediri iussit.
NOTES. XXII. c. xxvii. § 3—c. xxviii. § 9. 273

Fabius fidem militum implorans lacerantibus veste lictoribus ad triarios tumultum jam in contionem miscentes sese recepit.

§ 8. haudquaquam placere. Polybius makes Fabius suggest both alternatives, and Minucius accept the division of forces.

collegæ. The term is here extended to the relation between Fabius and Minucius who had now a par potestas, and were therefore on the footing of the colleagues in the consulship. The collegium was a distinctively Roman conception as applied to a board of magistrates, who could each act with the undivided power of the whole office, without being bound by the votes of the majority. It stood also for the relation between the members, by which they were connected (con, ligare) as Liv. x. 22. 2, nihil concordi collegio firmius.

§ 9. consilio. Used adverbially. 'Neglect the duty of seeing that affairs were rationally conducted.'
exercitum. With ellipse of sed or tantum.

P. 107, § 10. sicut...esset. Though expressing a matter of fact, the verb in the subjunctive is included in a dependent clause.

c. xxviii. § 1. et indicantibus et...explorantem. The combination of an abl. abs. and a participle is awkward, but occurs elsewhere in Livy. Heerwagen compares xli. 19. 2, victores circumsidunt urbem...aut metu dedituris se hostibus aut vi expugnaturi.

§ 2. liberam. Uncontrolled by a superior.
et...et. Oratio obl., as the thought of H. accounting for his joy.
sollertiae. Conn. with the Oscan sollus = totus, and sollicitus sollicitus.

§ 3. quem qui... ‘the occupation of which would put’...

§ 4. causam cert. contr. An extension of a common phrase like artes belli conserebant, xxi. 1. 2.

procursum. Madvig supposes that in an early MS. an e slipped in by error, and per occursurum was gradually changed into per occursurum and semper occursurum, which stand in all the later MSS.

§ 7. quot quemque... The insertion of this before the main clause is awkward in constr., though it represents first the details of the action before the whole result is summed up.

§ 9. depossere pellendos. ‘Beg for the task of dislodging.’

C. L.
P. 108. et vanis minis. The earlier MSS. have et vanis animis et nimir, which Madvig explains as a repetition of the mistake nimis for minis, and a later attempt to give a sense to the first word.

§ 12. succedentem. Madvig remarks that subsequentem would be a more natural expression, as it would give more variety after succedens, but there is no MS. authority for it.

§ 13. directa. 'Face to face,' as distinct from an ambuscade. Fabri compares xxxv. 4. 7, postquam apertas esse insidias et recto ac iusto prælio...dimicandum viderunt.

§ 14. animus ad pugnam...ad fugam spes. An example of Chiasmus, as in the next line, clamore audito,...conspecta... acie.

c. xxix. § 1. non celerius. As Duker explains, satis celer-riter nec tamen celerius quam timueram...

§ 5. integram a. 'The unbroken line of the reserves.'

P. 109. plures simul. 'In a body.'

volventes orbem. Cf. note on Liv. xxi. 56. 2.

§ 6. Pænus. Used generally of the army, not of its leader mentioned in the next clause.

palam ferente. Often used by L. for 'professing.' Cf. xxiv. 32. 1, haud vani quidam homines palam ferre.

§ 8. eum primum esse... This refers to a guomic sentence in Hesiod ἔργ. κ. ἡμ. 293, often quoted, as by Arist. Eth. 1. 4. 7, οὗτος μὲν πανάριστος δὲ αὐτὸς πάντα νοήσῃ | ἑσθλὸς δ' αὖ κάκεινος δὲ εὖ εἰπώται πλήθαι | δὲ δὲ κε μὴ' αὐτὸς νοεῖ μῆ' ἄλλον ἀκοήν | εὖ θυμῷ βάλλαται, δ' αὖ' ἄχρυίος ἀνήρ.

extremi. 'The meanest.'

§ 10. cum F. For cum Fabii castris.

§ 11. patronos. Because they were indebted to them for their safety, as the libertus owed his freedom to his patronus, or as conquered people recognized like relation to the generals who had subdued, but spared them. Cf. Cic. de Off. i. 11. 35, ut iī qui civitates aut nationes devietas bello in fidem recepisset, corum patroni essent more maiorum. For a similar incident cf. iii. 29. 2, where the dictator Cincinnatus saved the army of the consul L. Minucius...et proficiscentem patronum salutaverit. Patronus seems to be another form of pater, as matrona of mater.

c. xxx. § 1. in admir....convert., 'arrested the wondering attention.'

§ 2. circ. militum eius, 'such of the soldiers of F. as were grouped about them.'

§ 3. quo fando possum, 'as far as my poor words allow.'

§ 4. plebeiscitum. Cf. note on 26. 4. Plebei is the archaic genitive of plebs or plebis.

P. 110. oneratus...honoratus. Fabri compares Varr. L. L. v. 73, onus est honos qui sustinet rempublicam, Ovid Her. ix. 31, non honor est sed onus. This play upon the form of the words contrasted or annominatio is of frequent occurrence in many writers as in Cic. Phil. iii. § 22, ex oratore orator. Ov. Fasti ii. 805, nec prece nec pretio. Cf. Zumpt ad Verr. p. 661. Quintil. ix. § 65.

antiquo, used technically for voting against a new bill (lit. 'prefer the old'), while abrogare = 'repeal an old law.'

auspicium. The auspices were taken only in the name of the superior officer. Cf. note on xxii. 40. 3.

§ 5. placatus...&c. The precedents of old Roman discipline would have warranted more ignominious treatment, as when L. Minuci the consul who was delivered from blockade at Corbio was addressed by the dictator L. Quinctius carebis parte praedae miles...et tu L. Minuci...legatus his legionibus praeeris, Liv. iii. 29. 1.

tendere, for 'encamp,' i.e. tentoria habere, cf. Verg. Æn. ii. 29, hic saevus tendebat Achilles.

§ 6. exsecrabili, as W. remarks, like a dies ater of the Calendar.

§ 10. eam nubem. The figure is probably copied from Homer II. 5. 522, νεφέλησαν ἑωκότες, ἀπε το Κρονίων | νηρεύης ἔστησαν ἐπ’ ἀκροπόλισιν ὄρεσιν, | ἄρεμα δι’ εὐθυσ μένος βορέαο καὶ ἄλλων | σάρκεων ἀνέμων, οὔτε νέφεα σκιήντα | πνοεῖσιν λιγυρῆσι διασκόμασιν αείντες.

c. xxxi. § 1. centum viginti, supplied by Lipsius from Pol. iv. 96, as Livy would not have added navium without a definite number. As to Servilius cf. 11. 7.

§ 2. Menige. Cf. Polyb. i. 39, παρεγλύνοντο πρὸς τὴν τῶν Δωροφάγων νήσου ἡ καλείται μὲν Μήνιγξ, οὐ μακρὰν δὲ ἀπέχει τῆς μικρᾶς Σύρτεως. It is now called Jerbah.

Cercinam, now Karkeneh at the N. W. extremity of the Syrtis opposite to Menige.

§ 3. iuxta...ac si = 'just as if,' an unusual construction though found in Cic. Or. post red. 8. 20, iuxta ac si meus frater esset, and Sall. Jug. 45. 2 Fabri.

§ 7. Ipse. The consul Servilius, in contrast to the classis in 3. 6.

et collega eius, 'as was also his colleague,' agreeing with accitus, but not with the principal verb.

semestri. The dictatorship was never held more than 6 months (Liv. iii. 29. 5), probably because it was at first used only for military needs, and the early campaigns lasted only through the summer. Mommsen also makes it probable that it lasted only to the end of the term of the ordinary magistrate who named to it. This may explain the later mistake that Camillus was dictator for a whole year, caused by Livy’s words anno circumacto vi. 1. 2.

§ 8. Omnium prope ann. So also do the Fasti, the Elogium of Fabius Max., and Polyb. iii. 87, as other authorities. It is probable therefore that a prætor, in the absence of the consul, presided over the Comitia and made the official declaration. Cf. note on 8. 6.

§ 11. res obtinuisset...follows fugit in or. obl. though a parenthetic clause quum...esset has been introduced.

titulum. Referring to the Roman custom, by which the busts of ancestors were ranged in the atrium of a noble house which had the ius imaginum, and descriptive notices were added below of the official honours and exploits. These were carried in state in the funeral processions, and referred to in funeral speeches. Family vanity may often have altered these. Cf. Liv. viii. 40. 2, vitiatam memoriam funebrisbus laudibus reor falsisque imaginum titulis.
NOTES. XXII. c. xxxi. § 11—c. xxxii. § 8. 277

c. xxxii. § 1. Atilius. The omission of the prænomen M. to the first name is unusual, while the second has the cognomen Geminus in the place of the prænomen Cn.

quod reliquum. Some letters of this [quod reli] quom are supposed by Madvig to have slipped out of the text of an early MS., as the later have only quom aut. e. Gronovius' suggestion medium aut. e. is not much to the point.

artibus 'policy,' as § 3.

§ 2. opportuni ad. An unusual phrase for hostile collision.

palatos exc. 'Cutting off stragglers.'

univ. dimicationis, 'general engagement,' cf. universo periculo; 12. 10 for 'decisive battle' Livy uses supremum certamen, there being no definite equivalent in Latin.

P. 112, § 3. et fuisset. Madvig's correction of the passage of which other readings are abeundum timuisset, where the gerund seems out of place, or fugae speciem abeundo timuisset.

repetiturus fuerit. For this combination or subjunction of the perf. future, cf. Cic. ad Att. ii. 16, Pompeius ēsōphiēro, quid enim futurum fuerit...se divinare non potuisse.

§ 4. Neapolis was first referred to by Livy under the name of Palæopolis viii. 26. 1, but the 'old city' disappears, and the 'new city' takes its place after the siege and surrender to Rome. Its other name Parthenope is derived from the name of the Siren, whom legend cast upon its shores, and whose tomb was shown in Strabo's days, v. 4. 7.

verba f. ut d. A pleonastic expression for 'a speech was made to the effect.'

§ 6. subs. fortunæ, 'a reserve for themselves in case of need.'

§ 8. duxissent...indicaverint. This change of tense is not unusual in Livy, the first verb representing the action from the point of view of the writer, the second from that of the speaker; but it is rare to find the two tenses in such close connexion.

c. xxxii. § 1. speculator. The commercial relations of the Carthaginians must have made it easy for them to procure intelligence through the trading classes, who in Rome, as in many Greek cities, were often aliens and slave-born.

spekellerat, absolutely as spe fallendi xxi. 57. 3.

§ 2. coniurassent. This has puzzled the commentators who understood it of some plot to tamper with the soldiers, though their loyalty was at this time beyond suspicion. The verb is used however of the military oath of obedience, cf. 38. 3 and Caesar, B. G. vii. 1, and probably the slaves had tried to enrol themselves in the legions as in the case reported by Pliny to Trajan, Ep. 29, repertos inter tirones duos servos.

aeris gr. Cf. note on 10. 7.

§ 3. Demetrius (ἀνήρ θράσος μὴν καὶ τόλμαν κεκτημένος, ἀλογιστὸν δὲ ταύτην καὶ τελέως ἀκριτὸν Pol. iii. 19) had been rewarded by Rome for his surrender of Corcyra by being made governor in Illyria, but had risen in revolt again, and fled to Philip when his army was routed, and Pharos taken.

P. 113, § 5. Pineum. Teuta the queen dowager of the Illyric Ardiasi had provoked Rome by her piracies and outrages on Roman envoys. Defeated in the ensuing war she resigned the government to Demetrius Pharos who ruled in the name of her son Pineus over such territory as was left him by treaty. After the revolt of Demetrius, the Romans spared the youthful Pineus, on condition of the payment of subsidies, which were now overdue.

dies exierat. Cf. iv. 30. 18, indutiarum dies exierat.

diem proferri, 'the term extended.' The common reading is proferre as si diem proferimus xxi. 38. 20, but the active voice would be used more naturally of the creditor than of the debtor.

§ 6. in cervicibus. A metaphor taken from the yoke upon the oxen. Cf. xlii. 50. 5, cervicibus prepotentem finitimum regem imponere.

§ 7. sed. Concordiae. This Chapel which stood beside that of Juno Moneta on the Arx was distinct from the larger temple of Concord, which stood on the slope of the hill towards the Forum, and was founded by Camillus b.c. 267, when the consulship was thrown open to the plebs.
per, 'on occasion of.' Cf. ii. 34. 1, per secessionem plebis.

seditionem, derived from sed 'apart' (cf. sed fraude archaic for sine fraude) and ire, cf. seduco, sepono.

bennio ante. Manlius was in Cisalpine Gaul as praetor the year before, xxi. 17. 7; an inclusive reckoning is here adopted. Of the circumstances of the vow we know nothing.

locatam, 'put out to contract,' the duty commonly of the Censors, but occasionally of commissioners, as here, specially appointed.

§ 9. in eam diem...the time for the elections often varied with the return of the consuls from the seat of war, and no fixed rules could be adopted, though dictators were sometimes specially named to carry on the elections.

§ 11. rectius visum. The appointment of an 'interrex' was a constitutional expedient in the case of the death or resignation of the supreme magistrate. The dictator was regarded as a colleague specially named on urgent occasions by a living consul.

§ 12. vitium creatis. The vitium might consist in the neglect of the formalities of the auspices (cf. inauspicato xxi. 63. 7), or in some unfavourable sign at the time or after the ceremony. It rested with the college of augurs to decide by a formal decretum, that the election was so vitiated, upon or without an appeal to them by the senate or magistrate. The election was not thereby made null and void, but the officer was expected to abdicate of himself, and might at the end of his term be impeached for his irreverence if he persisted in retaining his office. Vitio facti abdicarunt is the regular entry in such cases in the Capitoline Fasti. The usage gave a dangerous encouragement to party intrigues.

ad interregn. res. i.e. the term of the consuls' office expired, and they could not therefore name another dictator.

c. xxxiv. § 1. a patribus. The traditions and the name of the interreges point to the kingly period of Rome, and the vacancy at the death of the elective monarch, when there was no successor to step at once into his place. Then, says Livy i. 17. 4, the senate divided itself into ten decuriae, in each of which the lot decided the order of rank. A board consisting of one of each decuria then held the monarchy in commission for 50 days, each in turn bearing the insignia of supreme command for 5. Then a second board came into office, and so on till a new king was elected. The decuria was supposed to consist of 10, as the early senate first contained 100. In the days of the Republic the patres, or patricii, are always spoken of in this connexion, and it is probable, as Mommsen says (Röm. Forschungen, p. 219), that only the patrician senators took part in the formalities of the interregnum.
NOTES. XXII. c. xxxiv. §§ 1—8.

certaine patrum ac pl. The old constitutional struggle between the patricians and plebs had been finally decided when all the higher offices of state were thrown open to the latter body. But during the last century a nobility had been gradually formed, consisting of the families whether of patrician or plebeian origin which had gained possession of the curule offices, and therefore of the ius imaginum. This nobility was represented by the senate which consisted of ex-officials, and the privileges which it held de facto were clung to more tenaciously than the de iure claim of the older patriciate.

P. 114, § 2. concusso, part. for subst., 'his attack upon.' Cf. xxi. 1. 5, Sicilia S. amissæ.

§ 3. augures. Cf. on vitio creatis, 33. 12.

§ 4. adductum...trahi. The or. obl. following a verb understood in criminando.

§ 5. universis, 'if united,' cf. xxi. 33. 9 the use of exutum.

pugnari, 'the war could be carried on' or 'could fight with good effect,' by supplying prospere from the next line.

§ 6. pater patronusque. Cf. 29. 10, and compare the phrase pater patratus of the fetialis.

§ 7. fœdus, 'compact.'

hom. novum, used distinctively henceforward of the few who rose to a level with the privileged circle of nobility by gaining the consulship, but contemptuously applied like parvenu. The absence of such a term in English marks the distinctive feature of an aristocracy which has been always recruited freely from lower social strata.

§ 8. eisdem...sacris. This probably is a metaphor taken from the pledges of a secret society, as if the aristocratic clubs had bound themselves like those in old days in Greece by the oath τῷ δήμῳ κακόνους ἔσομαι.

It might with less likelihood be taken in the sense that the prominent plebeian families had identified themselves with the patrician by intermarriage and prejudices, whereas stress had been laid by the opponents of such intercourse (legalized by the Canuleian law) on the religious divisions of the two orders, which had distinct family sacra.
NOTES. XXII. c. xxxiv. § 9—c. xxxv. § 4. 281

§ 9. ut in patrum pot. As the interrex was named by the patres, and he conducted the elections, they would have more influence over them than if a magistrate elected by the people presided.

§ 10. expugnatum, 'carried their point by force,' as if it were a violence done to the constitution.

P. 115, § 11. certe, 'an undoubted right,' gained by the Licinian laws B.C. 367, consulum utique alter ex plebe crearetur, Liv. vi. 35. 3.

liberum hab. 'would use it freely,' as Ovid, Fast. i. 52, Verbaque honoratus liberu prator habet, also 60. 9, quum noctem liberam habuisset.

mature. The MSS. have magis vere, but magis is an awkward pleonasm with malle, and vere does not effectively balance diu. Madvig supposes vere to have been a copyist's mistake for ture, and the ma to have been lengthened afterwards to magis.

c. xxxv. § 1. nobilibus iam, 'already ennobled,' i.e. their ancestors had gained curule offices.

§ 2. unus, 'alone' as the aristocratic candidates by dividing the votes of their party could not in any case gain the majority required.

in manu...essent. The presiding magistrate could often exert an influence over the election by deciding whether votes could be legally tendered for a candidate.

§ 3. L. Æmilius Paulus had been consul with M. Livius, afterwards called Salinator, in B.C. 219, and had conducted brilliantly the Illyrian war. They were accused of embezzling the plunder and Livius was condemned by all the tribes but one, and quitted the city in disgust. W. remarks that a special bill must have been passed to enable Æmilius Paulus to be re-elected within 10 years as was done afterwards, Liv. xxvii. 6. 7.

ambustus is the same metaphor as 40. 3, se populare incendium priore consulatu semustum effugisse. Cf. Juv. viii. 92, quam fulmine iusto et Capito et Numitor ruerint damnante senatu.

§ 4. comitali die. The comit. d. were probably at first the same as the dies fasti, on which it was fas cum populo agere, as distinct from the dies nefasti, on which for various religious reasons no business could be done. Afterwards the fasti were restricted to a smaller number of days when judicial but not legislative business might be transacted, while both were allowed on the Comitiales.
par magis in advers. 'matched rather as a rival than a colleague.' par referring to the par potestas of the consuls, by which either could thwart the other.

§ 5. Philo, to be taken with evenit.

Romæ qualifies not urbana, in distinction to the department of Pomponius, but both of these prætorships in contrast to the two which follow.

peregrinos. Out of this jurisdiction over aliens gradually grew more liberal principles and methods of procedure, free from many of the technicalities of the old Roman law, and out of these a system of equity was developed.

§ 6. additi, not as a new principle, for that had been already introduced in b.c. 227, Liv. Epit. xx.

§ 7. nec cuiquam. Of the four Prætors all but M. Pomp. Matho had been consul before, so marked was the wish to secure tried officials.

c. xxxvi. § 1. quantæ sint...variant. 'In stating the numbers...give such various accounts.' The dependence of sint on variant is obscured by the addition et num. et gen.

P. 116, § 2. alii, nom. to some verb like ferunt to be understood in variant.

§ 3. leg. auctas. 'The complements of the legions raised by.'

millibus peditum et centenis. For this use of millia for singula millia, cf. xxxvii. 45. 7, dabitis...millia talentum per duodecim annos. So xxxix. 15. 4, stipendium præterea iis coloniis in millia æris asses singulos imperari.

treceni eq. Yet xxi. 17. 3, the cavalry of six legions amounted to 1800, or 300 in each. Lipsius therefore inferred that the number should here be cccc after the addition. There is no MS. authority for the change, however, which is not borne out by Polybius or subsequent estimates of number.

duplicem num. eq. Pol. iii. 107 says τριπλάσιον as a general rule on critical occasions.

§ 4. septem et oct. $8 \times 5000 + 8 \times 5000 + 8 \times 300 + 8 \times 600 = 87,200$.

§ 5. spem...dictator. Polybius tells us that the Romans, hearing that their army was embarrassed by the loss of its supplies which Hannibal had taken, gave the consuls instructions to force a general engagement. He omits all the details of the election of Varro and the warnings of Fabius.
NOTES. XXII. c. xxxvi. § 6—c. xxxvii. § 10. 283

§ 7. signa. Cf. signa Lanuvii ad Junonis Sospite cruore manavere xxiii. 31. 15, i.e. the statues or busts of the Gods.

sudasse. The correction of Madvig in a corrupt passage where the common MS. reading is cædis, for which Cædis and Carites have been suggested.

§ 8. id quidem, i.e. the repetition made it more fearful.

via fornicata. This vaulted way was probably a line of porticos extending to the campus M. which no longer existed in Livy’s days (erat). Probably it is the same as that mentioned in xxxv. 10. 10, porticum...a porta Fontinali ad Martis aram, qua in Campum iter esset, perduxerunt, cf. Nardini Roma Ant. iii. 141.

§ 9. Pæsto. Posidonia, an old colony of Sybaris, was a Greek town conquered by the Lucanians, and afterwards colonized by the Romans under the name of Pæustum. The famous temples still to be seen on the deserted site date from the times of the Greek culture, the loss of which long afterwards the inhabitants annually deplored.

c. xxxvii. § 2. sua propria. Heerwagen illustrates the use of suus (as distinct from alienus) with proprius in contrast to communis by xxxiii. 2. 1, orsus a majorum suorum suisque et communibus in omnem Græciam et propriis in Bozotorum gentem meritis.

P. 117, § 4. se refers to Hiero, sese in § 5 to legati. The envoys speak first in their master’s name, then in their own.

§ 5. ducentum. The gen. plur. contracted form as modium; the MS. reading wavers between cc and ccc.

§ 7. Milite. Equivalent to pedite, for which it is often used.

auxilia. Cf. note on xxii. 60. 4.

§ 8. mille. Silius Italicus says Addiderat ter mille viros in Marte sagitta | expertos viii. 615. Yet the ter is not likely to have slipped out, Livy would have written tria millia.

pugnaces telo. pugnax is more often used absolutely, but sometimes with an abl. Cf. Hor. Carm. iv. 6. 8, tremenda cuspide pugnax.

§ 10. uno tenore, ‘even tenour,’ ‘unswervingly.’ Cf. 47. 6.
§ 12. dare dicare. A usual pleonasm in ceremonial formulae like that in the next line.

P. 118, c. xxxviii. § 2. quod nunquam. In earlier days the soldiers had taken the oath of obedience (sacramentum) singly, and had also pledged themselves voluntarily to their comrades in the same decuria (of horse) or centuria (of foot) to be true to each other. This pledge Mommsen believes to be a traditional custom of old Italy, and to be indicated in passages of Livy ix. 39. 3, x. 38. 2 where milites sacra ti are spoken of. This was now made obligatory.

§ 3. iussu.... abituros. These words are probably, as Drakenborsch suggests, a marginal comment on iure iurando, which has slipped into the text. They seem needless in this context.

ad decuriantum. The MSS. have decuriatum and centuriat tum, which are not known to occur elsewhere in this sense as substantives. Some propose to omit the ad, and regard them as supines, which would however be used in a passive sense. In favour of the common reading it may be urged that Livy has an especial fondness for verbals of the 4th decl. though centuriatus occurs only as the place of a centurio. There were 60 centuriae in the legion, and 30 decuriae of the horse attached to it.

§ 4. ergo (ἐργώ), archaic for causa, occurs chiefly in legal phrases.

§ 6. arcessitum in It. This is probably a rhetorical use of the charge which in early days of the struggles between the two orders was so often urged by the tribunes against the patrician rulers. Polybius ignores all these details of conflict of opinion at Rome.

§ 8. verior quam gratior. For this repetition of the compara tive, cf. Cic. pro Milone, non timeo ne libentius hec in illum evomere videar quam verius. On the other hand the second is omitted where it seems most needed in i. 25. 14, eo majore cum gudio, quo prope (for propius) metum res fuerat. So Tac. Agr. 4, vehementius quam caute.

§ 9. quod ne. Valla proposed quomodo for this reading of the best MS., but qui would follow awkwardly and it seems better to omit it. Cf. xxi. 36. 3, miranti quaē res.

togatus. An acute suggestion of Muretus for locatus of MSS. Cf. note on 23. 3 and iii. 10. 16, nisi dum in integro res sit, dum domi dum togati sint, caveant.
NOTES. XXII. c. xxxviii. § 11—c. xxxix. § 9. 285

P. 119, § 11. res...hominibus.... Cf. Hor. Ep. i. 1. 19, Et mihi res, non me rebus subjungere conor.

§ 12. id locorum. In a temporal sense. Cf. ix. 45. 1, nunc quando vana verba ad id locorum fuerint, rebus standum esse.

§ 13. Et sua.... Fabri and W. retain the id of the MSS. instead of the correction of Gronovius.

did...perseveraret. A less usual construction than with in and the abl. but used by Cicero, Quint. 24, neque te ipsum id, quod suscepisses, perseverare.

§ 12. c. xxxix. § 2. indicente. A correction of Gronovius for the indigentes of MSS., like the non me indicente hae fiunt Terence Adelph. iii. 4. 62, and Cie. de fin. ii. 3 indicente te of some MSS. Though the act. part. is not found elsewhere in Livy, the passive indictus is less rare. Cf. v. 15. 6.

§ 3. claudente. This is supported by the use of Sallust, Hist. iii. 25, neque enim ignorantia claudit res, and possibly of Cie. Tuse. v. 8, etiamsi ex aliqua parte clauderet, though the form of the word has been objected to by Bentley and other critics, as claudicaret is more usual. The MS. readings vary.

idem...iuris. Varro as consul had equal right and authority with his colleague.

§ 5. Cum illo. Madvig returns to the older reading of the verbs in the indic. instead of making them depend grammatically on nescio an: they really explain the use of infestior and are epexegetic. The authority of the best MSS. is rather in favour of the indic.

§ 6. Ominis causa absit. Like the modern Turk the ancient Roman apologized for the use of unlucky words, or tried to undo their effects by others of happier sound.

demum='only when' or 'not till.'

furere...insanit. Döderlein ap. Fabri compares Cie. Tuse. iii. 5. 11, furorem esse ratii mentis ad omnia caecitatem. Quod quum majus esse videatur quam insania, tomen ejusmodi est, ut furor in sapientem cadere possit, non possit insania.

P. 120, § 7. procellas to be taken with ciet, praetia with jactando.

§ 8. aut...aut. Here, as in some other places, these are equivalent to 'I am...if not,' or 'If I am not.'

§ 9. adversus unum has been suspected as obscure and cold. It might be taken to be a contrast between the speaker and Minucius or Varro, but the words adversus te of § 17 decide in favour of 'in your presence alone,' i.e. Paulus.

modum exesserim. 'I should prefer to have gone too far.'

§ 10. sed eadem ratio. W. remarks that two sentences are really implied in this, one sed ratio in contrast to nec eventus, and a second explanatory of the policy in question.

§ 11. armis, viris. The asyndeton is prominent here and in the next sentence.

§ 12. id fidei d. Id = 'such a,' for which Fabri compares i. 34. 10, eam alitem ea regione cali venisse.

§ 13. in diem rapto. 'On the plunder of the day,' cf. 40. 8, raptis in diem commeatibus.

§ 15. qui senecat. 'Whose strength decays,' in dies 'from day to day,' distinct from in diem 'for a single day.'

§ 16. sedet supposed by early commentators to have slipped out from likeness to following sed.

P. 121, § 17. Atilius without praenomen, as 32. 1.

§ 18. consul R...Poenus imp. An example of the chiasmus frequent in Livy.

falsa, 'groundless' or 'undeserved.'

§ 19. laborare. 'Eclipsed,' cf. the lunae labores of Verg. G. ii. 478.

c. xl. § 1. laeta. 'Sanguine.'

magis would go more naturally with vera, but it implies also 'more inclined to admit the truth than' &c.

§ 3. semustum. His colleague had been condemned, and his own character had been called in question v. 35. 3. Cicero Phil. ii. 91 sneeringly uses the epithet semustilatus 'singed' of the body of J. Caesar, and p. Milone 33 of Clodius, cadaver infelicissimis lignis semustilatum.

suffragis. The votes of the Comitia if he were put on his trial before them. They still acted as a Court of Criminal Judicature, in which the Courts for the questiones perpetue afterwards took their place.

P. 122, § 4. turba, 'from the throng.' Dignitates = men of eminence, an abstr. for concr., is the reading of many MSS. but regarded as prorsus barbarum by Madvig, though Cicero Sext. 51. 109 uses honestates thus, utra causa popularis...in qua omnes honestates civitatis, omnes ætates, omnes ordinis una consentiunt. The earlier commentators corrected the passage to turba quam dignitate conspectior, but with little authority.

§ 5. propius H. Cf. p. periculum xxi. 1. 2.

robur virium also used xxi. 46. 2, as robora viorum xxii. 6. 2.

M. Attilium. Yet Polyb. iii. 116 makes him fall at Cannæ.

§ 8. superabat. Used absolutely for superesse, as 49. 5 paucus superantes.

ne q. quicquam reliqui. 'There was nothing left.' The part. gen. of this kind is frequently used by Livy as xxi. 4. 9 nihil veri, nihil sancti.

§ 9. superesset...p. fuerit. The second verb is used in pregnant sense 'was ready and would have been carried out.' (W.)

c. xli. § 1. ex præparato. Abstr. use of part. pass. 'after preparation.'

orto agrees with prætio, and is explained by procursu and iussu.

§ 2. Ad...septingenti. The prepositional constr. of ad has been lost sight of from its colloquial use for fere, as iv. 59. 9, ad duo millia et quingenti vivi capiuntur. Yet in 50. 11, ad sexcentos evaserunt.

alternis. Pol. iii. 110 διὰ τὸ παρὰ μὲν ἐκ τῶν ἑθισμῶν μεταλαμβάνειν τὴν ἁρχὴν τοὺς υπάτους. This was in accordance with the early custom, afterwards dropped, that in civil jurisdiction each should have supreme authority by turns, and that as a symbol of this the fasces should be borne by the lictors before one only at a time. Cf. Cic. de Rep. ii. 31. 55 (Poplicola) instituit primus, ut singulis consulibus alternis mensibus lictores praebent. So Livy iii. 33. 6, co die penes praefectum juris fasces duodecim crant. J. Caesar re-introduced the old formality. Cf. Suet. Cæs. 20, antiquum retulit norem, ut quo mense fasces non haberet, accensus ante eum iret, lictores ponere sequeruntur.

§ 4. inescatam. Esca is derived from the root -ed (edere, esum), like posca from po- (drink), pascua from pa- (feed), fascinus from fa- (speak, or recite charms), Corssen ii. 257.

P. 123, § 7. media is a correction of Madvig for the common reading medium agmen which is awkward in agreement with impedimenta, especially as there was no other agmen, the army being behind the hills. The best MS. has medium amnem.

§ 9. As W. remarks, only falsa imagine is referred to in the sicut F. as all the other circumstances were different.

c. xlir. § 2. praetoria. Each consul had his own praetorium when the two consular armies were combined.

§ 3. unus t. mil. ‘Any common soldier.’

§ 4. Statilius was himself a Lucanian, cf. 43. 7, though officers of the allied contingents were often Romans.

prefectum. A title specially used for a cavalry officer, prefectus turmae.

P. 124, § 8. pulli, referring to the auspicio ex tripudiis. The pulli were kept in every camp, and fed before the battle; if any food fell from their mouths to the ground it was a favourable sign (tripudium solistitum). This could easily be arranged by the pullarius, who could starve the chickens to make them feed greedily. Cf. Cic. de Div. ii. 35. 73, inclusa in cavea et enecta fame si in offam pullis invadit, et si aliquid ex ejus ore cecidit, hoc tu auspicium...putas.

auspicio has been variously explained as an instrum abl. or as = in auspicio, as ludis ‘at the games,’ is used ii. 36. 1 and comitii Cic. Phil. ii. 32, but the latter explanation seems too bold.

addicere is the technical term for ‘sanction’ of magistrates as well as of auspicio. Cf. i. 36. 3, nisi aves addixissent.

The supreme right of taking the auspicio (spectio) belonged to Varro who held the imperium for the day, and Paulus had only the auspicio minora. In later times the higher magistrate could forbid a lower to note any signs at a time when he wished to act himself (ne quis magistratus minor de caelo servasse velit), and there could be no such collision as in the present case by what was called obnuntiatio or report of unlucky omens to stop proceedings.

§ 12. imperii potentes. ‘Regained their authority,’ as xxvi. 13. 8 mei potens.
NOTES. XXII. c. xliii. § 1—c. xliv. § 3. 289

C. xliii. § 1. magis inconsulite... 'Had rather started imprudently than allowed their rashness to carry them to extreme lengths.'

P. 125, § 3. annonam. Here, as often, for 'scarcity of food.' Cf. ii. 51. 3, super bellum annonae premente.

§ 5. in calidiora. That is, from the colder highlands about Geronium to the milder plains near the coast further south. Pol. iii. 107 represents his break-up from his winter-quarters as taking place before the consuls left Rome.

§ 9. maioris partis, i.e. of the council of war consisting of the legati, tribuni, praefecti.

Cannas. Polyb. calls it Canna, and represents the town itself as destroyed in the year before, but the citadel and Roman magazines as falling into Hannibal's hands shortly before the last elections.

urgentemente fato. A favourite phrase with Livy, v. 22. 5 and 36. 4.

siccitate. Cf. Hor. Carm. iii. 30. 11, qua pauper aquae Daunus agrestium | regnavit populorum.

P. 126, c. xliv. § 1. quo ad Ger. C. 40. 5.

§ 2. Aufidus. Polyb. speaks of this river as being the only one which flows through the mountain barrier of the Apennines. It does not however rise on the western slope as he thought. Horace, who was born upon its banks, celebrates its force and noise, qua violens obstrepit Aufidus, Carm. iii. 30. 10. Corssen connects the name with Ufens, uber, oðbap, from the root udh = fruitful, i. 151.

ex sua cibusque opp. 'As their respective positions allowed.'

§ 3. ex minoribus. Pol. iii. 110 says that two-thirds of the army were on one side, and one-third on the other side of the river to the east, about 10 stadia distant from each other, and rather more from the enemy.

ulterior. That is opposite to the smaller camp.

C. L. 19
NOTES. XXII. c. xliv. § 4—c. xlv. § 7.

§ 4. lacesit. According to Polyb. he had attacked the Romans on the march, but his cavalry had been after a time beaten off by the infantry.

§ 5. exemplum Fabium. For this apposition cf. viii. 35. 7, in oculis exemplum erat Q. Fabius M. Valerio legato.

§ 6. usu cepisset. W. remarks that by the 12 tables 2 years' uncontested possession gave a title to property, and that H. has been that time in Italy. So i. 46. 1, Servius quanquam iam usu haud dubie regnum possederat.

se constrictum. 'His hands were tied.'

c. xliv. § 1. ad multum diei. 'Up to late in the day,' as 52. 1. Cf. note on xxi. 33. 7.

§ 2. trans flumen. Hannibal's camp was on the same side of the river as the greater Roman camp, and opposite to it, but further to the left was the smaller, v. 44. 3. Polybius had explained this more definitely, as also the freedom enjoyed by the latter from attack when drawing water.

P. 127, § 4. auxilio. The Numidians were to Carthage what the foreign contingents, auxilia, were to Rome.

§ 5. sors imp. The alternation of command was regular from day to day, but sors implies the chance of the battle falling on that day.

nihil consulto. For this use of nihil as a simple negative cf. iv. 33. 5, ea species nihil terruit equos, iv. 9. 9, nihil Romanæ plebis similis. So nonnihil and quidquam.

signum, i.e. pugnae. According to Plutarch χιτών κόκκινος ἐπέρ τῆς στρατηγικῆς σκηνῆς διατευνόμενος.

§ 7. pedites, i.e. sociorum. Polyb., who agrees closely with Livy, adds here a detail of importance, that the infantry was drawn up in much greater depth of ranks than usual. Both writers state that the Roman line faced southwards, cf. 46. 8, and imply that the Roman army was drawn up before the Carthaginians crossed, but neither says definitely whether the battle was on the right or left bank. But it would have been absurd for the Romans to make their line of battle face to the south, with their right resting on the river, if the enemy was still on the opposite bank, or behind them, as he would have been, assuming that he was encamped on the left bank. The battle no doubt took place on the left bank, and the Roman lines were probably drawn across the chord of the arc formed by the river opposite Canna. This agrees also with what is implied as to the position of the Carthaginian camp, avera a Vulturno, 43. 10, i.e. on the right bank, with its chief outlets facing the enemy and the north.

§ 8. media pugna t. Equivalent to the media acies tuenda of iii. 70. 2.

c. xlvi. § 1. ut quosque... Polyb. says that he crossed in two places; the passage means that the various bodies took up their places in line where they crossed.

§ 3. utraque cornua. Referring only to the infantry, not to the whole line of battle.

§ 4. et...ceterum... 'partly,'...‘but especially.’ So xxi. 18. 4.

§ 5. dispares ac diss. ‘Differing in use and shape.’

P. 128, § 9. ventus. Cf. 48. 11. As W. remarks, Livy and Polyb. ignore the story told by Zonaras (after Dion Cassius) that Hannibal had the ground behind ploughed up to increase the dust. Frontinus tells the like of Marius. Strateg. ii. in-commodum aliqui subjicit, ita ordinata suorum acie, ut adverso sole et vento et pulvere barbarorum occuparetur acies. Appian Bell. Hann. 17 reckons up four devices of H. which helped to gain the victory, the securing the wind at his back, the treachery of the deserters, simulated flight, and ambushades.

c. xlvii. § 2. nullo relictio spatio. As the Romans were much weaker in cavalry, it is probable that the arrangements on the battle-field had this specially in view.

§ 3. nitentes has no regular construction, as the vir which is in apposition with it takes a sing. detrahebat. Fabri compares xxv. 19. 6, consules...dversi, Fulvius in agrum Cumanum, Claudius in Lucanos abit.

§ 4. par, dum. This reading is due to a very acute suggestion of Madvig, in place of the animis parum constabant of the best MSS. which like the pares of other MSS. gives little meaning.

constabunt. ‘Were unbroken.’

§ 5. diu. Polyb. says επιβραχον.

acie densa. As above explained, the Roman ranks were much deeper than usual. Polyb. iii. 113.

P. 129. a cetera prominentem. Polyb. explains this much more clearly before his description of the battle, when he says that Hannibal drew up some of the Celts and Iberians in front of his line μνοειδές ποιών τό κύρτωμα, wishing to keep the Africans in reserve for a while, προκυνδεύσαι δέ τοῖς Ἰβηρσι καὶ Κελτοῖς.

§ 6. subsidia, i.e. not ‘the reserves’ in the ordinary sense, as they constituted the main line, though they were kept back for a time, ἔφεδρειας τάξιν, Pol.

§ 7. reductis alis. As compared with the ranks of Celts, &c. on whose retiring the line was again level, ‘σερερεῖσιν’ frontem.’

§ 8. cornua f. ‘Overlapped.’

§ 10. fessi cum rec. This would imply, as W. remarks, that all three lines of hastati, principes, triarii had been already brought into action.

recentibus ac vegetis. Recens applies to the strength, vegetus to the spirits of the troops. Döderlein.

c. xlvii. § 1. sociorum eq. These were more numerous than the Roman cavalry. Cf. 36. 3.

§ 4. terga ac poplites. Cf. Hor. Carm. iii. 2. 15, nec parcit imbellis iuventae | poplitibus timidoque tergo. Poples is connected by Corssen ii. 209 with pellere, pulex, πάλλειν.

P. 130, § 5. alibi...alibi, i.e. on the right...in the centre.

Hasdrubal was in command on the left wing, and Livy has not explicitly stated anything about him since the Roman cavalry was routed. Polybius says that he galloped to support the Numidians on the right, and sent them to pursue the allied cavalry, who gave way at his approach, while he himself charged the Romans in the centre. Livy has omitted some details, or they have dropped out of his text.

ea parte praerat probably means that Hasdrubal, as the highest in command, gave general orders to the whole cavalry when he arrived on the right wing. This is implied in Polybius.

subductos ex media acie N. They were posted on the right, but may have wheeled round on the centre, when the cavalry of the allies retired before the charge of Hasdrubal. But the words are awkward and there may be some disturbance of the text. On the whole we must own that if Livy wrote this chapter as we find it, he had no clear idea of the battle or failed to convey it to his readers. Polybius is entirely explicit.
NOTES. XXII. c. xlviil. § 5—c. xlix. § 14. 293

segnls. Pol. says μέγα μὲν οὐτ’ ἐπολον οὐδὲν οὐτ’ ἔπαθον διὰ τὴν λείωρρα τῆς μάχης. They were not used to fight at such close quarters.

c. xlix. § 1. Parte altera. Polyb. says that Paulus after the rout of his cavalry on the left wing rode up to the centre. This is implied but not expressed in Livy’s occurrit...Hannibali.

§ 2. equitibus R. Probably his body-guard, or ‘praetorians’ in later language.

§ 3. renuntianti. Much more usual than the denuntianti of most MSS.

Quam mallem. More definitely expressed in Plutarch τούτο μᾶλλον ἡσουλήμην, ἢ εἰ δεδεμένος παρέλαβον. The Latin version only implies that the dismounting must lead to their being taken, and that Hannibal wished that the inevitable end were come.

§ 4. quale iam. ‘Such as might be expected seeing that the enemies’ victory was certain.’ For the elliptical use of quale cf. iii. 62. 6, prælimium fuit quale inter jidentes sibimet ambo exercitus, i.e. tale quale esse debuit.

mori in vestigio. ‘Die where they stood.’ Cf. xxii. 35. 12.

§ 5. Pepulerunt. ‘But at length they drove off the shattered remnant,’ superare for superesse, as 40. 8.

§ 6. prætervehens. ‘As he was riding by.’ More commonly used in the passive, but the want of a pres. passive participle may explain the former.

§ 9. macte virtute. This phrase is often used by Livy and even vii. 36. 4 with a plural, and ii. 12. 14 after a verb, iuberae macte virtute esse. Priscian v. de figuris says macte, id est, magis aucte; antiqui tamen et mactus dicebant. Curtius p. 148 connects it with μάκαρ, μακρός, μηκος.

P. 131, § 11. e consulatu, i.e. a charge that grew out of his acts as Consul.

§ 13. castra. Nothing is said of their crossing the river, which flowed between the camp, but that is an omission which is to be met equally in every description of the scene.

§ 14. Venustam. A Roman colony on the borders of Apulia where Horace was born. Cf. Hor. Sat. ii. 1. 34:

Segueor hunc Lucanus an Appulus anceps, nam Venustinus arat finem sub utrumque colonus.
§ 15. Quadragesimta. Pol. says about 70,000 in all.

tanta is scarcely possible without anything to balance it. Gronovius suggested acqua and Madvig rata. The socii were in greater numbers on the field, and more of them may have fallen.

§ 16. consulares q. i.e. of the tribuni militum, whose rank is included in the different orders of consular offices. Servilius was tribune, but also commander of the centre as legatus.

§ 17. magistratus...unde in senatum. The rule was determined by the Lex Ovilia qua sanctum est ut censores ex omni ordine optimum quemque iurati in senatum legerent. The ordines in question were doubtless the different orders of the magistracies, commonly thought to be curule offices only. But these would not have been numerous enough to fill up the vacancies that would occur, and the Ovinian law was passed by a tribune, and probably extended the right to the plebeian magistracies. Cf. Willems Sénat. p. 188. Accordingly the dictator entrusted with the lectio senatus in xxiii. 23 put on the list first those who had lately held curule office, then exaediles, exertubines and exquístors, and after them distinguished soldiers.

sua voluntate. As volunteers, though free from military service after holding office.

c. l. § 1. Aliensi cladi. The battle of the Alia, 390 B.C., which was commemorated by a dies ater in the calendar, left Rome at the mercy of the Gauls, who occupied all but the Capitol.

P. 132, § 3. Fuga ad Aliam. Cf. xxi. 15. 6, pugna ad Trebiam.

morientis fuit. 'Shared the fate of.' Cf. xxi. 14. 7, plebs novarum rerum atque Hannibalis tota esse, and xxi. 11. 1. Most of the MSS. have fugit. Gronovius proposed alterius mortem prope totus exercitus luit, referring to quem unum insontem cladis 49. 7.

§ 4. qui in mai. Another reason for believing the larger camp to be on the right bank, as W. remarks, since the survivors would make their way thence more easily to Canusium.

mittunt, i.e. to the smaller camp.

§ 5. cur...non venire. For the constr. cf. xxi. 30. 9, militi...quid invium...esse.

§ 6. aestimari cap. 'Have a price set upon your heads.'
NOTES. XXII. c. L. § 6—c. LI. § 4. 295

civis an Latinus. Cf. the different treatment described in 7. 5.

Latinus socius. Livy more commonly distinguishes the socii or Italians generally from the Latins, as socios Latinumque nomen, 57. 10, or uses socii alone if no precise statement is needed. W. suggests that the two terms may be used by asyndeton like patres conscripti, but it is very unlikely, as there is no frequent usage to account for it.

§ 7. civies. Less usual for 'fellow-citizens,' as xxi. 13. 1, si civis vester Alco. Mark the rapid change from mavultis to tu and estis.

§ 9. quamvis qualifies confessos.

§ 10. Haec ubi... An hexameter and a half have here slipped into the prose text. The vigorous rhetoric of the passage partly accounts for the oversight. Cf. note on xxi. 9. 3.

P. 133, § 11. translatis in d. This seems to be borrowed from Caelius according to a fragment preserved in Priscian, iii. 22. Caelius in primo historiarum 'dextimos in dextris scuta jubet habere.'

ad sexcentos. Yet often we have the nom. with ad in the sense of fere as above, 41. 2 and 54. 1.

c. LI. § 1. bello. 'As if the war itself, not the battle alone, were ended.' (W.) This is probably too farfetched, as bellum is used elsewhere in L. for pugna, cf. xxi. 8. 2.

§ 2. According to Aul. Gell. x. 21 and Macrobius i. 4, the same story occurred both in Cato and Caelius in nearly the same form. Die quinto Rome in Capitolium curabo tibi cena sit cocta. It was probably taken by Livy directly from Caelius.

§ 3. namis laeta. Cf. 40. 1.

quam ut eam... Possibly to avoid the awkwardness of quam quam. Cf. ix. 9. 8, somnio laetiore quam quod mentes corum capessere possent.

temporis opus esse. For this constr. cf. xxii. 21. 5, quanti argenti opus fuit. The commoner constructions are with abl. as ducce opus est, maturato opus est, or nom. as non dux opus est, or inf. as quid opus est dicere.

§ 4. Non omnia, &c. For the sentiment cf. Eurip. Rhesus 105, ἀλλ' οὗ γὰρ αὐτὸς πάντ' ἐπιστασθαι βροτῶν πέφυκεν... .. | σοι μὲν μάχεσθαι, τοῖς δὲ βουλεύειν καλῶς.
uti nescis... This was a stock question in the schools of rhetoric of later times, _an petat urbum | a Cannis..._ Juven. vii. 162. Hannibal was too far off to take Rome by a _coup de main_. Its population contained as many soldiers as his army, and he had no siege train. It would have been useless therefore for him to march on Rome in the hope of speedy capture.

§ 5. _exeunt..._ A suggestion of Madvig for _insistunt_, which is _not_ known to be used in such a connection as with _ad_, and the gerundive.

§ 6. _stricta_, i.e. smarting as they closed.

_P. 134, § 9._ _substratus._ The best MSS. read _subtractus_, which represents the effort to rescue the survivor.

_vivus._ 'Living indeed, but &c.'

Note the repeated ablative. _Laniando...explanatory of rabiem._

_exspirasset..._ Of the Roman.

c. _lii. § 1._ _brachio obi._ 'Threw up a line of earthworks and cut them off from the water;' 59. 5, _quum aqua arceremur._ Cf. _rv. 9. 14_, and Hist. Bell. _Hisp._ v., _ut eum ab oppido com- metatuque excluderet brachium ad pontem ducere cœpit._

§ 2. _trecenis._ Most MSS. have _tricenis_, or 30 only, as in _Hor. Carm._ ii. 14. 5, _non si trecentis, quotquot eunt dies_, &c.

_quadrigatis._ Cf. Pliny _N. H._ 33. 3. 43, _Hannibale ur gente asses unciales facti, placuitque denarium sedecim assibus per- mutari..._. _In militari tamen stipendio semper denarius pro decem assibus datus est._ Nota _argentii fuere bigae atque qua- _driæ_; _inde bigati quadrigatique dicit._ The _nummus quadri- _gatus_ was used as an equivalent of the _denarius_, though Livy employs the term proleptically, for in dealings with Carthage the standard of weight was doubtless adopted, Mommsen _Röm._ Münzw. 343.

§ 3. _seorsum._ As before to tempt the fidelity of the _socii_ by different treatment.

§ 4. _castra...tradita._ This is different from the account of Polybius, _iii. 117_, who says that 10,000 were left in it to attack the camp of Hannibal, which they had almost succeeded in taking when they were themselves surprised by the victorious Carthaginians, and their own camp immediately taken.

§ 5. _plurimum in phaleris._ Cf. Juven. _xi. 102_, _magnorum artificum frangebat pocula miles | ut phaleris gauderet equus... | argenti quod erat solis fulgebant in armis._
ad vescendum. Cf. the prohibition of silver plate by Scipio at Numantia, ἀργυροῦν ἐκπωμα μὴ ἔχεν πλέον δικοτύλου, Polyb. viii. 16, and Spartan Pescenn. x. cum milites quosdam in cauco argentio bibere vidisset, jussit omne argentum submoderar de usu expeditionali, addito co, ut ligneis vasis uterentur.

omnia cetera. Fabri notes that this is the only passage in which Livy puts these words in this order, cf. 20. 6, vii. 35. 1. Cicero however twice has omnium ceterarum, De Fin. v. 20, and Orat. ii. 17.

§ 7. Apula is the correction of Lipsius for the meaningless Paula of the MSS.

P. 135, c. liii. § 5. ad regum al., i.e. to become soldiers of fortune in the service of a foreign prince.

§ 6. torpidos. Cf. note on xxi. 33. 3.

consilium. ‘Council of war.’

§ 7. ait. Gronovius wished to expunge this, as Livy more commonly omits the affirmative verb, which he supplies from the negative, as in i. 57. 4, Collatinus negat verbis opus esse, paucis id quidem horis posse sciri.

Irent. The change from the present to the past is very sudden.

§ 9. concilium, as distinguished from consilium in s. 6, ‘a private meeting.’

§ 10. Ex mei animi s.... This is a common formula of a solemn oath, with the ellipse of juro before the ut, as in the Inscription, Ex mei animi sententia ut ego iiis inimicis ero quos C. Cæsari Germanico inimicos esse cognovero. Cf. Cic. Off. iii. 29, non enim falsum jurare perjurare est, sed quod ex animi tui sententia juraris (sicut verbis concipitur more nostro) id non facere perjurium est.

§ 11. si sciens fallo.... As in the Or. obliq. xxi. 45. 8, si falleret Jovem ceterosque precatus Deos, ita se mactarent. This form is also illustrated in the Inscriptions, as usual in impressive cases.

P. 136. afficias. Cicero rarely uses the second pers. subj. for the imperative when addressing a definite person, as Livy and later writers often do. Cf. vi. 12. 9.

c. liv. § 2. in equites......et pediti. This change of constr. is repeated in xlv. 34. 2, tanta præda fuit ut in equitem quadringeni denarii, peditibus ducenti dixerentur.
NOTES. XXII. C. LIV. § 2—C. LV. § 6.

togas et tunicas. Cf. xxix. 36. 2, vestimenta exercitui deerant...mille ducentae togae...et duodecim millia tunicarum missa. These were probably intended for winter clothing and in the camp. They are only specified here for the equites, whose pay was usually three times as much as that of the pedites. The larger number of tunicæ in the passage quoted corresponds to the more frequent use of that dress by the lower orders of Rome.

§ 2. c. lv. § 2—c. lv. § 7.

§ 4. et iam. The conjunction et has here an explanatory emphasis.

§ 7. occidione occ. A favourite phrase of Livy for ‘totally destroyed.’

P. 137, § 8. edissertando. Equivalent to si edissertavero.
The word is an unusual one except in Plautus, as Stick. ii. 1.
30, but Livy is fond of frequentatives, and the disserendo of some MSS. is more likely a later variation.

§ 9. nuntiabantur nec ualla...esse. A change of construction from the Or. dir. to the Or. obl. which is quite in Livy’s style in rhetorical passages.

§ 11. Compares scilicet. The best MS. has comparesset, which suggested the present reading to Madvig.

vectigales ac stip. Cf. note on xxi. 41. 7.

c. lv. § 1. curiam Hostiliam. The senate-house by the Forum ascribed to Tullus Hostilius. Cf. i. 30. 2, templum ordini ab se aucto curiam fecit, quae Hostilia usque ad patrum nostrum etatem appellata est.

§ 2. neque dubitabant...venturum. This use of non dubito
=‘I do not doubt that’ with the inf. is scarcely found in Cicero, who always uses quin, unless perhaps in Ep. ad Att.
vii. 1, but it is common in Livy.

§ 3. nondum palamfacto, i.e. qui vivi mortuique essent.
Livy often uses the abl. abs. of the past part. without a substantive as permisso, edicto, debellato, in cases where a sentence is taken as the subject to agree with it; but it is a further licence, when it is used as here without any such relation. Cf.
Tac. Ann. xi. 10. 3, in cujus amnis transgressu multum certato, pervicit Bardanes.

§ 4. profecto...fore, ‘surely there must be some.’ Cf. i.
54. 1, invisam profecto superbiam regiam civibus esse, quam ferre ne liberi quidem potuissent.

P. 138, § 6. illud. Referring to the duties specified below. Cf. 36. 5.
§ 7. auctorem, 'the informant who would carry the tidings of', &c. For this use of auctor cf. i. 10. 5, gravis ut traditur quamvis magnae rei auctor.

c. lvi. § 1. pedibus issent, i.e. had voted without further discussion. Hence the senators who commonly gave a silent vote, or divided without speaking, were called pedarii. The magistrate who presided used the formula, qui hac sentitis in hanc partem, qui alia omnia in illum partem ite, qua sentitis.

tum demum is an emphatic way of introducing a consequent, after certain antecedents or conditions have been specified.

§ 2. incompositorum inord. Cf. 50. 8.

§ 3. nundinantem, 'bargaining,' a conjecture of Gronovius for the unmeaning nuntiantem of most MSS. The nundinae (novem, nona) seem to have been at first the ninth days before the Kalends, but in later use to have stood for the beginnings of the early Latin week of eight days when the farmers came into the town to market. Varro de r. r. 2 præf. 1, majores annum ita diviserunt ut nonis modo diebus urbanas res usurparent, reliquis vii. ut rura coherent. Cf. Mommsen Röm. Chron. 254.

§ 4. anniversarium Cereris. Cf. Valer. Max. 1. 1. 15, saecra ex Graecia translata, quæ ob inventionem Proserpinae matronæ colunt. The chief festival of this worship took place in April, but, as W. observes, this cannot well be intended here as the battle of Cannæ was fought in August, cf. A. Gell. v. 17. 5, Q. Claudius...cladem pugnae Cannensis factam dicit ante diem quarto Nonas Sextiles.

nec lugentibus...est fas. Cf. Ovid. Fast. iv. 619, Alba decent Cererem: vestes Cerealibus albas | sumite nunc pulli velleris usus abest; so xxxiv. 6 the period of public mourning is limited to thirty days for the same cause.

P. 139, § 8. aliam, equivalent to ceteram, as in xxii. 27. 6, alius exercitus.

c. lvi. § 1. M. Claudium. This Marcellus had defeated the Gauls at Clastidium a few years before, and was one of the bravest leaders of the age; Pliny says of him undequadragiens dimicavit.

§ 2. Vestales. At first four, afterwards six, young girls of the best families of the state were pledged to devote thirty years of unmarried life to the service of the holy fire of Vesta. Great respect was uniformly paid to them, and at their intercession even criminals were pardoned, but scrupulous decorum was required of them by the state, the holy fire must never die out by their neglect, and all their doings were watched jealously by the supreme pontiff. One was suspected even of graver fault, propter mundiorem justo cultum, and when found guilty of incontinence was buried alive ad portam Collinam dextra via strata defossa Scelerato Campo. v. 8. 15. 6. The penalty was several times repeated, but at times the goddess screened the penitent or justified the innocent by special portents.

§ 3. scriba...quos. The relative in the plural implies the class of scribes by a constr. ad synesin, as xxvii. 11. 3, infantem, quos androgynos vulgus...appellat.

minores pontifices. Of this lower order of pontifices little is known, except that they were three in number (Cic. de Arsusp. resp. vi) and discharged certain ceremonial duties of observing the new moon and making offerings to Juno in the Curia Calabra. Macrobi. i. 15. Varro’s definition of pontifex from pontem facere is generally now accepted and connected with priestly forms connected with the old wooden bridge across the Tiber, the pons Sublicius. It was doubted in ancient times and Mucius Scaevola explained it as from posse facere, Plutarch from sacrifice to the potentes. Gætting derived it from pompa and Pfund from the Ocean pontis or pompæ = 5, the priests being the calculators of early society. Corssen and Curtius accept Varro’s account, and connect pons with πατραί τω.

§ 5. Fabius Pictor, the historian, for whom see the Introd. The cognomen of the family was derived from a Fabius of whom Pliny writes, N. H. 35. 4, apud Romanos honos mature huic (pingendi) arti contigit. Siquidem cognomina ex ea Pictorum traxerunt Fabii clarissima gentis: princepsque ejus cognominis ipse ædem Salutis pinxit anno urbis conditae cccl, qua pictura duravit ad nostram memoriam. The painter’s art was afterwards less respected, postea non est spectata honestis manibus, and though a certain Antistius Labeo took to it professionally ea res in risu et contumelia.

Delphos ad oraculum. This phrase also is found in the earliest reported case of Roman recognition of Delphi in the reign of Tarquinius Superbus r. 56. 5.

suppliciis. Used in an archaic sense for supplicationibus.

§ 6. minime Romano sacro. Yet the old forms of devotion to the diti manes as illustrated in the story of Curtius and the Decii, and in the elaborate formula quoted by Livy viii. 9. 5, point to an early sacrifice of human victims. The ancient usage of the ver sacrum has probably a like bearing. A few years before there had been a similar case in the Gallic war. The language of Pliny implies that the victims bore a representative character, as did the Decii in their devotion for Rome. Pliny N. H. 38. 2, Boario vero in foro Grecum Graecamque defossos aut aliarium gentium, cum quibus tum res esset, etiam nostra atas vidit.

P. 140, § 8. legio tertia. There is probably some confusion here, as the third legion seems to have fought at Cannae, cf. 53. 2.

Teanum Sid., spoken of by Strabo v. 3. 9 as commanding the Via Latina, and the most important town upon it between Rome and Capua.

§ 9. praetextatos, i.e. boys not yet in their seventeenth year when the robe brodered with the broad band of purple (praetexta) was exchanged for the toga virilis.

§ 10. ex formula, i.e. in accordance with the special terms of their alliance to Rome. Cf. xxvii. 10. 2 where eighteen coloniae profess their readiness to send larger contingents than they were by law obliged to levy.

Arma, tela, alia. An example of asyndeton frequent in business details.

§ 11. servitiis, the abstract for the concrete servi, of frequent use in L.

vellentne militare. Hence the name volones applied to them: according to Macrobius i. 11. 30 it was not the first time they had been used.

c. lviii. § 2. sicut ante ad Trebiam. This was not mentioned by Livy at the time, though in 7. 5 it was specified in the case of the prisoners at L. Trasimene.

§ 3. Et...et... imply a contrast rather than a mere conjunction.

P. 141, § 4. equiti quingenos. This was not contained in the stipulations of 52. 3.

§ 5. quamcunque. Often used by Livy as here without a verb.

§ 8. minime Romani. Cf. i. 53. 4, minime arte Romana fraude ac dolo.
§ 9. dict. verbis. 'In the name of the d.' Cf. Cic. Ep. ad Att. xvi. 11, Attice meis verbis suavium des.

c. lIx. § 1. senatus...datuS est. Cf. note on xxi. 12. 8.

Patres conscripti. The writers generally thought that this phrase denoted the original senators of patrician origin, and the later enrolled of plebeian rank, thus Livy n. 1. 7, [Brutus] patrum numerum primoribus equestris gradus electis ad trecentorum summam explevit: traditumque inde fertur, ut in senatum vocarentur qui patres quique conscripti essent. Servius ad Æn. i. 426 ascribes them to an earlier change, conscriptos qui, post a Servio Tullio e plebe electi sunt. But it is unlikely that the plebs was admitted in such early times to the ruling council, and conscribere is simply to enrol, as in the expressions conscribere exercitum, tribum, collegia. It is probable that patres conscripti meant only 'Those put upon the roll of the Senate,' and so 'Members of the Senate.' Cf. Willems Sénat. p. 39.

P. 142, § 7. a Gallis auro, i.e. after the capture of Rome b.c. 390. patres vestros, i.e. the fathers of the senators before whom the speech was delivered. It was however more than 60 years since the battle with Pyrrhus near Heraclea. The senate, though filled with ex-officials, was practically confined to the ruling families of Rome.

§ 8. nec supersumus nisi. 'And only those of us survive,' &c.

§ 9. ne in acie q. fuerunt. This is Madvig's correction of the refugerunt of the MSS. which had been long noticed as suspicious in connection with in acie. Perizonius suggested ex acie. W. objects to fuerunt that Polybius represents all the prisoners as the garrison left in the camp, but this does not seem very forcible.

§ 10. extulisse. The use of the infin. perfect with velle is of frequent occurrence, when the result rather than the progress of the action is to be expressed. The old laws commonly have it in prohibitions, as Ne Baccanal habuisse velit, so Horace, Sat. n. 3. 187, ne quis humasse velit Aiacem Atride vetas cur. Cf. i. 2. 28, sunt qui nolint tetigisse. Zumpt, 590.

gloriati sint. As the subj. of the future perfect, this word like extulisse expresses the action in a livelier form as a completed result. Cf. xxx. 14. 5, nulla...virtutum...est qua ego æque ac temperantia...gloriatus fuerim.
NOTES. XXII. c. lix. § 12—c. lx. § 4. 303

§ 12. nam si elliptically. 'I compare our money price, and not our worth, for, &c.

§ 15. moveat...cernatis. The pres. is used to represent the scenes as pictured at the moment to the fancy.

§ 16. Intueri. The doors of the senate-house were left open, while the friends of the prisoners crowded round.

§ 17. mediusfidius. Equivalent to 'So help me the God of Faith,' fidius being connected with fides, fido, fædus, as the genius of fidelity in social intercourse, such as the Sermo Sancus was among the Sabines. Analogous to the formation of the word are forms like edepol=O deus Pollux.

indigni ut. Less frequent than the use of qui, but in xxiii. 42. 13 both constructions are combined. Si modo quos ut socios haberes dignos duxisti, haud indignos iudicas quos in fidei receptos tuearis.

§ 18. Suum quisque h., i. e. 'We may not be all of the same spirit, but I for my part,' &c.

c. lx. § 2. arbitris. Cf. i. 41. 3, Tanaquil claudi regiam iubet, arbitros eiecit. The strangers bidden to withdraw were the envoys lately heard.

§ 3. prohibendos. Cf. iii. 28. 7, ad prohibenda circumdari opera. Madvig compares this use of the gerundive with the personal use of the passive iubeor in such sentences as xxi. 31. 2, in Macedoniam sena millia peditum scribi iussa. Suet. Tib. 11, iussi sunt omnes ægri in publicam porticum deferri.

§ 4. prædibusque ac prædis cavendum populo. This is a customary formula in all cases of security given to the state, and commonly limited to such cases by the words publice, in publicum, or populo. The prædes, written prævides in the lex agraria, were the sureties who were bound over; they were to be landowners, and their prædia (præhendia) might be seized upon in case of default (ea pignore data publice mancipio fidem prestant). Varro l. l. v. 40). The legal characteristics of these prædia are stated Cic. pro Flacc. 32. 79, quaero sintne ista prædia censui censendo, habcant ius civile, sint neene sint mancipii, that is, they must be freehold under strict Roman law. The formula occurs in the Lex Malacitana of the 1st century of the Empire, where see the comment of Mommsen, p. 470.
§ 5—26.

P. 144. § 5. T. Manlius Torquatus. Descended from an ancestor of like praenomen and nomen, whose title of Torquatus is explained by Livy, vii. 10, as derived from the collar (torques) of the Gaul whom he slew.

§ 11. Si, ut...si, ut. In both cases Madvig has corrected the sicut of the MSS. which gives an awkward turn to the sentence. He notes a similar mistake in the MSS. in vii. 13. 8 and xxxiv. 2. 7, as also Tac. Hist. i. 83, sicubi for si ubi.

P. Decius, b.c. 340 near Saticula. Cf. vii. 34.

P. 145. Calpurnius Flamma in b.c. 258 near Camarina.

§ 15. deminuti...capite. The caput comprised the sum of the rights implied in personal freedom, civil and family status, and change in any of these respects might bring a deminutio capitis with it. The forfeiture of freedom was of course the worst or dem. maxima. In the case of those who had given themselves up with arms in their hands it could not be recovered easily by the forms of postliminium.

abalienato. Madvig’s correction for abalienati of the MSS. Livy uses the word elsewhere either absolutely or with a preposition. It would seem natural to say abalienari ab aliqua re, in the sense of being estranged from a place or pursuit, but not from a right (jure).

§ 17. conati sunt, ni elliptically put for ‘and might have succeeded if,’ &c.

P. 146, § 20. nam ‘fortes’ elliptically implies the reason why boni fidelesque was said instead of the usual combination fortis fideles.

§ 21. favisse. The MSS. read fuisse ut, which is evidently corrupt. W. corrects it to fuisse usui which sounds ill and is somewhat weak, while Madvig’s suggestion is spirited and balances invidere in the next line.

§ 24. ante secundam h., i.e. after sunrise.

§ 25. Hæc vobis. ‘This, mark you,’ &c. Cf. Hor. Epist. i. 3. 15, Quid mihi Celsus agit? It is called by grammarians the dativus ethicus.

§ 26. Et vos. Most MSS. have quos, which probably grew out of the abbreviation for et and uos.

et is inserted by Madvig to avoid an awkward asyndeton which sounds ill after cunct. ac manetis.
NOTES. XXII. c. lx. § 26—c. lxi. § 13. 305

P. 147, c. lxi. § 5. decem primos, like the δέκα τοὺς ἐπι-φανεράτους of Polybius—those of highest social status chosen as the representatives.

ita admissos...net. 'Admitted on the understanding that,' &c., an ellipse not unfrequent in the case of ita...ne in Livy as vn. 31. 1. Cf. the use of tantum ne ... recipierentur, xxi. 19. 5.

§ 7. novos legatos. 'The last comers.' So novi milites 'recruits.'

§ 8. victosque paucis sent. 'Outvoted by a small majority.'

§ 9. proximis censoribus. Not 'by,' but 'in the time of,' as consule Manlio.

notis ignominiisque. The censors could expel members from the Senate, or strike off the roll of the knights (equum adimere), or remove from a country tribe to a city tribe (tribum movere), or disfranchise altogether (aerarium facere). These powers of moral censure grew out of the large authority vested in them for taking the census of the population. At such times the nota of their disapproval was affixed to the name upon the roll.

P. 148. omni deinde vita. 'For the rest of his life.' An adjectival use of the adverb, which is frequent in our author.

caruerint. 'Abstained from.' Cf. Cic. Mil. 7. 18, caruit foro postea Pompeius, caruit senatu, caruit publico.

§ 11. Defecere. A summary account is here given of the defections of the following years. Central Italy remained for the most part constant to Rome, except her old rivals of Samnium, while the alien peoples fell away.

Atellani. Known chiefly in connection with the fabulae Atellanae of which L. speaks vn. 2. 10 in his sketch of the early comedy of Italy.

§ 12. Uzentini. Represented by Ugento to the north-west of the Iapygian promontory.

§ 13. Romam adventum. Verbal substantives implying motion are often accompanied by an accusative without a preposition, so reditus, legatio, introitus, concursatio as in examples collected by Fabri.
§ 14. consuli... gratiae actae. Frontinus Str. iv. 5. 6 says that Varro refused the offer of the Senate to make him dictator, on the ground that the office should fall on a more fortunate man. But he often served afterwards in posts of trust or honour, a fact which discredits the accounts of his antecedents as given in Livy.

§ 15. nihil recusandum suppil. Carthage is said to have degraded or even crucified her commanders who were unfortunate. Cf. Polyb. i. 11, Diod. xx. 10.
APPENDIX I.

ON THE ROUTE OF HANNIBAL.

The passage of Hannibal across the Alps was even in Livy's days a controverted question, as we may gather from his words (xxi. 38. 6) 'ambigi quanam Alpes transierit.' It is still matter of dispute, and endless varieties of route have been proposed, most of which however are hopelessly at variance with the language of the ancient writers, or with the nature of the ground, as since explored. More or less definite statements on the subject are found in the following authorities.

1. Polybius was born during the war, and after some time spent in public life in Greece, was taken as one of the Achaean hostages to Rome. He lived there in the society of distinguished men, whose fathers might have taken part in the great struggle; he sought, as he tells us, information from contemporary witnesses, and travelled himself among the Alps to gather further knowledge in the scenes of the events. He was eminently accurate and truthful as a writer, and his authority is undoubtedly first-rate. His account is found iii. 35—60.

2. We have the narrative of Livy (xxi. 23—38), who wrote two centuries after the second Punic war began. His work was on too large a scale to admit of very special studies for the period before us; he makes no claim to personal knowledge of the localities in question; his descriptions of topography are often vague and indistinct; and on all grounds his evidence on these points must rank far lower than that of the Greek writer.

3. There is a passage bearing on this subject in the life of Hannibal by Cornelius Nepos, the contemporary and friend of Cicero. Ad eas (Alpes) poscequam venit quae Italianam ab Gallia sejungunt, quas nemo unquam cum exercitu ante cum prater Herculem Graium transierit, quo facto is hodie saltus Graius appellatur, Alpicos conantes prohibere transitum con-cidit.

20—2
The value of this passage turns upon the meaning of saltus. It might refer solely to the pass of Hercules, but as the writer must have known the traditions of the Gallic hordes who crossed the Alps, it is more probable that he is specially referring to the Graian chain, as that over which both Hercules and Hannibal had passed.

4. Some lines of Varro, the learned writer on antiquities at the close of the Republic, are quoted for us by Servius in his commentary on Vergil x. 13: quas (Alpes) quinque viitis Varro dicit transiri posse: una qua est juxta mare per Ligures: altera qua Hannibal transiit: tertia qua Pompeius ad Hispaniense bellum profectus est: quarta qua Hasdrubal de Gallia in Italiam venit: quinta qua quondam a Graecis possessa est, quae exinde Alpes Graiae appellantur.

5. Strabo, who wrote under Tiberius, cites Polybius as mentioning four passages across the Alps: τέταρτας ὑπερβάσεις ὁμοίας μόνον ἔδια Λεγύων μὲν, τὴν ἐγγύστα τῷ Τυρρηνικῷ πελάγει· ἐντα τὴν διὰ Ταυρίνων, ἦν Ἀννίβας δείχλθεν· ἐντα τὴν διὰ Σαλασσῶν· τετάρτην δὲ διὰ Ραττῶν. iv. 6. 12. Here it should be noted that the important words ἦν Α. ὅ. do not appear in a MS. of great value (Ep. Vat. 482), that if genuine, they may easily have been transplaced, or that they may be regarded as a comment of Strabo, rather than an extract from Polybius. Strabo himself shows elsewhere little interest in the route of Hannibal, and does not mention it where it would naturally occur.

Now if we turn to the third book of Polybius we shall find that the whole journey from Carthago Nova to the Italian plains is definitely measured. We are told that there were 2600 stadia to the river Iberus, and thence to Emporeion 1600, and 1600 more to the passage of the Rhone. From the Rhone to the beginning of the Alps (πρὸς τὴν άναβολήν τῶν Ἀλπέων) there were 1400, while the remainder of the way (λοιπαί αἱ τῶν Ά. ὑπερβολαί) was 1200 stadia.

As far as the Pyrenees there is no doubt about the route, but much depends upon the place at which the Rhone was crossed, as that becomes the starting-point for future measurements.

The description of Polybius clearly indicates a passage near the town of Orange, about the village of Roquemaure, as that is halfway between the river's mouth and its junction with the Isère, while it should be according to the historian four days' march to either point. The actual distance of 75 miles to the Isère is in close harmony with the 600 stadia implied in his latter statements. There is also a long stretch of broad stream unbroken by any islands to suit with the words κατὰ τὴν
ROUTE OF HANNIBAL.

It is moreover above the junction with the Durance, to cross over which would have been a needless labour for the army.

The other place suggested near Beaucaire and Tarascon is quite inconsistent with these data. In Livy there are no definite statements on the subject to point to any special place. After the passage of the Rhone however he says that Hannibal pushed on inland to avoid all contact with the Roman army, but his route was probably decided on beforehand, and he was guided by the Gauls, who had invited him to Italy, and who would naturally lead him through the passes which would bring him with most ease into their cantons.

Onward to the Isère his route is certain, after that all is matter of debate.

Our two authorities give a like account of the island enclosed between the Rhone and the Isère—the insula Allobrogum of later days—and of the contests between the native powers, in which Hannibal took part. In Polybius we find besides the following data: (1) ‘Hannibal having in ten days marched 800 stadia along the river, began the ascent of the Alps.’ (2) We hear that the chieftain with whom he sided in the quarrel joined him in his march, and that the barbarians were kept in check in the plain country alike from fear of the cavalry, and of the native aid.

The words ‘along the river,’ παρὰ τὸν ποταμόν, are not in themselves definite. They have been taken to refer to the Isère which was spoken of not long before, and most critics accordingly trace the route of Hannibal along one or other of its banks. But there can be little doubt that the ‘river’ of the whole narrative is the Rhone, and in chapter 39 Polybius expressly says that they kept near it to the entrance of the mountain pass. Of course it is not to be supposed that it was tracked in all its windings, in the great bend for example which it makes at Lyons, but only that the general movement was in the direction of its stream. The country through which the march would lie was such that the cavalry could be used to good effect, while the left bank of the Isère would not at all meet this condition, and the right one would only partially fulfil it. In both cases the mountain country comes in sight too soon, and the ascent (ἀναβολή) must have begun long before they had traversed 800 stadia of road, or made their ten days’ leisurely advance, in constant fear of an attack.

Both these conditions are complied with by the route, which following the Rhone up to Vienne, leaves it for a while in its great bend, and meets it once more at St Genix, and thence to the pass of Mont du Chat where the ascent may be taken to begin. That point once reached the way would naturally lead along the upper course of the Isère, through the Tarantaise, and over the Little St Bernard to the valley of Aosta. In favour of this route the following reasons may be urged.

1. The local features of the pass agree at least as well as any other with the general description of Polybius, and the detailed accounts of the measurements of space and time, with the 15 days of march, that is, and the 1200 stadia of way. The valley was a fertile one, and the native town which they attacked and pillaged may well have enriched them with its plunder. The λευκόπετρων of the narrative may be probably identified with the 'Roche Blanche' on the Reclus. The pass is steeper on the Italian side, and the dangers therefore of the descent would have been naturally greater, and in the ravine below 'la Tuile' there is a place where the old snow might long remain unmelted, and the road for some way is much exposed to avalanches. Here therefore Hannibal might find the track completely swept away, and be obliged to halt until a new path was cut upon the mountain side. Though the pass itself is comparatively low, the season was advanced, and fresh snow had lately fallen. The climate was possibly more severe in those days than at present, and the hardships seemed more fearful to an army from the South.

2. The pass called afterwards the Graian Alp was one of the best known and earliest used across the mountains. By it, streams of invading Gauls had passed centuries before. Its neighbourhood was by far the most fertile of them all, and as such best suited to supply an army on the march.

3. Its outlet was nearest to the country of the Gauls who had sent to invite the Punic forces. Their envoys would naturally know it best, and be most likely to guide the invaders on that course. Intractable as the Romans found at a later date the tribe of the Salassi, who held the upper valley of Aosta, there was no reason why they should obstruct the passage of the enemies of Rome, and the other tribes, Libui or Lebeccii, who were settled lower down, may well have followed the policy of the powerful Insubres, and sympathized in their alliance with the strangers. Polybius therefore did not stay to mention them, indeed from the island of the Allobroges he records no names until he makes Hannibal issue from the Alps among the Insubres, the leading state of the Gallic confederacy against Rome. He gives his reasons for this silence, in the general ignorance that prevailed of the exact position of the tribes and localities in question.

Livy wrote, however, at a later date, when the Alpine tribes and names were far better known to the Italian public. His information therefore is more definite in that respect, and seems to point to an entirely different route from that which has been traced above. After speaking of the civil strife among the natives of the Island, and then of the supplies furnished to Hannibal in return for his decisive succour, he makes him turn ad levam in his way towards the Alps. Of the various explanations offered of this phrase, two only give a likely meaning. The first assumes that he retraced his steps across the Isère and down the Rhone, and then turned to the left up the banks of the river Drôme. The other view leaves the bulk of the army on the South of the Isère, while a detachment only crosses to decide the civil war, which done, the whole continues on its march along the Eastern or left bank up to Grenoble. But the latter version can make little of the words in Tricastinos fletit which are coupled with ad levam, for the Tricastini lay further to the South, and their chief town, called afterwards Augusta Tricastinorum, may be most probably identified with Aoste on the Drôme, though by some placed lower down near 'St Paul trois châteaux' upon the Rhone. The advocates therefore of the march up the Isère, assume that the words in question have slipped out of their proper place in a passage which describes the march up the river towards the Island. Accepting the earlier explanation we may follow the track described by Livy along the Drôme up to Aoste, and thence to Die, which stands for Dea Vocontiorum, a powerful tribe here mentioned by him, whose northern borders reached up to the Isère and the Drac, while their frontier on the South-East extended far along the road to Gap and to Embrun, through which country Hannibal may have led his troops, skirting the lands of the Tricorii who were spread to the North-West. He would thus have reached the Durance, the Druentia of Livy, and have made his way to Briançon, and across the Mont Genèvre, known to the Romans of the time of Cæsar as the Alpes Juliae, though afterwards called Cottiae, after the native chieftain who did so much to improve the mountain roads about him to win the favour of Augustus. It would seem to have been the same route, though in a contrary direction, which Julius Cæsar followed in his march into Transalpine Gaul, as indicated in the words 'ab Occo, quod est citerioris provinciae extremum, in fines Vocontiorum ulterioris provinciae die septimo pervenit; inde in Allobrogum fines.' B.G. r. 10. 5. It is the same track also in the main by which Livy v. 34 brings Bellovesus with his Gallic hordes through the Tricastini, and the Taurini Saltus into the plains of Lombardy where they settled, at the end of the regal period of Rome.
ROUTE OF HANNIBAL.

311

From the Island to the ascent itself, the narratives of Livy and Polybius have no points in common, the local names furnished by the former being entirely absent in the latter, while the other conditions of the march are quite distinct.
But in the description of the pass itself, in the struggles with the mountaineers, in the measurements of time, and in the accounts of the dangerous point of the descent where the road was swept away, there is often very close agreement in the language of the two, though Livy adds a few details such as those of the use of vinegar and fire to clear a passage through the rocks. The incidents, however, which they have in common are just those which can most easily be localized in any of the rival routes, and they must be regarded as the least important evidence upon the subject. But in chapter 38, when Livy has brought the Carthaginians to the plains of Italy, he pauses to notice the different opinions which were stated, and to give his reasons for the route which he had traced. The Pænine Alps, the great St Bernard, seems to have been commonly regarded as the pass of Hannibal, and stress was laid on a false derivation of the word, as if it came from Poenus. It was enough, he thought, to urge in answer that Germanic tribes held the entrance to this pass, and there could have been no motive to brave the stout resistance which they would probably have offered. The earlier writer Cælius Antipater, whose work on the Punic wars was largely used by Livy, brought the invaders through ‘Cremonis Jugum,’ a mountain unknown to other authors, but which may remind us in its sound of the Cramont, and at any rate closely corresponds to the Little St Bernard, called the Graian Alps by Roman writers. But this leads into the Italian Val d’Aosta, the upper part of which was occupied by the Salassi, while the Gallic Libui held the lower country. Tradition commonly, says Livy, knows nothing of these names in this connection, but makes Hannibal issue from the mountains through the tribe of the Taurini, with whom he first came into hostile contact. The Roman historian admits that there was no sure evidence before him, and that he relies mainly on tradition; the account of Polybius he did not notice. But tradition in this matter was a guide of little value. From the time when Scipio found himself too late upon the Rhone, till he faced his enemy on the Ticinus, the Roman government had entirely lost sight of the Carthaginian leader. The country through which he passed was quite unknown to them, and no trustworthy information could be forwarded to Rome, or lodged in the official archives. The Gallic mountaineers remained long unsubdued, and the eventful tramp of many a later army effaced from their minds the memory of the march of Hannibal. The popular legend of two centuries later was hardly likely to be accurate in such details. It was known indeed that the Taurini were attacked before the collision with the legions, and it was natural to suppose that they denied him passage when he moved along their valley, though Polybius tells us that he recruited first his soliers' strength among the friendly Gauls, and then at their request made war upon the tribe whose town bequeathed its name, if not its site, to the Turin of modern times. It was commonly forgotten that he had been invited to the Po by the discontented Gauls, of whom the Insubres were the foremost clan, and that their guides would naturally lead him first to their own cantons, before they urged him to attack their neighbours.

To sum up then, it seems most probable, nay almost certain that the route adopted by the Roman writer was that from the Drôme to the Durance, and across the Mont Genèvre, the Alpes Cottice of the Roman Empire. It is also probable, though less evident, that Polybius believed the army to have made a longer circuit by the Rhone and the Tarentaise, across the Graian Alps, or what is now the Little St Bernard. If the two historians really are at issue, there is little doubt whose authority should stand the higher, as the earlier had higher qualities as an historian, and had made more special studies on this subject. General probabilities also are in favour of the easier, the lower, the better known, and the more favourably placed of the two passes. If any however prefer to think that the two accounts can be forced into agreement,—and most critics hitherto have assumed that this is possible—then it should be remembered that definite data in the form of proper names occur only in the account of Livy, and the problem must be to reconcile the earlier conditions in Polybius with the outlet through the Mont Genèvre. With the narrative of Livy we may probably connect the account of Varro above quoted, which distinguishes the route of Hannibal from that across the Graian Alps, and which may be due to reasoning from like data. He carries Pompeius by a different road to Spain, as does Sallust also in the fragment (Hist. iii. 3) where he puts into that general's mouth the words Per Alpes iter, aliud atque Hannibal, nobis opportunius patefeci. But the statements in these cases are too vague to be critically handled.

It only remains now to deal with a third route—that over the Mont Cenis—which has found learned champions to advocate its claims. It should be stated at the outset that it is not certainly referred to by any ancient author, and there is no good evidence that it was known or used before the eighth century of our era when Pepin marched across it; but this is not of course conclusive, for Hannibal may have been guided over a pass that was else scarcely known, and Latin writers say too little of the Alps to enable us to reason surely from their silence in this case. But it is important to observe that the natural construction of our authors fails to suit the theory, at least in the form in which it is presented by its chief supporters, M. Larauza, Dr Ukert and Mr Ellis. These writers, though differing in details, agree in the main features of the route, which they assume to have passed along the Southern bank of the Isère, across the Drac and the Romanche, and up the Val de Gresivaudan, at some point of which the beginning of the mountain ground is reckoned which extends over the heights that part the valleys of the Arc and of the Doria. They agree also in the attempt to reconcile the statements of both the ancient authors, by correcting them pretty freely where they see the need. In this we may note especially the following points.

1. It is supposed that Polybius mistook the Isère for the Rhone, though he travelled himself over the ground, and stated that the army kept near the latter river till they began to climb the heights.

2. The Allobroges, who are recorded as the native tribes with which the invaders came into collision in their way up to the Alps, are commonly assigned to the North of the Isère, which was afterwards the insula Allobrogum. The theory before us transfers them without the slightest evidence, to the southern bank, assuming that they had no definite borders, or that the name itself was quite a vague one, loosely used for Gallic tribes, and possibly still lingering in the Allevard near St Jean de Maurienne.

3. The march along the Isère inverts the description of Polybius. In the earlier stages the Carthaginians must have moved over rugged country ill suited for their horse, and exposed to native onsets, while the easier ground comes higher up in the Val de Gresivaudan, and no definite point can be agreed on to suit the measurement of distance given.

4. The passage of the Romanche would have been formidable in the face of the Gauls, who are described as repelled only by the cavalry or by the succour of a friendly chieftain.

5. The Druentia of Livy must be explained to be the Drac, which the track in question crossed, while it lay far away from the Durance, for which Druentia is the undoubted name in ancient times, known as it was as the line of communication across the Alps with Spain.

6. The character of the Mont Cenis itself has been compared minutely with the narrative before us, and with some forcing of the text it has been shown that the measurements of time and distance may possibly be verified. We need not stay to discuss these attempts. It is not difficult to find some features of resemblance in almost every pass to the scenes and incidents described upon the march, and if they were the only data we might well despair of any definite conclusion. White rocks can be found also near the road, such as that de la
ROUTE OF HANNIBAL.

315

Barmette in one account, or the rock of Baune according to another, and there are dangerous spots in the descent where the road might easily be swept away, and old snow lie long unmelted.

7. One argument indeed has been insisted on, that here alone could a point of view be found upon the summit, commanding an extensive prospect of the Italian plain, such as that which Hannibal is said to have had before him, when he tried to revive the drooping courage of his soldiers. The spot in question is not however on the road itself, but on a ridge which was little likely to have tempted the weary men to needless efforts through the snow for the sake of a fine view. Nor was the actual prospect of importance for the general’s appeal. The phrase of Polybius on which stress has been laid (ἐναργεῖα) more probably refers to the moral weight of evidence that Italy was within easy reach, than to any actual picture stretched out before the eyes.

The language of Livy is too definite indeed to be mistaken, in promontorio quodam, ubi longe ac late prospectus erat, consistere jussis miliibus Italian ostentat...,xxi. 35. 7. But we must remember that Livy had little knowledge of the Alps; that he may easily have given a different colouring to the account of the general’s address which he found in the old annalists; and that he was thinking more of rhetorical effect than of strict accuracy of local statements.

The three passes hitherto described are very far from being all of those whose rival claims have been supported. Almost every height which could possibly be crossed, and some indeed that are quite impassable for any but practised mountaineers, have been at some time advocated as the pass of Hannibal. Some routes have been disposed of by a fuller knowledge of the rugged country which lies between the Drac, the Romanche, and the Durance, and which until lately was almost unexplored, and ill described upon the maps. Some hopelessly conflict with the main data of the ancient authors, and the books or pamphlets written in their defence are only monuments of misplaced ingenuity and learning. None of these seems now to call for serious discussion.

It should be stated in conclusion that the claims of the Little St Bernard, or the Graian Alps, to be the pass intended by Polybius were recognized by General Melville in 1775, whose view was expanded by M. de Luc in 1818. Messrs Cramer and Wickham in the Dissertation of 1820 supported the same theory, and Mr Law in his masterly work upon the subject seems to have proved decisively that the evidence points to that conclusion, while Livy’s pass must be the Mont Genèvre. Niebuhr and Mommsen have accepted the authority of Polybius in favour of the Graian Alps.
APPENDIX II.

EXCURSUS ON THE ROMAN RELIGION IN RELATION TO THE PRODIGIES IN LIVY XXI. 62 AND XXII. 101.

We must turn to the Antiquarians of Rome, rather than to the historians or the poets, if we would learn the characteristic features of the old Italian Worship, for in later days they were so overlaid by the exotic growth of Greek religion that it was not easy to recognize their earlier forms.

The Latin husbandman was deeply impressed by the sense of his dependence on the powers of earth and sky: at every turn his path was crossed by some supernatural being on whose influence, whether kindly or malign, his weal or woe was subject. He analysed by cool reflection all the processes of daily life from the cradle to the grave, and for every incident within the family or social circle, for every detail of husbandry he found some guardian Power which he worshipped as divine. The names, harsh and uncouth as they may seem to us, carried their meaning on their face, and expressed the limits of the powers assigned; they were at first probably but Attributes of the One Great Unknown; the Jupiter or Divus pater, who moved in mysterious ways through Nature. The deities of Italy were never dressed up in human shapes by fancy, and artless hymns were the only forms of poetry which grew out of their worship. But the ritual needed for it was laborious and complex; all the details as gathered in the course of ages by tradition had to be punctiliously observed, else prayers and offerings were deemed null and void. In the family the house-father taught his children; in larger groups the brotherhoods (sodalicia) passed on from hand to hand the saving knowledge, while for the State priestly guilds (collegia), which never could die out, kept in their custody the sacred lore, which like the fire upon the city's hearth, burnt always with a steady flame. Of these, the College of the Pontiffs was even in the earliest age of Rome the supreme guardian of the State Religion. It scarcely dealt with the spiritual life of the family and smaller social groups; it left to others the purely ministerial functions of the priest; its duty was to guard, to harmonize, and to interpret the Public Code of Sacred Law. It knew the time-honoured methods by which each Power Divine must be approached; it alone had access to the ancient formularies of prayer, and all the nice rules of sacrificial usage. None but the Pontiffs could be trusted to draw up the Calendar from year to year, and determine all the questions of casuistry which were suggested by its fasts and feasts. For the worship of the Romans was full of Pharisaic scruples. The slightest deviation from old usage might vitiate a long round of ceremonial forms, and the whole service must begin afresh, or the jealous Power might withhold its favour. In Cato’s work on Agriculture we find the author not content with rules of close economy and skilful farming; he must also add a sort of Liturgy or Common Prayer-Book for the use of the labourers upon the farm, and the rubrics, extracted as they doubtless were from the text-books of the Pontiffs, help to show us how laboriously painstaking was the temper of Roman worship. But with all its scrupulous care it could not but go wrong at times, the Sacred College therefore was called on to provide a remedial machinery to soothe the anger of the offended Powers. Was it a case merely of some ceremonial neglect? the mistake observed might be corrected, the faulty service be repeated (instaurare), the compensation made for the offence, and the expiation (piaculum) was held to be completed. This was indeed no absolution for a guilty conscience, for the forms prescribed dealt only with the outer act, and gave no promises of peace to minds diseased.

1 Compare Bouché-Leclercq, Les Pontifes de l'Ancienne Rome; Preller, Römische Mythologie.

Often however no human eye had noted what was wrong, and it was left then for the gods to give their warnings through unearthly signs (prodigia). If the signs were given on private ground it rested with the owner of the land to set his house in order; but if the place was public ground, then the portent was a matter for the State (publicum prodigium), who must accept the charge (suscipere), and take the needful steps through her officials (procurare prod.) to satisfy the gods and set the public mind at rest. Here again was a wide field opened for the action of the Pontiffs. Others might shudder only in their ignorant panic, but they must learn to recognize the voice which spoke in portents, must turn over their old books and profit by the inductions of the past, must be ready, if they only could, to provide the state with their Authorized Version of God’s Word to man. For this purpose, after due scrutiny of evidence, and rejection of the ill-attested (quia sanguini auctores erant Livy v. 15. 1), the prodigies were chronicled with care from year to year in the priestly records, from which Livy drew so largely for his history. To isolate them from each other might mislead the student, rather they must be regarded as the scattered phrases of the message sent from heaven, and skilled interpreters must piece them all together. Yet some recurring portents were met always with like forms of ceremonial (procuratio). A shower of stones called for a nine days' holiday, from the days of old king Tullus (mansit solenne ut quandoque idem prodigium nuntiaretur, feriae per novem dies agerentur, Livy i. 31. 3). If a bull was heard to speak with human sounds, a meeting of the Senate was called in open air (Pliny viii. 70), in memory of the time perhaps when Latin farmers met among their herds to discuss in conclave the affairs of state.

When the scene of the portent was a shrine, or any clue was given to the Power which sent the warning, the College knew what offerings were likely to find favour, prescribed in some cases the hostie majores, the full-grown animals, confused in later days with the beasts of larger size, while in other cases they could tell that tender sucklings (hostie lactentes) would find most favour on the altars. Costly gifts could seldom come amiss, as tokens of the votaries' submission, so weighty offerings of gold or silver plate were stored up in the temple treasuries, or the choicest works of art in marble or in bronze were called in to represent the objects of popular gratitude or fear. In default of any special clue to the nature of the offence, or of the offended power, it might at least be well to have recourse to the ancient usage of lustration, to clear away the stains of possible pollution. The sin-offerings of the boar, the ram, the bull were duly made (suovetaurilia); the priestly train moved round the city walls (amburrium), or round the fields (ambarvalia), sprinkling the consecrated drops upon the bounds, and going through the long round of the traditional prayer, some passages of which Cato wrote out for like use among his country friends (De Re Rustica 141).

If the experience of the Pontifices was at fault, other advisers were called in. The haruspices especially were skilled in the Etruscan love of divination. They knew the language of the lightning, they could read strange characters scored upon the slaughtered victims, and to them therefore were referred the questions of the mysterious portents in the sky, or in animals of monstrous birth.

If the prodigies were fearful (tatra) and took the form of pestilence, or earthquake, or the like, and the need seemed very urgent, a newer fashion sometimes superseded the old machinery of the State Religion.

The Sibyline books had made their way to Rome, if we may trust tradition, as early as the period of the Tarquins. Borne to Rome by a wave of Hellenic influence which passed from the coast of Asia Minor along the Greek cities of Campania, the prophetic utterances gained a sanction from the State, and a College of Interpreters to unfold or to apply their meaning (decemviri sacris faciundis). The frugal Senate was chary indeed of such appeals, for experience had proved that the Sibyll sold her advice dearly, and never spared the public purse. Now she recommended a costly deputation to beg some foreign deity to consent to house himself in Rome; sometimes a new temple must be built to lodge more worthily a recent visitor from Olympus; sometimes stately ceremonies might be enough if they were only of the newest fashion, but in each case we may note that some forward steps were taken in naturalizing the Greek Pantheon on Italian soil. So one after another the familiar forms of Greek mythology were recognized in the religion of the State, sometimes thinly disguised in Latin dress, more often with names and attributes almost unchanged, while the arrival of each upon the scene was marked by some enduring festival or shrine. To the same source may also be assigned the imposing ceremonies which were for the most part of foreign growth.

The lectisternium, first heard of in the year 399 B.C., (Livy v. 13. 6.) but often repeated later, agreed with some features of old Latin usage, but was specially connected with the characteristic forms of the Apollo-worship (Theoxenia). All was made ready for a costly banquet, and on each couch (pulvinaria) were laid the symbols of the deities to be appeased, while the viands from the feast, or offerings from the altars, were laid in solemn state before them. With these were commonly connected supplicationes, a form of General Litany or Processional Service, in which young and old, citizens and country folks, moved in long lines through all the streets to offer prayers in every temple where the pulvinaria were laid out to view. These in their details, as also in the occasions when we hear of them, remind us of the solemn Pæans by which Apollo was approached in times of thanksgiving or intercession. The Sibylline books did not fail also to encourage the system of vows (vota) which Roman usage had long sanctioned. Often in the crisis of the battle, or some time of urgent risk, magistrates had promised temples or costly offerings to their guardian powers, if only the tide of danger would be rolled away. And so when prodigies were rife, and panic spread, the advisers of the State appealed to the efficacy of solemn vows. One such may seem to call for special mention, as recorded in archaic language by the historian of the 2nd Punic war.

It had been an old Italian custom to promise to the gods in times of crisis the produce of the coming spring (cer sacram), and the custom may have dated from the days of human sacrifice. For among the earliest stories of tribal movements in Central Italy, we read that in days of famine such a ver sacrum had been vowed among the Sabine Hills, and that when the young of that spring reached man's estate they were sent forth in search of some new homes, and that guided on their several paths by animals sacred to the Italian Mars, they made their way into Samnium and Picenum, and to other lands, where they accepted henceforth as their national symbols, the bull in Samnium, the woodpecker (picus) in Picenum, and the wolf for the Hirpini, whose forefathers had been led by it to their new homes. In the case above referred to the senate gave its sanction to the vow, but the Chief Pontiff was aware that ancient usage required the consent of the whole people, and a bill was drawn up by his instructions, to be submitted to the vote in the comitia. It was drawn up with scrupulous care that no little flaw, or unforeseen neglect, might vitiate the people's form of intercession, and indeed it was expressly stipulated that no sacrifice should lose its value if offered unwittingly upon a day of evil omen (si atro die faxit insciens).

APPENDIX III.

ON THE CHARACTER OF C. FLAMINIUS.

It is commonly believed that the memory of Flaminius has suffered grievous wrong from the hatred of the nobles of his day, which is reflected even in the narrative of Livy, and it may therefore be convenient to put together the little that is definitely told us of his life and doings. He came of a plebeian family, which had won as yet no curule honours, and he showed as tribune that he had the interests of the poorer citizens at heart. As a partial remedy for the economic evils of his times he proposed in an agrarian bill—the first after the Licinian laws—to divide among the needy much of the state domain available in Cisalpine Gaul (b.c. 231). The nobles in the senate stoutly opposed the measure, which was carried through the comitia in spite of their resistance.

The sanction of the senate was not technically needed to give a plebiscitum force of law, and the egotism of the governing classes may have justified this bold innovation of Flaminius, but it was a violent blow against the representative power in the state, and as such was noted by Polybius (ii. 21) as the first ominous sign of constitutional decline. The aristocracy submitted with ill grace, and hampered him in his work of colonial distribution with ineffectual delays. Shortly afterwards the government of Sicily fell to his lot as Prætor, and there is reason to believe that he endeared himself to the provincials by clean-handed justice (Livy xxxiii. 42). His promotion to the consulship did not follow till 222, when he endeavoured to crush the Cisalpine Gauls, already defeated at L. Telamon, by invading the country of the Insubres. In the only account of the campaign which we possess (Polyb. ii. 32) he appears to have been wanting in good faith towards the Gauls, and by the neglect of the common rules of strategy to have risked probable disaster, from which he was saved only by the steady valour of the legionaries and the forethought of the military tribunes.

Before the campaign was over he was summoned by the senate to resign his office, on the ground of some technical flaw in his election, but he would not open the despatch till the victory was won, and on his return persisted in entering Rome in forms of triumph, despite the refusal of the senate.

The resentment of the nobles was intense, and they forced a dictator to resign, who had been bold enough to name Flaminius as his Master of the Horse. But it is to the credit of the latter, that in his censorship of 219 he did not stoop to any petty jealousies of rival parties, only linking the memories of that high office with the Circus, and the great Highway which bore his name in after ages.

But it was partly due to his support that the bill of Claudius was passed, which forbade the Senatorian families to own merchant vessels, a law which rested no doubt in part on the aristocratic prejudice of old societies, but aimed also at protecting the provincials from sinister action on the part of Roman governors in the interest of Roman traders. If his generalship really was so questionable in the Gallic war, it is strange that he should have been re-elected to the consulship after the disaster of the Trebia.

There are reasons too for doubting the account of Livy which makes him leave Rome and enter office at Ariminum in contempt of all customary scruples, though military needs might well excuse neglect of purely formal duties. But Polybius is quite silent on the subject, though his informants had no love for Flaminius, and a legal measure, called probably Lex Flaminia minus solvendi, seems to point to the presence of the consul in the capital, although the evidence is not conclusive. The financial policy which it suggests accords indeed with his other measures in favour of the poorer classes, at the expense also of the wealthier.

The position of Flaminius at Arretium seems to have been well chosen for defence, and his plans were probably suggested by the campaign against the Gauls in 224. He must have heard of Hannibal’s advance, and have shown no wish to force an action, but after sending to his colleague at Ariminum to hasten to the defence of Rome, he was forced to move southward to effect a junction, and to keep the enemy meantime in view.

C. L. 21

His one fatal error lay in the unguarded entry into the defile of Trasimene, where his warier rival closed the trap upon him. Aristocratic writers may have gladly taken him as a scapegoat, imagining the neglect of sacred forms as a partial cause of the disaster, and exaggerating the rashness and incapacity of the champion of the commons, just as modern critics may have dwelt too fondly on his fancied virtues because the nobles of his own day hated and maligne him.
INDEX NOMINUM ET LOCORUM.

N.B.  I. II. represent books XXI. and XXII. of the Latin text.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Books</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Abelux, M.</td>
<td>II. 22. 6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Acilius, M.</td>
<td>I. 25. 4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aeages insulae</td>
<td>I. 10. 7, 41.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6, 49. 5, II. 56. 7</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Emilius, M.</td>
<td>I. 49. 6, 51. 7, II. 9. 11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Africanus, P. Scipio</td>
<td>I. 46. 8, II. 53. 2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Albinus, L. Postumius</td>
<td>II. 35. 6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alco</td>
<td>I. 12. 4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Algidus, M.</td>
<td>I. 62. 8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alia</td>
<td>II. 50. 3, 59. 8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alimentus, L. Cincius</td>
<td>I. 38. 3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Allifae, M.</td>
<td>III. 13. 6, 17. 1, 18. 5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Allobroges, M.</td>
<td>I. 31. 4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alorus, M.</td>
<td>I. 12. 4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Alpes, M.</td>
<td>III. 30</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Amiteminus ager</td>
<td>I. 62. 5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Amusicus, M.</td>
<td>I. 61. 11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Annianus, M.</td>
<td>I. 25. 3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Antistius, M.</td>
<td>I. 63. 12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Antium, M.</td>
<td>II. 1. 10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Appenninus, M.</td>
<td>I. 53. 5, 58. 3, 63. 15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Appia Via, M.</td>
<td>II. 1. 12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Apulia, M.</td>
<td>II. 9. 5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Arbocala, M.</td>
<td>I. 5. 6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ardea, M.</td>
<td>I. 7. 2, II. 1. 19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aricia, M.</td>
<td>III. 36. 7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ariminum, M.</td>
<td>I. 15. 6, 51. 6, 63. 1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Arnus, M.</td>
<td>II. 2. 2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Arpi, M.</td>
<td>II. 1. 9, 9. 5, 12. 3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Arretium, M.</td>
<td>II. 2. 1, 3. 3</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name</th>
<th>Books</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Asina, P. Cornelius</td>
<td>I. 25. 4, II. 34. 1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Atanagrum, M.</td>
<td>I. 61. 6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Atellani, M.</td>
<td>II. 61. 11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Atilius, C.</td>
<td>I. 26. 2, 39. 3, 62. 10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>__________ L., II. 49. 15</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aufidus, M.</td>
<td>II. 44. 2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ausetani, M.</td>
<td>I. 23. 2, 61. 8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baliare, M.</td>
<td>I. 21. 11, 55. 2, II. 20. 9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bargusii, M.</td>
<td>II. 13.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Beneventanus ager</td>
<td>II. 61. 11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bibaculus, L. Furius</td>
<td>II. 49. 15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bibulus, L. Publicius</td>
<td>II. 53. 2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boii, M.</td>
<td>II. 25. 2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bomiilcar, M.</td>
<td>II. 27. 2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bostar, M.</td>
<td>II. 22. 9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bovianum, M.</td>
<td>II. 24. 12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Brancus, M.</td>
<td>II. 31. 6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Brixianum, M.</td>
<td>II. 25. 14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bruttii, M.</td>
<td>II. 61. 12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Busa, M.</td>
<td>II. 52. 7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Caélius Antipater</td>
<td>I. 38. 7, 46. 10, 47. 4, II. 31. 8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Calatini, M.</td>
<td>II. 61. 11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cales, M.</td>
<td>II. 15. 10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Callicula, M.</td>
<td>II. 15. 3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Callifanus ager</td>
<td>II. 13. 6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Calpurnius, C.</td>
<td>II. 61. 6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Camillus, M. Furius, ii. 3. 10, 14. 9
Campania, ii. 13. 3
Cannaë, ii. 43. 9, 49. 13
Canausium, ii. 50. 4, 52. 7
Capena, ii. 1. 10
Capua, ii. 1. 12, 13. 3
Carpetani, i. 5. 11, 11. 13, 32. 4
Carthago Nova, i. 5. 4, 21. 1
Carthalo, ii. 15. 8, 49. 13, 58. 7
Casilinum, ii. 13. 6, 15. 3
Casinum, i. 13. 6
Castulonensis saltus, ii. 20. 12
Caudinae furcula, ii. 14. 12
Celtiberi, i. 57. 5
Celtiberia, ii. 43. 8
Cenomanni, i. 55. 4
Centenius, C., ii. 8. 1
Cento, C. Claudius, ii. 34. 1
Cercina, i. 31. 2
Cissis, i. 60. 7
Clastidium, i. 48. 8
Claudius, Q., ii. 63. 3
Corsi, ii. 16. 4
Corsica, ii. 31. 1
Cortona, ii. 4. 1
Cosanus portus, ii. 11. 6
Cremona, ii. 25. 2, 56. 9
Cremonis jugum, ii. 38. 7
Crotonienses, ii. 61. 12
Cursor, L. Papirius, ii. 14. 12

Dasius, i. 48. 9
Decius, P., ii. 60. 11
Delphi, ii. 57. 5
Demetrius Pharius, ii. 33. 3
Druentia, i. 31. 9
Ducarius, ii. 6. 3

Ebusus, ii. 20. 7
Emporiae, i. 60. 2
Emporium, i. 57. 6
Eryx, i. 10. 7, 41. 6
Etruria, i. 26. 3

Fabius, Pictor, ii. 7. 4
—— Q., i. 18. 1
——— Maximus, ii. 8.
——— ii. 53. 1
Fæsulae, ii. 3. 3
Falerii, i. 1. 11
Falernus ager, ii. 13. 9
Feronia, ii. 1. 18
Flaccus, P. Valerius, i. 6. 8
—— Fulvius, ii. 12. 1
Flaminia, Via, ii. 11. 15
Flamininus, Cæso Quinctius, ii. 33. 8
Flaminius, C., i. 15. 6, 57. 4, 63. 1—ii. 7. 5
Flamma, M. Calpurnius, ii. 60. 11
Floronia, ii. 57. 2
Formiae, ii. 16. 4
Fulvius, C., i. 59. 10

Gabii, ii. 14. 11
Gades, i. 21. 9, 22. 5
Galli, i. 23. 1
Gallicia busta, ii. 14. 11
Geminus, Cn. Servilius, i. 15. 6, 57. 4, ii. 1. 4, 31. 1, 40. 6
Genua, ii. 32. 5
Gereonium, ii. 18. 7, 23. 9

Hadrianus ager, ii. 9. 5
Hamilcar, i. 1. 4, 10. 8, 41. 8
——— Gisgonis fil. i. 51. 2
Hanno, i. 3. 3, 10. 2
——— Bomilcaris fil. i. 27. 2
——— i. 60. 5
Hasdrubal, ii. 2. 3
——— i. 22. 2, 32. 4, 41.
——— 2, 60. 6, ii. 19. 1, 46. 7
Heraclea, ii. 59. 8
Herennius, C., i. 25. 4
——— Q. Babius, ii. 34. 3
Hermandica, i. 5. 6
Hier, i. 49. 3, 50. 7, ii. 37. 1
INDEX NOMINUM ET LOCORUM. 325

Himilco, i. 12. 1, ii. 19. 3
Hirpini, ii. 13. 1, 61. 11
Histrí, i. 16. 4
Hostilia curia, ii. 55. 1

Ictumuli, i. 45. 3
Ieravonenses, ii. 21. 6
Iergetes, i. 22. 3, 23. 2, 61. 5, ii. 21. 2
Hiberri, i. 24. 1
Illyrī, i. 16. 4, ii. 33. 5
Indībilis, ii. 21. 2
Insubres, i. 25. 2, 39. 1, 45. 3
Insula Allobrogum, i. 31. 4
Isara, i. 31. 4

Iunius M., ii. 57. 9
— ii. 59. 1

Lacetania, I. 23. 2
Lætani, i. 60. 3, 61. 8
Lauvium, i. 62. 4
Larīnum, ii. 18. 8, 24. 1
Latiarius Jupiter, i. 63. 8
Latīna Via, ii. 12. 2
Lentulus, Cn. Corn., ii. 49. 6
— L. Corn., ii. 10. 1
Lepidus, M. Æmilius, ii. 35. 1
Libiū, i. 38. 7
Libyphœnices, i. 22. 3
Licinius, C., i. 18. 1
Ligures, i. 22. 2, 26. 3, 38. 3
Līlybœum, i. 49. 4, ii. 31. 6
Liparæ, i. 49. 2
Liternum, ii. 16. 4
Livius, M., i. 18. 1
Locri, ii. 61. 12
Longuntica, ii. 20. 6
Longus, v. Ti. Sempronius
Luca, i. 59. 10
Lucani, ii. 61. 12
Luceria, ii. 9. 5
Lucretius, L., i. 59. 10
Lusitani, i. 57. 5
Lusitania, i. 43. 8
Lutatius, C., i. 18. 8, ii. 14. 13
— i. 25. 3
Magalus, i. 29. 6
Mago, i. 47. 4, 54. 2, 55. 9, ii. 46. 7
Maharbal, i. 12. 1, 45. 2, ii. 13. 9, 46. 7, 51. 1
Mancinus, L. Hostilius, ii. 15. 4
Mandonius, ii. 21. 2
Manlius, L., i. 17. 7, 25. 8, 39. 3, ii. 33. 7
Marcellus, M. Claudius, ii. 35. 6, 57. 1
Marius Statilius, ii. 42. 4, 43. 7
Marrucini, ii. 9. 5
Marsi, ii. 9. 5
Maso, C. Papirius, i. 25. 4
Massicus mons, ii. 14. 1
Massilia, i. 20. 8, 25. 1, 26. 3
Matho, M. Pomponius, ii. 33. 11, 35. 5, 55. 1
Mauri, i. 22. 3
Melita, i. 51. 1
Menige, ii. 31. 2
Merenda, P. Cornelius, ii. 35. 1
Messana, i. 49. 3
Metapontum, ii. 61. 12
Metellus, L. Caecilius, ii. 53. 5
Metilius, ii. 25. 3
Minucius, M., ii. 8. 6, 14. 4, 24. 1, 49. 16
Mutina, i. 25. 6

Neapolitani, ii. 32. 4
Nova Classis, ii. 20. 6
Numerius Decimius, ii. 24. 11
Numidae, i. 22. 3, 29. 1

Ocriculum, ii. 11. 5
Olcades, i. 5. 2
Onusa, i. 22. 5, ii. 20. 3
Oppimia, ii. 57. 2
Oretani, i. 10. 13
Ostia, ii. 11. 5, 37. 1, 57. 7
Oscilius, T., ii. 10. 10, 31. 6, 56. 6
INDEX NOMINUM ET LOCORUM.

Padus, i. 25. 13, 39. 3, 47. 2
Pæstum, ii. 36. 9
Pætus, Q. Ælius, ii. 35. 2
Papirius Cursor, ii. 14. 12
Paulus, L. Æmilius, i. 18. 1,
   ii. 35. 3, 38. 8, 45. 5, 49. 1
Peligni, ii. 9. 5, 18. 6
Pentri, ii. 61. 11
Philippus Mac., ii. 33. 3
Philo, L. Veturius, ii. 33. 11
Philus, P. Furius, ii. 53. 4
Pictor, Q. Fabius, ii. 57. 5
Pineus, ii. 35. 5
Pisæus, ii. 35. 5
Placentia, i. 25. 2, 39. 4, 56. 5, 57. 11
Pennis musons, i. 38. 9
Pomponius, M., ii. 7. 8
Prænestæ, ii. 1. 9, 12. 2
Prætutianus ager, ii. 9. 5
Pulcher, Ap. Claudius, ii. 42. 9
Pupius, C., ii. 33. 8
Pyrenæi, i. 23. 2, 26. 4
Pyrrhus, ii. 59. 8

Regulus, M. Atilius, ii. 25. 16, 31. 7
Rhodanus, i. 26. 4, 40. 2
Ruscino, i. 24. 3
Rutuli, i. 7. 2

Salinator, M. Livius, ii. 35. 3
Samnites, ii. 61. 11
Samnium, ii. 13. 1
Sardi, i. 16. 4
Sardinia, i. 1. 5, 40. 5
Scipio, P. Cornelius, i. 6. 3,
   17. 1, 26. 3, 32. 1, 46. 5,
   52. 7, ii. 22. 1
   ———— Africanus,
   i. 46. 8, ii. 53. 2
Scipio, Cn., i. 32. 3, 39. 10, 40. 3, 60. 1
Scribonius, L., ii. 61. 6
Seduni, i. 38. 9
Sempronius Blæsus, ii. 31. 5
————— Ti., ii. 57. 9
————— Ti., i. 6. 3, 17. 1, 49. 1, 50. 7, 52. 8, 59. 2
Serranus, C. Atilius, ii. 35. 2
Servilius, C., i. 25. 3
   ———— v. Geminus
Sicilia, i. 1. 5, 40. 5
Sidicinus, ii. 42. 11
Sinuessa, ii. 14. 4
Spoletium, ii. 9. 1
Stellatis campus, ii. 13. 6
Sura, P., ii. 31. 6
Tagus, i. 5. 8
Tamphilus, Q. Baebius, i. 6. 8, 18. 1
Tanetum, i. 25. 13
Tarentum, ii. 59. 7
Tarracina, ii. 15. 11
Tarraco, i. 61. 2, ii. 19. 5
Taurini, i. 38. 5
Teanum, ii. 57. 8
Telesia, ii. 13. 1
Terentius, Q., i. 63. 11
Tiberis, i. 30. 11, ii. 11. 5
Tibur, ii. 11. 3
Ticinus, i. 15. 4, 39. 10, 45. 1
Torquatus, T. Manlius, ii. 60.
   5
Trasumennus, ii. 4. 1
Trebia, i. 15. 4, 48. 4, 52. 3
Tricastini, i. 31. 9
Tricorii, i. 31. 9
Tuditanus, P. Sempronius, ii.
   50. 6, 60. 8
Turdetani, i. 6. 1, 12. 5

Umbria, ii. 8. 1
Uzentum, ii. 61. 12

Vaccæi, i. 5. 5
INDEX NOMINUM ET LOCORUM. 327

Varro, C. Terentius, ii. 25. 18, 34. 2, 41. 3, 45. 5
Vei, ii. 3. 10
Venusia, ii. 49. 14, 54. 1
Veragri, i. 38. 9
Vergilia, i. 35. 6
Vibonii, ager, i. 51. 4
Victumvix, i. 57. 9
Vocontii, i. 31. 9

Volcae, i. 26. 6
Volciani, i. 19. 8
Vulcani ins., i. 49. 2
Vulso, L. Manlius, ii. 35. 1
Vulturnus fl., ii. 14. 1
ventus, ii. 43. 10, 46. 9

Zacynthus, i. 7. 2
A CATALOGUE

OF

CLASSICAL WORKS

PUBLISHED BY

MACMILLAN AND CO., LONDON,

COMPRISING

1. ELEMENTARY CLASSICS, for Beginners.
2. THE CLASSICAL SERIES, for Colleges and Schools.
3. THE CLASSICAL LIBRARY, for Higher Students.
   (a) Texts; (b) Translations.
4. WORKS ON GRAMMAR, COMPOSITION, & PHILOLOGY.
5. WORKS ON ANTIQUITIES, ANCIENT HISTORY, & ANCIENT PHILOSOPHY.
6. GREEK TESTAMENT.
| CONTENTS. |
|-----------------|----------------|
| Elementary Classics | 3 |
| Classical Series | 7 |
| Classical Library | |
| (1) Texts; (2) Commentaries and Translations | 11 |
| Grammar, Composition, and Philology | 16 |
| Antiquities, Ancient History, and Philosophy | 21 |
| Greek Testament | 23 |
CLASSICS.

ELEMENTARY CLASSICS.

18mo, Eighteenpence each.

This Series falls into two Classes—

(1) First Reading Books for Beginners, provided not only with Introductions and Notes, but with Vocabularies, and in some cases with Exercises based upon the Text.

(2) Stepping-stones to the study of particular authors, intended for more advanced students who are beginning to read such authors as Terence, Plato, the Attic Dramatists, and the harder parts of Cicero, Horace, Virgil, and Thucydides.

These are provided with Introductions and Notes, but no Vocabulary. The Publishers have been led to provide the more strictly Elementary Books with Vocabularies by the representations of many teachers, who hold that beginners do not understand the use of a Dictionary, and of others who, in the case of middle-class schools where the cost of books is a serious consideration, advocate the Vocabulary system on grounds of economy. It is hoped that the two parts of the Series, fitting into one another, may together fulfil all the requirements of Elementary and Preparatory Schools, and the Lower Forms of Public Schools.
The following Elementary Books, with Introductions, Notes, and Vocabularies, and in some cases with Exercises, are either ready or in preparation:

Aeschylus.—PROMETHEUS VINCTUS. Edited by Rev. H. M. Stephenson, M.A.

Arrian.—SELECTIONS. Edited for the use of Schools, with Introduction, Notes, Vocabulary, and Exercises, by JOHN BOND, M.A., and A. S. WALPOLE, M.A.

THE GALLIC WAR. BOOK I. Edited by A. S. WALPOLE, M.A.

THE GALLIC WAR. BOOK IV. Edited by CLEMENT BRYANS, M.A., Assistant Master at Dulwich College.

THE GALLIC WAR. SCENES FROM BOOKS V. AND VI. Edited by C. COLBECK, M.A., Assistant-Master at Harrow; formerly Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

THE GALLIC WAR. BOOK VII. Edited by JOHN BOND, M.A., and A. S. WALPOLE, M.A.

Cicero.—DE SENECTUTE. Edited by E. S. SHUCKBURGH, M.A., late Fellow of Emmanuel College, Cambridge.

DE AMICITIA. By the same Editor.

Eutropius.—Adapted for the Use of Beginners. With Notes, Vocabulary, and Exercises, by WILLIAM WELCH, M.A., and C. G. DUFFIELD, M.A., Assistant-Masters at Surrey County School, Cranleigh.

Homer.—ILIAD. BOOK I. Edited by Rev. JOHN BOND, M.A., and A. S. WALPOLE, M.A.
Homer.—ILIAD. BOOK XVIII. THE ARMS OF ACHILLES. Edited by S. R. James, M.A., Assistant-Master at Eton College. ODYSSEY. BOOK I. Edited by Rev. John Bond, M.A. and A. S. Walpole, M.A.

Horace.—ODES. BOOKS I.—IV. Edited by T. E. Page, M.A., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge; Assistant-Master at the Charterhouse. Each 1s. 6d.

Livy.—BOOK I. Edited by H. M. Stephenson, M.A., late Head Master of St. Peter's School, York.

THE HANNIBALIAN WAR. Being part of the XXI. AND XXII. BOOKS OF LIVY, adapted for the use of beginners, by G. C. Macaulay, M.A., late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

THE SIEGE OF SYRACUSE. Being part of the XXIV. AND XXV. BOOKS OF LIVY, adapted for the use of beginners. With Notes, Vocabulary, and Exercises, by George Richards, M.A., and A. S. Walpole, M.A.

LEGENDS OF EARLY ROME. Adapted for the use of beginners. With Notes, Exercises, and Vocabulary, by Herbert Wilkinson, M.A. [In preparation.]

Lucian.—EXTRACTS FROM LUCIAN. Edited, with Notes, Exercises, and Vocabulary, by Rev. John Bond, M.A., and A. S. Walpole, M.A.

Nepos.—SELECTIONS ILLUSTRATIVE OF GREEK AND ROMAN HISTORY. Edited for the use of beginners with Notes, Vocabulary and Exercises, by G. S. Farnell, M.A.

Ovid.—SELECTIONS. Edited by E. S. Shuckburgh, M.A. late Fellow and Assistant-Tutor of Emmanuel College, Cambridge.

EASY SELECTIONS FROM OVID IN ELEGiac VERSE. Arranged for the use of Beginners with Notes, Vocabulary, and Exercises, by Herbert Wilkinson, M.A.

STORIES FROM THE METAMORPHOSES. Edited for the Use of Schools. With Notes, Exercises, and Vocabulary. By J. Bond, M.A., and A. S. Walpole, M.A.

Phædrus.—SELECT FABLES. Adapted for the Use of Beginners. With Notes, Exercises, and Vocabularies, by A. S. Walpole, M.A.

Virgil.—ÆNEID. BOOK I. Edited by A. S. Walpole, M.A. ÆNEID. BOOK IV. Edited by Rev. II. M. Stephenson, M.A.
ÆNEID. BOOK VI. Edited by T. E. Page, M.A.
ÆNEID. BOOK IX. Edited by Rev. H. M. Stephenson, M.A.
GEORGICS. BOOK I. Edited by C. Bryans, M.A.

SELECTIONS. Edited by E. S. Shuckburgh, M.A.

Xenophon.—ANABASIS. BOOK I. Edited by A. S. Walpole, M.A.
ANABASIS. BOOK I. Chaps. I.—VIII. for the use of Beginners, with Titles to the Sections, Notes, Vocabulary, and Exercises, by E. A. Wells, M.A., Assistant Master in Durham School.
ANABASIS. BOOK II. Edited by A. S. Walpole, M.A.
ANABASIS, SELECTIONS FROM BOOK IV. THE RETREAT OF THE TEN THOUSAND. Edited, with Notes, Vocabulary, and Exercises, by Rev. E. D. Stone, M.A., formerly Assistant-Master at Eton.
SELECTIONS FROM THE CYROPAEDIA. Edited, with Notes, Vocabulary, and Exercises, by A. H. Cooke, M.A., Fellow and Lecturer of King's College, Cambridge.

The following more advanced Books, with Introductions and Notes, but no Vocabulary, are either ready, or in preparation:

Euripides.—HECUBA. Edited by Rev. John Bond, M.A. and A. S. Walpole, M.A.

SELECT EPODES AND ARS POETICA. Edited by H. A. Dalton, M.A., formerly Senior Student of Christchurch; Assistant-Master in Winchester College.

Plato.—EUTHYPHYRRO AND MENEXENUS. Edited by C. E. Graves, M.A., Classical Lecturer and late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge.

Terence.—SCENES FROM THE ANDRIA. Edited by F. W. Cornish, M.A., Assistant-Master at Eton College.

The Greek Elegiac Poets.—FROM CALLINUS TO CALLIMACHUS. Selected and Edited by Rev. Herbert Kynaston, D.D., Principal of Cheltenham College, and formerly Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge.
Thucydides.—BOOK IV. Chs. I.—XIII. THE CAPTURE OF Sphactusia. Edited by C. E. Graves, M.A.

Virgil.—GEORGICS. BOOK II. Edited by Rev. J. H. Skrine, M.A., late Fellow of Merton College, Oxford; Warden of Trinity College, Glenalmond.

 Other Volumes to follow.

CLASSICAL SERIES
FOR COLLEGES AND SCHOOLS.

Fcaps. 8vo.

Being select portions of Greek and Latin authors, edited with Introductions and Notes, for the use of Middle and Upper forms of Schools, or of candidates for Public Examinations at the Universities and elsewhere.

Attic Orators.—Selections from ANTIPHON, ANDOCIDES, LYSIAS, ISOCRATES, AND ISAEUS. Edited, with Notes, by R. C. Jebb, Litt.D., LL.D., Professor of Greek in the University of Glasgow. 6s.

Æschines.—IN CTFESIPHONTEM. Edited by Rev. T. Gwatkin, M.A., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. [In the press.

Æschylus.—PERSÆ. Edited by A. O. Prickard, M.A. Fellow and Tutor of New College, Oxford. With Map. 3s. 6d.

SEVEN AGAINST THEBES. SCHOOL EDITION. Edited by A. W. Verrall, Litt.D., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and M. A. Bayfield, M.A., Assistant Master at Malvern College. 3s. 6d.

Andocides.—DE MYSTERIIS. Edited by W. J. Hickie, M.A., formerly Assistant-Master in Denstone College. 2s. 6d.

Catullus.—SELECT POEMS. Edited by F. P. Simpson, B.A., late Scholar of Balliol College, Oxford. New and Revised Edition. 5s. The Text of this Edition is carefully adapted to School use.

Cicero.—THE CATILINE ORATIONS. From the German of KARL HALM. Edited, with Additions, by A. S. Wilkins, M.A., I.L.D., Professor of Latin at the Owens College, Manchester, Examiner of Classics to the University of London. New Edition. 3s. 6d.

PRO LEGE MANILIA. Edited, after Halm, by Professor A. S. Wilkins, M.A., I.L.D. 2s. 6d.

THE SECOND PHILIPPIC ORATION. From the German of KARL HALM. Edited, with Corrections and Additions, by John E. B. Mayor, Professor of Latin in the University of Cambridge, and Fellow of St. John's College. New Edition, revised. 5s.
Cicero.—PRO ROSCIO AMERINO. Edited, after Halm, by E. H. Donkin, M.A., late Scholar of Lincoln College, Oxford; Assistant-Master at Sherborne School. 4s. 6d.

PRO P. SESTIO. Edited by Rev. H. A. Holden, M.A., LL.D., late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge; and late Classical Examiner to the University of London. 5s.

Demosthenes.—DE CORONA. Edited by B. Drake, M.A., late Fellow of King’s College, Cambridge. New and revised Edition. 4s. 6d.

ADVERSUS LEPTINEM. Edited by Rev. J. R. King, M.A. Fellow and Tutor of Oriel College, Oxford. 4s. 6d.

THE FIRST PHILIPPIC. Edited, after C. Rehdantz, by Rev. T. Gwatkin, M.A., late Fellow of St. John’s College, Cambridge. 2s. 6d.

THE FIRST PHILIPPIC. Edited, after C. Rehdantz, by Rev. T. Gwatkin, M.A., late Fellow of St. John’s College, Cambridge. 2s. 6d.

THE FIRST PHILIPPIC. Edited, after C. Rehdantz, by Rev. T. Gwatkin, M.A., late Fellow of St. John’s College, Cambridge. 2s. 6d.

ADVERSUS LEPTINEM. Edited by Rev. J. R. King, M.A. Fellow and Tutor of Oriel College, Oxford. 4s. 6d.

THE FIRST PHILIPPIC. Edited, after C. Rehdantz, by Rev. T. Gwatkin, M.A., late Fellow of St. John’s College, Cambridge. 2s. 6d.

IN MIDLAM. Edited by Prof. A. S. Wilkins, LL.D., and Herman Hager, Ph.D., of the Owens College, Manchester. [In preparation.

Euripides.—HIPPOLYTUS. Edited by J. P. Mahaffy, M.A., Fellow and Professor of Ancient History in Trinity College, Dublin, and J. B. Bury, Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin. 3s. 6d.

MEDEA. Edited by A. W. Verrall, Litt.D., Fellow and Lecturer of Trinity College, Cambridge. 3s. 6d.

IPHIGENIA IN TAURIS. Edited by E. B. England, M.A., Lecturer at the Owens College, Manchester. 4s. 6d.

Herodotus.—BOOKS V. AND VI. Edited by J. Strachan, M.A., Professor of Greek in the Owens College, Manchester. [In preparation.

BOOKS VII. AND VIII. Edited by Mrs. Montagu Butler. [In the press.

Hesiod.—THE WORKS AND DAYS. Edited by W. T. Lendrum, Assistant Master in Dulwich College. [In preparation.

ODYSSEY. BOOK IX. Edited by Prof. John E.B. Mayor. 2s. 6d.

ODYSSEY. BOOKS XXI.—XXIV. THE TRIUMPH OF ODYSSEUS. Edited by S. G. Hamilton, B.A., Fellow of Hertford College, Oxford. 3s. 6d.

Horace.—THE ODES. Edited by T. E. Page, M.A., formerly Fellow of St. John’s College, Cambridge; Assistant-Master at the Charterhouse. 6s. (BOOKS I., II., III., and IV. separately, 2s. each.)

THE SATIRES. Edited by Arthur Palmer, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin; Professor of Latin in the University of Dublin. 6s.

THE EPITLES AND ARS POETICA. Edited by A. S. Wilkins, M.A., LL.D., Professor of Latin in Owens College, Manchester; Examiner in Classics to the University of London. 6s.
Isaeos.—THE ORATIONS. Edited by William Ridgeway, M.A., Fellow of Caius College, Cambridge; and Professor of Greek in the University of Cork. [In preparation.]

Juvenal. THIRTEEN SATIRES. Edited, for the Use of Schools, by E. G. Hardy, M.A., late Fellow of Jesus College, Oxford. 5s.

The Text of this Edition is carefully adapted to School use.

SELECT SATIRES. Edited by Professor John E. B. Mayor, X. AND XI. 3s. 6d. XII.—XVI. 4s. 6d.

Livy.—BOOKS II. AND III. Edited by Rev. H. M. Stephenson, M.A. 5s.

BOOKS XXI. AND XXII. Edited by the Rev. W. W. Capes, M.A. Maps. 5s.

BOOKS XXIII. AND XXIV. Edited by G. C. Macaulay, M.A. With Maps. 5s.

THE LAST TWO KINGS OF MACEDON. EXTRACTS FROM THE FOURTH AND FIFTH DECADES OF LIVY. Selected and Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by F. H. Rawlins, M.A., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge; and Assistant-Master at Eton. With Maps. 3s. 6d.

THE SUBJUGATION OF ITALY. SELECTIONS FROM THE FIRST DECADE. Edited by G. E. Marinus, M.A., formerly Assistant Master at Eton. [In preparation.

Lucretius. BOOKS I.—III. Edited by J. H. Warrburton Lee, M.A., late Scholar of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, and Assistant-Master at Rossall. 4s. 6d.

Lysias.—SELECT ORATIONS. Edited by E. S. Shuckburgh, M.A., late Assistant-Master at Eton College, formerly Fellow and Assistant-Tutor of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. New Edition, revised. 6s.

Martial.—SELECT EPIGRAMS. Edited by Rev. H. M. Stephenson, M.A. New Edition, Revised and Enlarged. 6s. 6d.

Cvid.—FASTI. Edited by G. H. Hallam, M.A., Fellow of St. John’s College, Cambridge, and Assistant-Master at Harrow. With Maps. 5s.

HERIODUM EPISTULÆ XIII. Edited by E. S. Shuckburgh, M.A. 4s. 6d.

METAMORPHOSES. BOOKS I.—III. Edited by C. Simmons, M.A.

METAMORPHOSES. BOOKS XIII. AND XIV. Edited by C. Simmons, M.A. 4s. 6d.

Flato.—MENO. Edited by E. S. Thompson, M.A., Fellow of Christ’s College, Cambridge. [In preparation.

LACHES. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by M. T. Tatham, M.A., Balliol College, Oxford, formerly Assistant Master at Westminster School. 2s. 6d.
Plato.—THE REPUBLIC. BOOKS I.—V. Edited by T. H. Warren, M.A., President of Magdalen College, Oxford. 6s.

Plautus.—MILES GLORIOSUS. Edited by R. Y. Tyrrell, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, and Regius Professor of Greek in the University of Dublin. Second Edition Revised. 5s.

AMPHITRITON. Edited by Arthur Palmer, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College and Regius Professor of Latin in the University of Dublin. [In preparation.

CAPTIVI. Edited by A. Rhys Smith, late Junior Student of Christ Church, Oxford. [In preparation.

Pliny.—LETTERS. BOOK III. Edited by Professor John E. B. Mayor. With Life of Pliny by G. H. Rendall, M.A. 5s.

LETTERS. BOOKS I. and II. Edited by J. Cowan, B.A., Assistant-Master in the Grammar School, Manchester. [In preparation.

Polybius.—THE HISTORY OF THE ACHÆAN LEAGUE AS CONTAINED IN THE REMAINS OF POLYBIUS. Edited by W. W. Capes, M.A. 6s. 6d.

Sallust.—CATILINA AND JUGURTHA. Edited by C. Merivale, D.D., Dean of Ely. New Edition, carefully revised and enlarged, 4s. 6d. Or separately, 2s. 6d. each.

BELLUM CATULINAE. Edited by A. M. Cook, M.A., Assistant Master at St. Paul's School. 4s. 6d.

JUGURTHA. By the same Editor. [In preparation.

THE ANNALS. BOOK VI. By the same Editors. 2s. 6d.

THE HISTORIES. BOOKS I. AND II. Edited by A. D. Godley, M.A. 5s.

THE HISTORIES. BOOKS III.—V. By the same Editor. [In preparation.

Terence.—HAUTON TIMORUMENOS. Edited by E. S Shuckburgh, M.A. 3s. With Translation, 4s. 6d.

PHORMIO. Edited by Rev. John Bond, M.A., and A. S. Walpole, M.A. 4s. 6d.
Thucydides. BOOK IV. Edited by C. E. Graves, M.A., Classical Lecturer, and late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 5s.
BOOKS III. AND V. By the same Editor. To be published separately. [In preparation. (Book V. in the press.)
BOOKS I. AND II. Edited by C. Bryans, M.A. [In preparation.

Tibullus.—SELECT POEMS. Edited by Professor J. P. Postgate, M.A. [In preparation.

Virgil.—ÆNEID. BOOKS II. AND III. THE NARRATIVE OF ÆNEAS. Edited by E. W. Howson, M.A., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, and Assistant-Master at Harrow. 3s.

Xenophon.—HELENICA, BOOKS I. AND II. Edited by H. Hailstone, B.A., late Scholar of Peterhouse, Cambridge. With Map. 4s. 6d.

CYROPÆDIA. BOOKS VII. AND VIII.Edited by Alfred Goodwin, M.A., Professor of Greek in University College, London. 5s.

MEMORABILIA SOCRATIS. Edited by A. R. Cluer, B.A., Balliol College, Oxford. 6s.

THE ANABASIS. BOOKS I.—IV. Edited by Professors W. W. Goodwin and J. W. White. Adapted to Goodwin's Greek Grammar. With a Map. 5s.

OECOUMENICUS. By the same Editor. With Introduction, Explanatory Notes, Critical Appendix, and Lexicon. 6s.

* * * Other Volumes will follow.

CLASSICAL LIBRARY.

(1) Texts, Edited with Introductions and Notes, for the use of Advanced Students. (2) Commentaries and Translations.

Æschylus.—THE EUMENIDES. The Greek Text, with Introduction, English Notes, and Verse Translation. By Bernard Drake, M.A., late Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. 8vo. 5s.

AGAMEMNON. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by A. W. Verrall, Litt.D. 8vo. [In preparation.

AGAMEMNON, CHÆOEPHORÆ, AND EUMENIDES. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by A. O. Prickard, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of New College, Oxford. 8vo. [In preparation.
Æschylus.—THE "SEVEN AGAINST THEBES." Edited, with Introduction, Commentary, and Translation, by A. W. Verrall, Litt.D., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

THE SUPPLICES. A Revised Text, with Introduction, Critical Notes, Commentary and Translation. By T. G. Tucker, M.A., Fellow of St. John’s College, Cambridge, and Professor of Classical Philology in the University of Melbourne. 8vo. [In the press.

Antoninus, Marcus Aurelius.—BOOK IV. OF THE MEDITATIONS. The Text Revised, with Translation and Notes, by Hastings Crossley, M.A., Fellow of St. John’s College, Cambridge, and Professor of Classical Philology in the University of Melbourne. 8vo. 6s.

Aristotle.—THE METAPHYSICS. BOOK I. Translated by a Cambridge Graduate. 8vo. 5s. [Book II. in preparation.

THE POLITICS. Edited, after Susemihl, by R. D. Hicks, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo. [In the press.

THE RHETORIC. Translated, with an Analysis and Critical Notes, by the same. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

THE ETHICS. Translated, with an Analysis and Critical Notes, by the same. Crown 8vo. [In preparation.

AN INTRODUCTION TO ARISTOTLE’S RHETORIC. With Analysis, Notes, and Appendices. By E. M. Cope, Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo. 14s.

THE SOPHISTICI ELENCHI. With Translation and Notes by E. Poste, M.A., Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 8vo. 8s. 6d.

Aristophanes.—THE BIRDS. Translated into English Verse, with Introduction, Notes, and Appendices, by B. H. Kennedy, D.D., Regius Professor of Greek in the University of Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 6s. Help Notes to the same, for the use of Students, 1s. 6d.

Attic Orators.—FROM ANTIPHON TO ISAEOS. By R. C. Jebb, Litt.D., LL.D., Professor of Greek in the University of Glasgow. 2 vols. 8vo. 25s.

Babrius.—Edited, with Introductory Dissertations, Critical Notes, Commentary and Lexicon. By Rev. W. Gunion Rutherford, M.A., LL.D., Head-Master of Westminster. 8vo. 12s. 6d.

Cicero.—THE ACADEMICA. The Text revised and explained by J. S. Reid, M.L., Litt.D., Fellow of Caius College, Cambridge. 8vo. 15s.

THE ACADEMICS. Translated by J. S. Reid, M.L., Litt.D. 8vo. 5s. 6d.
CLASSICAL LIBRARY.

Cicero.—SELECT LETTERS. After the Edition of ALBERT WATSON, M.A. Translated by G. E. JEANS, M.A., Fellow of Hertford College, Oxford, and late Assistant-Master at Haileybury. Second Edition. Revised. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d. (See also Classical Series.)

Euripides.—MEDEA. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by A. W. VERRALL, Litt.D., Fellow and Lecturer of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

IPHIGENIA IN AULIS. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by E. B. ENGLAND, M.A., Lecturer in the Owens College, Manchester. 8vo. [In preparation.]

INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF EURIPIDES. By Professor J. P. MAHAFFY. Fcap. 8vo. 1s. 6d. (Classical Writers Series.)

Herodotus.—BOOKS I.—III. THE ANCIENT EMPIRES OF THE EAST. Edited, with Notes, Introductions, and Appendices, by A. H. SAYCE, Deputy-Professor of Comparative Philology, Oxford; Honorary LL.D., Dublin. Demy 8vo. 16s.

BOOKS IV.—IX. Edited by REGINALD W. MACAN, M.A., Lecturer in Ancient History at Brasenose College, Oxford. 8vo. [In preparation.

THE ODYSSEY. Done into English by S. H. BUTCHER, M.A., Professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh, and ANDREW LANG, M.A., late Fellow of Merton College, Oxford. Seventh and Cheaper Edition, revised and corrected. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF HOMER. By the Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE, M.P. 18mo. 1s. (Literature Primers.)

HOMERIC DICTIONARY. For Use in Schools and Colleges. Translated from the German of Dr. G. AUTENRIETH, with Additions and Corrections, by R. P. KEEP, Ph.D. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6s. (See also Classical Series.)

STUDIES, LITERARY AND HISTORICAL, IN THE ODES OF HORACE. By A. W. VERRALL, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 8s. 6d. (See also Classical Series.)
* * Vol. I. Fourth Edition, Revised and Enlarged. 10s. 6d.
* * Vol. II. Second Edition. 10s. 6d.
* * The new matter consists of an Introduction (pp. 1—53), Additional Notes (pp. 333—466) and Index (pp. 467—526). It is also issued separately, as a Supplement to the previous edition, at 5s.
THIRTEEN SATIRES. Translated into English after the Text of J. E. B. Mayor by Alexander Leeper, M.A., Warden of Trinity College, in the University of Melbourne. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

(See also Classical Series.)

Ktesias.—THE FRAGMENTS OF THE PERSIKA OF KTESIAS. Edited with Introduction and Notes by John Gilmore, M.A. 8vo. 8d. 6s.

Livy.—BOOKS I.—IV. Translated by Rev. H. M. Stephenson, M.A., late Head-Master of St. Peter’s School, York.

[In preparation.

BOOKS XXI.—XXV. Translated by Alfred John Church, M.A., of Lincoln College, Oxford, Professor of Latin, University College, London, and William Jackson Brodribb, M.A., late Fellow of St. John’s College, Cambridge. Cr. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF LIVY. By Rev. W. W. Capes, Reader in Ancient History at Oxford. Fcap. 8vo. 1s. 6d. (Classical Writers Series.)

(See also Classical Series.)

Martial.—BOOKS I. AND II. OF THE EPIGRAMS. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by Professor J. E. B. Mayor, M.A. 8vo.

(See also Classical Series.)

Pausanias.—DESCRIPTION OF GREECE. Translated by J. G. Frazer, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.

[In the press.

THE OLYMPIAN AND PYTHIAN ODES. Edited, with an Introductory Essay, Notes, and Indexes, by Basil Gildersleeve, Professor of Greek in the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Plato.—PHÆDO. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and Appendices, by R. D. Archer-Hind, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College. Cambridge. 8vo. 8s. 6d.
Plato.—TIMAEUS.—Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and a Translation, by the same Editor. 8vo. 16s.

PHI LEBO. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by W. D. Geddes, LL.D., Principal of the University of Aberdeen. Second Edition. Demy 8vo. 8s. 6d.

PHILEBUS. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by Henry Jackson, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo. [In preparation.

THE REPUBLIC.—Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by H. C. Goodhart, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo. [In preparation.

THE REPUBLIC OF PLATO. Translated into English, with an Analysis and Notes, by J. Ll. Davies, M.A., and D. J. Vaughan, M.A. 18mo. 4s. 6d.

EUTHYPHRO, APOLOGY, CRITO, AND PHÆDO. Translated by F. J. Church. 18mo. 4s. 6d.

PHÆDRUS, LYSIS, AND PROTAGORAS. A New and Literal Translation, mainly from the text of Bekker. By J. Wright, M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge. 18mo. 4s. 6d. (See also Classical Series.)

Plautus.—THE MOSTELLARIA OF PLAUTUS. With Notes, Prolegomena, and Excursus. By William Ramsay, M.A., formerly Professor of Humanity in the University of Glasgow. Edited by Professor George G. Ramsay, M.A., of the University of Glasgow. 8vo. 14s. (See also Classical Series.)

Pliny.—LETTERS TO TRAJAN. Edited, with Introductory Essays and Notes, by E. G. Hardy, M.A., late Fellow of Jesus College, Oxford. 8vo. [In the press.

Polybius.—THE HISTORIES. Translated, with Introduction and Notes, by E. S. Shuckburgh, M.A. 2 vols. Crown 8vo. [In the press.

Sallust.—CATILINE AND JUGURTHA. Translated, with Introductory Essays, by A. W. Pollard, B.A. Crown 8vo. 6s. THE CATILINE (separately). Crown 8vo. 3s. (See also Classical Series.)

Sophocles.—OEDIPUS THE KING. Translated from the Greek of Sophocles into English Verse by E. D. A. Morshead, M.A., late Fellow of New College, Oxford; Assistant Master at Winchester College. Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Tacitus.—THE ANNALS. Edited, with Introductions and Notes, by G. O. Holbrooke, M.A., Professor of Latin in Trinity College, Hartford, U.S.A. With Maps. 8vo. 16s.

THE HISTORY. Translated by A. J. Church, M.A., and W. J. Brodrribb, M.A. With Notes and a Map. Crown 8vo 6s.

INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF TACITUS. By A. J. Church, M.A. and W. J. Brodrribb, M.A. Fcap. 8vo. 1s. 6d. (Classical Writers Series.)

Theocritus, Bion, and Moschus. Rendered into English Prose, with Introductory Essay, by A. Lang, M.A. Crown 8vo. 6s.

THE ÆNEID. Translated by J. W. Mackail, M.A., Fellow of Balliol College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Xenophon.—COMPLETE WORKS. Translated, with Introduction and Essays, by H. G. Dakyns, M.A., Assistant-Master in Clifton College. Four Volumes. Crown 8vo. [In the press.

GRAMMAR, COMPOSITION, & PHILOLOGY.

Belcher.—SHORT EXERCISES IN LATIN PROSE COMPOSITION AND EXAMINATION PAPERS IN LATIN GRAMMAR, to which is prefixed a Chapter on Analysis of Sentences. By the Rev. H. Belcher, M.A., Rector of the High School, Dunedin, N.Z. New Edition. 18mo. 1s. 6d.

KEY TO THE ABOVE (for Teachers only). 3s. 6d.

SHORT EXERCISES IN LATIN PROSE COMPOSITION. Part II., On the Syntax of Sentences, with an Appendix, including EXERCISES IN LATIN IDIOMS, &c. 18mo. 2s.

KEY TO THE ABOVE (for Teachers only). 3s.

Blackie.—GREEK AND ENGLISH DIALOGUES FOR USE IN SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES. By John Stuart Blackie, Emeritus Professor of Greek in the University of Edinburgh. New Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.
CLASSICAL PUBLICATIONS.

KEY TO THE ABOVE (for Teachers only). New Edition. 4s. 6d.

GREEK PROSE EXERCISES based upon Thucydides. By the same Author. Extra fcap. 8vo. In preparation.

Cookson.—A LATIN SYNTAX. By CHRISTOPHER COOKSON, M.A., Assistant-Master at S. Paul's School. 8vo. [In preparation.

Eicke.—FIRST LESSONS IN LATIN. By K. M. EICKE, B.A., Assistant-Master in Oundle School. Globe 8vo. 2s.

England.—EXERCISES ON LATIN SYNTAX AND IDIOM. ARRANGED WITH REFERENCE TO ROBY'S SCHOOL LATIN GRAMMAR. By E. B. ENGLAND, M.A., Assistant Lecturer at the Owens College, Manchester. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

Key for Teachers only, 2s. 6d.

Goodwin.—Works by W. W. GOODWIN, LL.D., Professor of Greek in Harvard University, U.S.A.

"It is the best Greek Grammar of its size in the English language."—ATHENÆUM.

A GREEK GRAMMAR FOR SCHOOLS. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Hadley and Allen.—A GREEK GRAMMAR FOR SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES. By JAMES HADLEY, late Professor in Yale College. Revised and in part Rewritten by FREDERIC DE FOREST ALLEN, Professor in Harvard College. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Jackson.—FIRST STEPS TO GREEK PROSE COMPOSITION. By BLOMFIELD JACKSON, M.A., Assistant-Master in King's College School, London. New Edition, revised and enlarged. 18mo. 1s. 6d.

KEY TO FIRST STEPS (for Teachers only). 18mo. 3s. 6d.

SECOND STEPS TO GREEK PROSE COMPOSITION, with Miscellaneous Idioms, Aids to Accentuation, and Examination Papers in Greek Scholarship. 18mo. 2s. 6d.

KEY TO SECOND STEPS (for Teachers only). 18mo. 3s. 6d.

Key to the same (for Teachers only). Extra fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

Latin Rendering of the Exercises in Part II. (XXV.-C). Globe 8vo. 3s. 6d.

An Introduction to Latin Lyric Verse Composition. Globe 8vo. 3s.

Key for the Use of Teachers Only. Globe 8vo. 4s. 6d.

Mackie.—Parallel Passages for Translation into Greek and English. Carefully graduated for the use of Colleges and Schools. With Indexes. By Rev. Ellis C. Mackie, Classical Master at Heversham Grammar School. Globe 8vo. 4s. 6d.

Macmillan’s Greek Course.—Edited by Rev. W. Gunion Rutherford, M.A., LL.D., Head Master of Westminster.

III.—Second Greek Exercise Book.

V.—Manual of Greek Syntax.

VI.—Elementary Greek Composition.

In preparation.

* * * The Second Part is in preparation.

Macmillan’s Latin Reader.—A Latin Reader for the Lower Forms in Schools. By H. J. Hardy, M.A., Assistant Master in Winchester College. Globe 8vo. 2s. 6d.

Mayor (John E. B.)—FIRST GREEK READER. Edited after KARL HALM, with Corrections and large Additions by Professor JOHN E. B. MAYOR, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. New Edition, revised. Fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

Mayor (Joseph B.)—GREEK FOR BEGINNERS. By the Rev. J. B. Mayor, M.A., Professor of Classical Literature in King's College, London. Part I., with Vocabulary, 1s. 6d. Parts II. and III., with Vocabulary and Index, 3s. 6d. Complete in one Vol. fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

PROSE EXTRACTS, Arranged for Translation into English and Latin, with General and Special Prefaces on Style and Idiom. I. Oratorical. II. Historical. III. Philosophical and Miscellaneous. By the same Author. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

* * * Translations of Select Passages supplied by Author only.

Peile.—A PRIMER OF PHILOLOGY. By J. PEILE, Litt.D., Master of Christ's College, Cambridge. iSmo. 1s.

Postgate.—PASSAGES FOR TRANSLATION INTO LATIN PROSE. With Introduction and Notes, by J. P. POSTGATE, M.A. Crown 8vo. [In the press.

Potts (A. W.)—Works by ALexANDER W. Potts, M.A., LL.D., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge; Head Master of the Fettes College, Edinburgh.

HINTS TOWARDS LATIN PROSE COMPOSITION. New Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 3s.

PASSAGES FOR TRANSLATION INTO LATIN PROSE. Edited with Notes and References to the above. New Edition. Extra fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

LATIN VERSIONS OF PASSAGES FOR TRANSLATION INTO LATIN PROSE (for Teachers only). 2s. 6d.

Preston.—EXERCISES IN LATIN VERSE COMPOSITION. By Rev. G. PRESTON, M.A., Head Master of the King's School, Chester. (With Kev.) Globe 8vo. [In preparation.
Reid.—A GRAMMAR OF TACITUS. By J. S. Reid, M.L., Fellow of Caius College, Cambridge. [In preparation.]

A GRAMMAR OF VERGIL. By the same Author. [In preparation.]

* * Similar Grammars to other Classical Authors will probably follow.

Part II. Syntax, Prepositions, &c. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

"Marked by the clear and practised insight of a master in his art. A book that would do honour to any country."—ATHENÆUM.

SCHOOL LATIN GRAMMAR. By the same Author. Cr. 8vo. 5s.

Rust.—FIRST STEPS TO LATIN PROSE COMPOSITION. By the Rev. G. Rust, M.A., of Pembroke College, Oxford, Master of the Lower School, King's College, London. New Edition. 18mo. 1s. 6d.

KEY TO THE ABOVE. By W. M. Yates, Assistant-Master in the High School, Sale. 18mo. 3s. 6d.

REX LEX. A Short Digest of the principal Relations between Latin, Greek, and Anglo-Saxon Sounds. 8vo. [In preparation.

THE NEW PHRYNICHUS; being a Revised Text of the Ecloga of the Grammarian Phyrnichus. With Introduction and Commentary. 8vo. 18s. (See also Macmillan's Greek Course.)

Simpson.—LATIN PROSE AFTER THE BEST AUTHORS. By F. P. Simpson, B.A., late Scholar of Balliol College, Oxford. Part I. CAESARIAN PROSE. Extra fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

KEY TO THE ABOVE, for Teachers only. Extra fcap. 8vo. 5s.

Thring.—Works by the Rev. E. Thring, M.A., late Head-Master of Uppingham School.

A LATIN GRADUAL. A First Latin Construing Book for Beginners. New Edition, enlarged, with Coloured Sentence Maps. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

A MANUAL OF MOOD CONSTRUCTIONS. Fcap. 8vo. 1s. 6d.

Welch and Duffield.—LATIN ACCIDENCE AND EXERCISES ARRANGED FOR BEGINNERS. By William Welch, M.A., and C. G. Duffield, M.A., Assistant Masters at Cranleigh School. 18mo. 1s. 6d.

This book is intended as an introduction to Macmillan's Elementary Classics, and is the development of a plan which has been in use for some time and has been worked satisfactorily.
White.—FIRST LESSONS IN GREEK. Adapted to GOODWIN'S GREEK GRAMMAR, and designed as an introduction to the ANABASIS OF XENOPHON. By JOHN WILLIAMS WHITE, Ph.D., Assistant-Professor of Greek in Harvard University. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

Wilkins and Strachan.—ANALECTA: PASSAGES FOR TRANSLATION. Selected and Arranged by A. S. WILKINS, M.A., Professor of Latin, and J. STRACHAN, M.A., Professor of Greek, in the Owens College, Manchester. Crown 8vo. 5s.

Wright.—Works by J. WRIGHT, M.A., late Head Master of Sutton Coldfield School.

A HELP TO LATIN GRAMMAR; or, The Form and Use of Words in Latin, with Progressive Exercises. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

THE SEVEN KINGS OF ROME. An Easy Narrative, abridged from the First Book of Livy by the omission of Difficult Passages; being a First Latin Reading Book, with Grammatical Notes and Vocabulary. New and revised Edition. Fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

FIRST LATIN STEPS; OR, AN INTRODUCTION BY A SERIES OF EXAMPLES TO THE STUDY OF THE LATIN LANGUAGE. Crown 8vo. 3s.

ATTIC PRIMER. Arranged for the Use of Beginners. Extra fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

A COMPLETE LATIN COURSE, comprising Rules with Examples, Exercises, both Latin and English, on each Rule, and Vocabularies. Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d.

ANTIQIUITIES, ANCIENT HISTORY, AND PHILOSOPHY.

Arnold.—Works by W. T. ARNOLD, M.A.

A HANDBOOK OF LATIN EPIGRAPHY. [In preparation.

THE ROMAN SYSTEM OF PROVINCIAL ADMINISTRATION TO THE ACCESSION OF CONSTANTINE THE GREAT. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Arnold (T.)—THE SECOND PUNIC WAR. Being Chapters on THE HISTORY OF ROME. By the late THOMAS ARNOLD, D.D., formerly Head Master of Rugby School, and Regius Professor of Modern History in the University of Oxford. Edited, with Notes, by W. T. ARNOLD, M.A. With 8 Maps. Crown 8vo. 8s. 6d.

Beesly.—STORIES FROM THE HISTORY OF ROME. By Mrs. BEESLY. Fcap. 8vo. 2s. 6d.

Burn.—ROMAN LITERATURE IN RELATION TO ROMAN ART. By Rev. ROBERT BURN, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. With numerous Illustrations. Extra Crown 8vo. 14s.

Classical Writers.—Edited by John Richard Green, M.A., LL.D. Fcap. 8vo. 1s. 6d. each.

EURIPIDES. By Professor Mahaffy.
MILTON. By the Rev. Stopford A. Brooke, M.A.
LIVY. By the Rev. W. W. Capes, M.A.
VIRGIL. By Professor Nettleship, M.A.
SOPHOCLES. By Professor L. Campbell, M.A.
DEMOSTHENES. By Professor S. H. Butcher, M.A.
TACITUS. By Professor A. J. Church, M.A., and W. J. Brodribb, M.A.

Freeman.—Works by Edward A. Freeman, D.C.L., LL.D., Hon. Fellow of Trinity College, Oxford, Regius Professor of Modern History in the University of Oxford.

HISTORY OF ROME. (Historical Course for Schools.) 18mo. [In preparation.

A SCHOOL HISTORY OF ROME. Crown 8vo. [In preparation.

HISTORICAL ESSAYS. Second Series. [Greek and Roman History.] 8vo. 1os. 6d.

Fyffe.—A SCHOOL HISTORY OF GREECE. By C. A. Fyffe, M.A. Crown 8vo. [In preparation.

Gardner.—SAMOS AND SAMIAN COINS. An Essay. By Percy Gardner, M.A., Litt.D., Professor of Archaeology in the University of Oxford. With Illustrations. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Geddes.—THE PROBLEM OF THE HOMERIC POEMS. By W. D. Geddes, Principal of the University of Aberdeen. 8vo. 14s.

Gladstone.—Works by the Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, M.P.

THE TIME AND PLACE OF HOMER. Crown 8vo. 6s. 6d.

A PRIMER OF HOMER. 18mo. 1s.

Gow.—A COMPANION TO SCHOOL CLASSICS. By James Gow, Litt.D., Master of the High School, Nottingham; late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6s.

Harrison and Verrall.—CULTS AND MONUMENTS OF ANCIENT ATHENS. By Miss J. E. Harrison and Mrs. A. W. Verrall. Illustrated. Crown 8vo. [In the press.

Jebb.—Works by R. C. Jebb, Litt.D., LL.D., Professor of Greek in the University of Glasgow.

THE ATTIC ORATORS FROM ANTIPHON TO ISAEOS. 2 vols. 8vo. 25s.

A PRIMER OF GREEK LITERATURE. 18mo. 1s.

(See also Classical Series.)

Kiepert.—MANUAL OF ANCIENT GEOGRAPHY, Translated from the German of Dr. Heinrich Kiepert. Crown 8vo. 5s.
Mahaffy.—Works by J. P. Mahaffy, M.A., D.D., Fellow and Professor of Ancient History in Trinity College, Dublin, and Hon. Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford.

Greek Life and Thought; from the Age of Alexander to the Roman Conquest. Crown 8vo. 12s. 6d.

A Primer of Greek Antiquities. With Illustrations. 18mo. 1s.

Euripides. 18mo. 1s. 6d. (Classical Writers Series.)

Mayor (J. E. B.)—Bibliographical Clue to Latin Literature. Edited after Hübner, with large Additions by Professor John E. B. Mayor. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

Newton.—Essays in Art and Archaeology. By Sir Charles Newton, K.C.B., D.C.L., Professor of Archaeology in University College, London, and formerly Keeper of Greek and Roman Antiquities at the British Museum. Svo. 12s. 6d.

Sayce.—The Ancient Empires of the East. By A. H. Sayce, Deputy-Professor of Comparative Philosophy, Oxford, Hon. LL.D. Dublin. Crown Svo. 6s.

Stewart.—The Tale of Troy. Done into English by Aubrey Stewart, M.A., late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Globe 8vo. 3s. 6d.

Wilkins.—A Primer of Roman Antiquities. By Professor Wilkins, M.A., LL.D. Illust-rated. 18mo. 1s.

A Primer of Latin Literature. By the same Author. [In preparation.]

Greek Testament.

Greek Testament for Schools.—The Greek Testament. School Edition of the Text. Edited by Canon Westcott and Dr. Hort. 12mo. cloth. 4s. 6d. 18mo. roan, red edges. 5s. 6d.
ST. MATTHEW'S GOSPEL.—Being the Greek Text of Drs. Westcott and Hort. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by Rev. J. Bond, M.A. Fcap. 8vo.

ST. MARK'S GOSPEL.—Being the Greek Text of Drs. Westcott and Hort. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by Rev. J. O. F. Murray, M.A.

ST. LUKE'S GOSPEL.—Being the Greek Text of Drs. Westcott and Hort. Edited by T. E. Page, M.A.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.—Being the Greek Text as revised by Drs. Westcott and Hort. With Explanatory Notes by T. E. Page, M.A., Assistant-Master at the Charterhouse. Fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

Greek Testament, School Readings in the.—Being the Outline of the Life of Our Lord, as given by St. Mark. With Additions from the Text of the other Evangelists. Arranged and Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and Vocabulary, by the Rev. A. Calvert, M.A., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. Fcap. 8vo. 4s. 6d.

St. John's Epistles.—The Greek Text, with Notes and Essays, by Canon Westcott. 12s. 6d.

St. Paul's Epistles.—Greek Text, with Introduction and Notes.

THE EPISTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS. By the same Editor. Ninth Edition. 8vo. 12s.

THE EPISTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS AND TO PHILEMON. By the same Editor. Eighth Edition, 8vo. 12s.

THE EPISTLES TO THE PHILIPPIANS, with Translation, Paraphrase, and Notes, for English Readers. By the same Editor. Crown 8vo. 5s.

THE EPISTLES TO THE EPHESIANS, THE COLOSSIANS, AND PHILEMON. With Introductions and Notes by the Rev. J. Llewelyn Davies, M.A. Second Edition, revised. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

THE ENGLISH TEXT, WITH COMMENTARY. By the same Editor. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.